

Somewhere in England.

Florence, sweetheart,

Parts of this country side are quite romantic in appearance and I am certain were we making this trip together it would be more than thrilling. Under the circumstances I guess we will have to think of it more in terms of a long business trip. Rest assured it is an experience accompanied by surprise, mystery and suspense, but we will all have to await my return home before I will be able to tell you about the high spots. Through it all, darling, my thoughts are always at home with you and Jimmy. I know you are lonesome and anxious about me, but rest assured all is well with me and I feel fine and dandy. It is a new and strange feeling to be not only so far from my loved ones but to be in a foreign country. Fortunately the people are quite like those we see at home but there are many little differences.

They don't dress well at all, but this can be easily accounted for by the fact that they have been in this war for over five years. Watching what few cars still run around drive on the left side of the road is unique. Everyone rides a bicycle and the black outs at night closely resemble New York during a black out drill, except that here its the usual thing. Apparently the populace is accustomed to it as there are plenty of people about town at night. Homes are quite inviting in appearance, and I look forward to visiting a home before this is over. However I suppose military necessity will preclude that desire for the time being. Have been too busy to visit the town but have driven thru the town several times.

I have not written anyone except you and the folks since our arrival in England, so please explain to everyone that it may take a little while before I catch up with them. I'm sure they will understand under the circumstances. Hope you are able to manage all right, and that all our affairs are in good order. I will try to write Mr. Kessler to-morrow. Let me know how you made out with Dr. Daichman, and also whether or not you receive the 10 dollar bonds I subscribe to monthly.

Stay well, sweetheart, kiss Jimmy for me, and have him kiss my sweetheart for his G I daddy. Write often and forward your mail via air mail (6¢). My very best to everyone and convey my kindest to all our friends. With a kiss in mind, and all the love in my heart you find me

As ever,

George
