Sunday 11 P.M.

Thirty four years seems like a long period of time, my precious one, but my parents assure me, on this their 34th wedding anniversary, that the years really passed all too quickly. It seems, darling, that one must take advantage of life on all opportunities. We, who love each other, so dearly must overlook no occasion to demonstrate our feelings to each other. We, must remember that it will be too late to place large bouquets on the grave; we must always live our lives for each other, to create and have happiness. This is a habit we will both enjoy to the fullest degree in development. Yes, my loved one, the years must not be permitted to flit away, we must live them out - Then, as we look back into the past, it will he with a feeling of deep satisfaction that we gave unto each other, and unto the world - Ah, my adorable sweetheart, how lucky I feel as I ponder this - to think I have and love you. —

After a drive out to the various cemeteries, (for a second look - before concluding the deal) we picked up Sam, Kay and Anita - went to Chincoteague and had an elegant family dinner - My father and mother, Sam, Kay & Anita had never gone than one of them before - and did they enjoy it - Kay was overwhelmed with the lobster course - Your presence was necessary to perfectly complete an elegant time - after dropping Bob at the bus depot, we visited some friend of my mother's at 76th St - and then home -

Sam and Kay are still undecided about accompanying me to Saratoga, as they have received no answer from her uncle - Will know later in the week -

I can hardly wait for Friday morning to arrive, but it will and then my pretty lady, you finally have me in your arms, as ever
