

Tuesday 5-8-44

Florence, dearest:

My baby arrived in Chicago this morning at 10.30 A.M. but, darling, my heart and mind was left with you and our precious Jimmy. It was wonderful of you and the folks to act so brave in bidding good-bye, and I know if I had turned around to look at you all I would have broken down. Be assured it is going to take a long time to overcome that nostalgic feeling of the wonderful family and home I left behind, but believe you me, I am a mighty proud sweetheart and father, and if nothing else I have something to come back to, and float over. Don't worry your pretty little head, my sweetheart, you will either see me here within a month, or I'll be transferred closer to you.

Hope you had no difficulties leaving home in the rain, and also no incidents. Home no concern over the other incident, but be sure to report it to the insurance company, and also put on paper for your own information the date, time, place, and any other facts you recall concerning the incident. If anything develops as a result of the bump you will be prepared to answer correctly, in case you.

Had a sugar-cured, baked Virginian ham dinner on the train, but I sure missed that steak dinner with you and the folks. Hereafter there will be other occasions, and we'll really enjoy every moment of them. We had a late breakfast in Chicago, and are now waiting for the 10 o'clock train to St. Paul. Will write you again when I reach St. Paul, and will get back to my daily letter beginning Tuesday.

They will take care of our Jim, and above all, don't worry - and don't speak to your dear mother.

With all my resuscitated love,
you find thinking of you - as ever
G. G.
