Information System to Begin Full Scale Operation

By MARTY GINGRAS

KSC's new Information Retrieval System will be in full swing by the end of this week, Lou Dumont, the system's supervisor, said Monday. The system will be available for use in the dormitories and classrooms as well as the library and will have a larger selection of programs for students to choose from.

The IRS consists of a central headquarters in the library and 60 monitors scattered about the campus. From these monitors in dormitories, classrooms, and the library, students are able to watch or listen to programs transmitted on tape from the control room.

Dumont reported that the new media has been used successfully in the library for the past three weeks. "Later this week we hope the faculty will start using the monitors in the classrooms," he said.

According to Dumont, the choice of programs in the system will come from information supplied by the faculty and students. Faculty members were sent I.R.S. request cards earlier in the week in order to request special programs for their individual classes. Dumont reported that, from these requests, each week's programs will be made up. "Starting last Monday," Dumont said, "we're sending out to the faculty lists of all the music and spoken word records that have been prepared."

Each week a list of the programs will be published for the students' convenience. Regularly the system will carry such programs as music by Beethoven, Vivaldi, Wagner and works by Shakespere, Frost, and Dickinson. The system will be able to carry anything the faculty and students want, though, Dumont said.

At present video material is somewhat limited. On hand are films of psychologist B.F. Skinner and a film of Sen. Edmund Muskie (D-Me.) made at KSC. The system is also connected with cable TV.

Dumont stressed that the system is still on an experimental basis. He said that the college has not completely accepted it as of yet, but he reported that from what he has seen, the college community is satisfied with the system.

The system does have a few minor problems, though, Dumont explained. Some students forget to press the asterisk button when they are done with their program thus leaving the monitor on.

GREAT SPORTS FAILURE TO LECTURE THURSDAY

George Plimpton, the author-socialite who has become an international success by being a failure in a world of professionals, will speak at Keene State College Thursday night (Dec. 2).

Plimpton's lecture will be held in the Brown Room of the Young Student Union on campus, beginning at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the Main St. entrance of the Student Union building. KSC students will be admitted free.

Plimpton is a graduate of Harvard College and Cambridge University and editor of the literary quarterly "The Paris Review." But he has made his popular fame through competing—and failing—as an amateur in the best of professional company. He has played quarterback for the pro football Detroit Lions, pitched against a major league baseball all-star team, boxed with Archie Moore, played on the pro golf tour, performed in the percussion section of the New York Philharmonic under the direction of Leonard Bernstein, swam against four-time Olympic gold medalist Don Schollander, been a circus acrobat, competed in bridge against grand master Oswald Jacoby and told jokes in a Las Vegas night club.

He now has plans for such optimistic efforts as a game of chess with world champion Bobby Fischer and playing with a National Hockey League team.

But there is a definite serious philosophy behind his constant failures. "There has been a lot of almanac-type sports writing with emphasis on records and statistics," he says. "Sportswriters have never given the reader a sense of what it's like to be part of a team, of the mystique, ritual, frights and fears of the game."

Termed "the consummate failure" by Time magazine, Plimpton nevertheless has sold more than two million copies of his best known books about sports: "The Paper Lion," "Out of My League," and "The Bogey Man."

Plimpton's appearance will be a part of the college's concert and lecture series and is being sponsored by the KSC Alumni Association. KSC Alumni will be admitted free.

SENATES TO RECONSIDER MEMBERSHIP

Both the College and the Student Senates are currently reviewing their representational structure and are considering changes which would radically change the basis of membership on both bodies.

The Ad Hoc Committee on College Senate Representation which was appointed by KSC President Leo F. Redfern in October has passed proposals ic classes instead. There would be five representatives from each of the sophomore, junior and senior classes. There would also be one member elected by the student senate in addition to the student senate president who would sit on the senate ex-officio. This would give a total of 17 students. There are currently 16 junior senators on the College Senate.

The administration would lose one representative. Their present quota of five ex-officio members (the president, the dean of the college, the dean of administration, the dean of students and the college librarian) would be reduced to four: the president (ex-officio), one administrator elected by the administration, one administrator elected by the faculty and one elected by the students.

Faculty representation which is currently based on 12 members elected from the three upper academic ranks and one elected from each of the 14 academic departments (regardless of rank) would not be changed.

Student trustee Dave Gagne, who was a member of the committee stressed that the new structure would help yield a "tremendous turnout" for student elections to the College Senate. "Almost all student elections could be held on the same day and on the same ballot," Gagne said.

The Student Senate also considered a change in their membership basis at their regular meeting Monday. Dave Gagne, who is a representative of the class of '73, suggested that the senate elect representatives from the academic classes only, effective next year. Representatives are currently elected from each recognized student organization.

Gagne explained that this would cut down on the vested interests of each organization and would involve students who have more time to devote to the senate.

"This representative structure would be more equitable with respect to the student body," commented Senate President Dave Kyle. Presently each organization has one representative, no matter how large or small it is.

Fred Jenne, representative of the Young Democrats, objected. He pointed out that students would not know the people they would be voting for. The active student leaders might not get on the senate because the students would be voting for meaningless names, he said. "It is a case of realism versus idealism."

Jenne went on to say that organizawhich would affect student and administrative membership on the college's chief governing body. Thomas M. Stauffer, who is assistant to the dean of the college and is chairman of the committee, is currently preparing a report for the College Senate.

The committee will propose that students no longer be elected from the academic departments, but from the academ-

Gallery Features Area Artists

Paintings and sculpture by two artists with strong New England and Vermont backgrounds comprise the current exhibition at the Thorne Art Gallery of Keene State College.

The two-man show will comprise a cross section of the work of these distinguished artists who have made the nearby region their home for many years.

Diana Heiskell was born in France of American parents, but made the transition from the Mediterranean to New England in the 1940s. She has lived in Marlboro, Vt. since then and her work shows both the classic scenes of the Latin nations and the romantic landscapes of Vermont and Cape Cod.

Largely self-taught, she has had one-man shows at the British American Art Center in New York and various galleries throughout New England.

Frances Shannahan, born in Maryland, has lived most of her life in Vermont and Europe. She is completely self-taught and works in the wood and stone of Vermont: soapstone found in abandoned quarries, marble near Rutland and quartz on stone walls. She works with hammer and chisel and uses no power tool except a 1/4 inch drill for some of the sanding and polishing.

Viewing hours at the gallery, located on Appian Way on the KSC campus, are 1 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 3 to 5 p.m. on Sunday. There is no admission charge to the gallery, which was donated to the college by Mrs. Beatrice Sagendorph of Dublin in 1965. The exhibition will continue until Dec. 17.

NOTES ON VOTES

America's youth have been the most energetic, and the loudest to voice their grievances of any group of people in America's recent history. They, as a group, are also probably the most knowledgeable of the intricacies of the American political system. It is shocking to note that preliminary polls and registration counts show that attempts to stop registration in college towns and a general youth apathy may destroy the most powerful weapon that youth now has.

ON REGISTERING

Voter registration drives have for the most part failed to register a large amount of potential voters. The Gallup organization estimates that only 65 per cent of the 25 million youth eligible will in fact bother to register. This is 10 per cent lower than the general population's average!

Registration drives have been further hampered by attempts to disenfranchise the college student voters by requiring that they register and vote in their home towns. This ruling may affect some 25 thousand students with New Hampshire, even the most die-hard of whom would balk before he had to make a 50, 100, or 200 mile trip to register in the middle of a school week. Absentee balloting is not only a hindrance, it is not needed.

N.H. Attorney General Warren Rudman's main concern is that "students can move into a community for just four years and turn it upside down."

We wonder just what constitutes the permanent part of the community which Attorney General Rudman seeks to protect. Can a student be considered a permanent part of his parents' community if he knows he will never live there again? Is a person who comes to work in a community for a year or so a permanent part of that community? No other segment of the voting populace is required to declare his intent to live in a town for a certain length of time. Students should be treated likewise.

Massachusetts Attorney General Robert Quinn said, "What type of physical facility constitutes a legal domicile, whether it be a private home or a dormitory, is not a factor in determining eligibility to vote." What is a factor is the six month residency requirement. What is grossly unfair is the obvious double standard now being employed by the N.H. Attorney General.

ON VOTING

The registration battle is only a preliminary one however. The greater question is: Will the young voters actually vote? The potential power of the youth vote lies within its numbers—25 million, or about 20 per cent of all eligible voters. There are 95 thousand new voters in New Hampshire alone, (18.6 per cent of the total); but will they vote?

The Gallup organization again yields disturbing results. On the basis of the Oct., 1971, level of interest, only 42 per cent, (of 10 million) of the newly enfranchised youth will actually vote.

Newsweek has computed that on the basis of estimates of 60 per cent voting Democratic, 30 per cent Republican, and 10 per cent Wallace that if this 42 per cent of youth had voted in 1968, Nixon would still

Candidates, Supporters Eye State's Primaries

By RON BOISVERT

Every four years New Hampshire becomes one of the chief concerns of political speculators as it hosts the nation's earliest presidential primary. This year is no exception. Both candidates and outside student supporters have already begun flocking to the state to do the preliminary

The Muskie people are cautious to underestimate the power of Senator Henry Jackson (Wash.) and Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles, two moderate democrats who have just recently announced their candidacies. Both have made only brief trips to the state so far, but may both draw considerable backing from the large conservative population within the state. Early indications have also shown that N.H. may be in store for another invasion similar to the "kiddie corps" of Senator Eugene McCarthy.

Groups of supporters for McCloskey and McGovern from Harvard and Radcliffe have already started making weekend political excursions to the state. Both groups claim to have signed up approximately 30 volunteers to work in the N.H. primary.

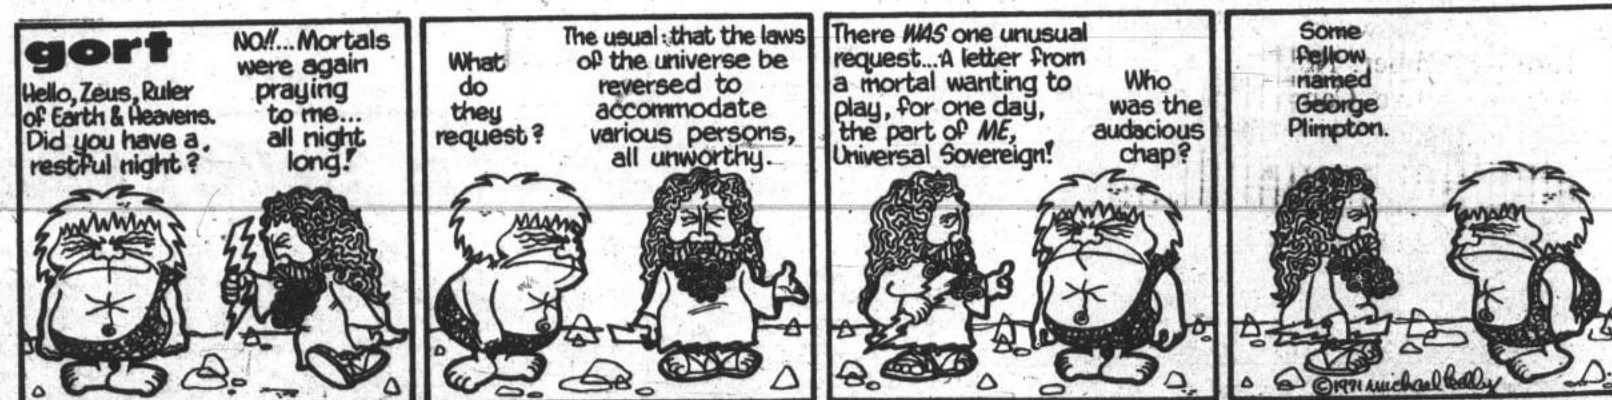

Interest in the primaries by out of state students has begun far earlier for this election than for the 1968 election, according to Susan P. Underwood, a Radcliffe veteran of the '68 McCarthy campaign. "In 1968, we didn't begin recruiting in earnest until the end of January," she said. At its peak, about 300 students from Harvard and Radcliffe alone were working for McCarthy in New Hampshire.

Political activism at KSC seems to be heading for a level far below this. Let's hope the new apathy at KSC wears itself off by the time spring rolls around.

DR. PASS-FAIL

OR

HOW I STOPPED WORRYING AND LEARNED TO LOVE COLLEGE

By "X"

For years true confessions magazine have been presenting the American public with behind the scene exposés. For the first time, the Monadnock dares to present the true story of a KSC student caught in the fight for survival.

Now that I'm finally graduating from this institute of higher learning (after 5 1/2 years of ulcers and heartache), I can release to the world the secrets of my existence. Some people refer to college as a time for growing up; a sort of trial and error period. I prefer to use the term "survival of the fittest".

Take my last semester for example. Most students don't realize that the semester is almost over until they see the exam schedule posted on bulletin boards throughout the campus. I remember that day well, and I shudder every time I think of it.

It was a cold, snowy day; one of the last in November. I had just awoken from a two week hibernation and decided to find out if the college was still intact. I passed the Student Union bulletin board 3 times before I noticed the exam schedule. I then started to panic. It was time to throw Plan A into operation.

Plan A was a fake-out operation to let my professors know I hadn't dropped out of their classes. It was especially important seeing as I had been to only one class in each course all semester. For a whole week I went to every class and tried talking as much as possible. This procedure was mostly unsuccessful because, 1) my profs wouldn't recognize me because they didn't know my name and, 2) every time I got a chance to say something it was obvious that I didn't know what I was talking about.

Plan B was a little less obvious. In one night I read 13 Monarch notes and wrote 18 papers. After the first seven papers they started to all sound alike, so I shuffled them up and picked them at random for each course. I finally made five copies of the best paper to hand in to my five professors.

Under the cover of night I crept through the corridors of the different departments dropping papers here and there on desks, chairs and floors, I even hid a few away in the bottoms of drawers hoping to elude my profs into thinking they had been misplaced all semester. I was starting to feel a sense of accomplishment.

"I ALWAYS KEEP MY EXAMS IN THIS BANK VAULT! IT'S THE ONLY WAY I CAN KEEP MY STUDENTS FROM GETTING THEM!"

It was now time for Plan C. Because this plan was a great deal more risky than the others, it took more organization and a good sense of timing. Again I crept through the corridors to the offices of my professors, this time in the hopes that they would be there. It was time to do a little explaining. My first prof listened carefully as I told him how it took me half a semester to get out of the draft, how I managed to clear up two pregnancies, how bad the doctors said my ulcers were, how I fought six cases of African sleeping sickness, how many jobs I had to take on to stay in school, how I had almost starved when a plague of locusts devoured my entire garden. An hour later I was on my way to tell my other profs the same story.

That was the most successful deception of my long college career. It was so successful that I didn't even have to use Plan D. I really pity those students who spend all their time wisely and constructively and get shot down because they're missing a paper or two. Or those who get all high grades, but end up with C's because they flunked one exam all semester. As I said, survival of the fittest.

Well, I have to go now. The unemployment office opens at eight, and I want to be the first in line.

have been elected! A poor youth turnout next November will surely be to Nixon's advantage.

Many of the so-called knowledgeable youth have decided to wait until next November before they become interested in politics. These youth may not have realized that all the decisions will be made long before November. Now is the time to become active. Candidates traditionally have had to do well in New Hampshire's March primary. If students pass up this opportunity to exercise their political power then they are surely naive.

James Reston said recently in the New York times, "The battleground is now, and for the next few months will be, on the problem of organization, registration, and campaign financial reform, and on this ground the new rising enfranchised generation has immense potential power. But, or so it seems here, they have mis-judged the question and the time."

HOOP TEAM HAS TALENT

By PETE HANRAHAN

Pete is a member of the KSC Cross Country Team and president of Phi Mu Delta. He will be doing a weekly column on sports at KSC.

November 17 saw Coach Glenn Theulen unveil his 1971-72 basketball team in a scrimmage against Nathaniel Hawthorne College. This is Theulen's fourth team at KSC and it should be his best yet.

The basketball Owls are a hustling group of individuals with talent. They lack the size of the 69-70 team with its 6-6 front line of Terry, Orne and Sala. They also lack a shooter and ball handler who can compare with Joe Whiten. But this is a balanced, well-conditioned ball team nevertheless.

Tonight will see the Owls open their season against Farmington at Spaulding.

some rejuvenated old ones. Watch Jose DeCausy; he may just be the best basketball player to ever don a KSC uniform.

Our NAIA New England champion soccer Owls are in Carolina today competing in the nationals. Injuries to key performers Steve Parker and Mark McEvoy could not have come at a worse time. Facing national-level competition would have been tough enough for the Owls at full strength.

Basketball Season Opens

By JOE PAPPO

The KSC basketball team will open its 1971-72 season on Wednesday against Farmington State College. Game time is 8:00 at Spaulding Gym.

The Owls will definitely feel the loss of Dave Terry and Joe Whiten, but hope to make amends for this with more depth and more speed which the Owls lacked last year.

This year the Owls will lack rebounding strength. According to Owl Coach Glenn Theulen, "Rebounding is a question mark; we have people who can do it but consistency is what I don't know about."

In the past, the Owls have depended on strong rebounding and sharp shooting. This year Keene will depend on speed characterized by a fast break offense, and a pressing defense.

Captain Kevin O'Leary is one of the five returning lettermen. He averaged 10.8 points a game last year. Mark Tinker, a 6-4 junior will be playing center this year and should be tough on the boards. There will be a fight between sophomore Stan Spiro and Ollie Dunbar for the other guard position.

Junior College transfer Jose DeCausy and 6'8" Dewitt Summer should help in scoring and rebounding. Freshmen Phil Pena (6'1" forward), Jim Dreu (6'3" forward) and guards Ron Person and Joe Amio should also see action.

It should prove to be an exciting season for the Owls who will be playing a 25 game slate. The December schedule is as follows:

Dec. 1	Wed.	Farmington State
4	Sat.	at Castleton State
8	Wed.	at Salem State
11	Sat.	Gorham State

Political Climate Chilly at Keene State College

By ERIC MALONEY

As the political fire in New Hampshire slowly spreads, one wonders if the mountains surrounding Keene are made of sheet rock.

Although some candidates, including Edmund Muskie and Linda Jenness (Socialist Workers), have either area campaigns organized or have had supporters speak at the college, most of the prospective presidential candidates have yet to approach Keene State College.

Here is a rundown on the progress made so far by each candidate in the Monadnock region:

Shirley Chisholm - Congresswoman Chisholm has yet to officially announce her candidacy. Her formal announcement will not come, she said, until she can raise 300,000 dollars.

HENRY JACKSON - Senator Jackson has announced that he is running, but he has stated his refusal to run in the New Hampshire primaries. He will hold off until the Florida primary.

LINDA JENNESS - Jenness is the Socialist Workers' candidate for president. A group of people from the party headquarters in Boston came up to the College last Thursday, and spent a good portion of the day handing out leaflets in the Student Union.

Later an informational meeting was held in the conference room of the Student Union. Mark Friedman, a former candidate for the Boston School Committee, outlined the platform of Presidential and Vice-Presidential nominees Jenness and Andrew Pulley.

Friedman described the Socialist workers as the only alternative, and his speech indicated obviously that the party is gearing its campaign at the youth. Among its platform planks are the immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam, free medical care and free abortions, and an end to racism.

The Socialist Workers are also launching a strong recruitment program to bolster the membership of their offspring, the Young Socialist Alliance, and are attempting to gain a total of 30,000 subscribers to the Socialist newspaper, Militant.

Friedman also stated his hope that Jenness would be able to come to Keene State sometime this week to speak.

Unfortunately for the Socialist campaign, both Jenness (30) and Pulley (20) are far below the eligible age to run for the presidency. You have to be 35.

GEORGE MCGOVERN - Senator McGovern has made a few swings through New Hampshire, coming as close to Keene as Peterborough. There are no plans for McGovern to come to Keene in the near future.

There is, however, a McGovern for President student committee. Lee Minnick, a second semester freshman at KSC, is the chairman, and has approximately 10 students as his working core.

The committee has so far been following instructions from the state headquarters in Manchester. Little has been planned, however. They hope to get a file on every student on campus, recording their political leanings, whether or not they have registered to vote, and other information that might be pertinent to their campaign.

PAUL MCCLOSKEY - Republican Congressman McCloskey, like McGovern, has also travelled to New Hampshire, and he too has come as far as Peterborough.

Although there is as of yet no headquarters in the Monadnock area, a spokesman at the state headquarters in Concord described Keene as "top priority." They hope to bring McCloskey to Keene sometime in January, when they also wish to search for a store and set up offices.

In the meantime, McCloskey supporters have been ringing doorbells, passing out leaflets, and talking it up.

EDMUND MUSKIE - Muskie spoke to the Keene Chamber of Commerce on October 9 (Monadnock, 10/13 3:3). Since then, the total extent of the Muskie campaign has been the organization of a campaign for Keene and one for the area high schools.

Fred Jenne, a junior at KSC, has been organizing committees at the Keene and Monadnock High Schools, and has gotten about 20 students at each one. There are also reportedly 10-12 students at KSC who are active in the Muskie Campaign.

Locally, the campaign chairman is Thomas Stauffer, assistant to the dean of the college at KSC.

Stauffer does not intend to put the campaign into full swing until next month. Right now, he is doing mostly paperwork, feeding a computer to produce address labels and writing letters.

RICHARD NIXON - There is a Nixon headquarters in Concord.

BENJAMIN SPOCK - The baby doctor is running for the Peoples' Party, formerly the Coalition, and commonly the Fourth Party.

Like the Socialist Workers, the Peoples' Party considers themselves the only alternative to the "Republiocrats."

Since Spock was only nominated for the Presidency at the Fourth Party convention two weeks ago, there has been little time to establish campaign tactics for the election.

Much of their campaign will revolve around trying to get on the ballot in as many states as possible. Since New Hampshire requires only one thousand signatures from each congressional district, it can be expected that workers form the New Party will be up from Massachusetts to petition.

GEORGE WALLACE - Like the Socialist Workers and the Peoples' Party, George Wallace considers himself the only true alternative to the look-alike Democrats and Republicans.

As of this writing, there has been no word of a Wallace for President campaign headquarters in the state of New Hampshire.

SAM YORTY - The mayor of Los Angeles has set up his headquarters in Manchester, and the campaigners in that city are enthusiastic.

A spokesman for the headquarters stated that many Jackson followers in the Keene area were swinging to Yorty, and William Loeb and the Manchester Union Leader have unequivocally supported his
