Wednesday

Dear George,

Although we are quite slow, time has passed rather quickly. Possibly it is the realization that I am coming home this week end that makes the time seem so picayune by comparison.

We are enjoying some beautiful weather ever since our return..It gets to look like spring more and more. The air here is as good as any we have in the summer resorts in up state N.Y., and it is very possible that I may not suffer with my eyes this summer; at least I hope not.

Somehow I know that I shall not miss Aaron as much as I thought I would. I am by no means what you would call a prude; but I definitely am not the social minded or female minded fiend that Aaron is. I am not trying to say anything against Aaron; but he definitely is not my type. I don't mind a piece every now and then; but I won't go way out of my way to hunt for it. It is easy to say that I don't have to do every thing he does; but we are living together and more or less we do everything else together. It isn't easy for me to refuse him when he asks me to go out with him. Many times I do; but I always feel like a horse's ass when this happens.

I am going through quite a metamorphosis out here. I think that I am really getting to know myself a little better than I have ever known myself before. It is all right to be a good guy; but I'm beginning to realize that one doesn't have to spite one's self to be a so called good guy.

I make up my mind to stay home and go to sleep early; but then always screw myself up, by going out, or doing some other darn thing I don't feel like doing. I suppose it must be my youth that gets the better of me. At least I realize what a nut I am, and I think that it won't take long for me to complete the metamorphosis.

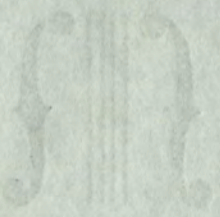

Somehow all this going out business has ceased to be the thrill it once was. I am not trying to say that I don't like to go out. I just don't see it as I once did. It just doesn't seem all important to me anymore.

Yes, I think that I shall rather be a little happier after Aaron has left.

I sent away for my learner's permit yesterday, and expect it sometime next week. I hope that I can learn to drive in time to have it amount to some use.

I will be home this week; but I don't suppose that I will get to see you.

*As Ever
Bob*
