Dearest George,

Give and I love you very much and are waiting so patiently for the war's end. Just think how wonderful our days and nights will be after you return to us. The days are going very quickly for the past few months and these country interludes are breaking up the length of the war for baby and me. Just don't worry about us, darling and all will be well. Jimmie is growing into a lovely child, has the best qualities and is now trying to show off for his cousin Jane. That's also a step and he'll pass through it with flying colors. Both children had a nice day, all well and both talk nicely.

It's after supper now and we've had some company from down the road. We're invited to spend New Year with a party but have already declined. It's quite cold out and is now 10° above zero. All my love as always.
