Owls topple Plymouth

Arch-rival Plymouth State once again fell to the Owls by an 81-73 score. The Saturday night game was an exciting one as a fired-up Panther squad made the favored Owls work hard for their victory. Jose DeCausy scored 33 points to lead the way for the Owls.

Plymouth really wanted this one. They designed a special defense especially for the game. The alarming part was that it almost worked. The Panthers came out in a box and one. The man out front, Bruce Johnson, stuck with Kevin O'Leary. The four man box inside made it practically impossible to get the ball to DeCausy.

DeCausy, not to be denied, picked up 13 first half points, mostly on tip ins. But Paul Cilley, Richie Thibideau and Johnson were hitting from outside while the Owls were not shooting well at all. At one point Plymouth led by as many as nine. At halftime the score stood at 37-34, in favor of the Panthers.

The Owls came roaring back in the second half. Randy Bowman seemed to be everywhere, getting the key rebound, making the good pass, and scoring the key basket. DeCausy crashed the offensive boards hard, giving Keene second and third shots at the hoop. DeWitt Summers rebounded well and scored with consistency.

The big story, however, was a stellar defensive job on Panther guard Richie Thibideau by Ollie Dunbar. Dunbar played the first 34 minutes of the game, and hustled all the way.

A packed house witnessed a whale of a ballgame. Despite inferior talent, a well-disciplined Plymouth team had almost upset the powerful Owls. But the key to the Owl win was the hard dominance of Summers and DeCausy. Only with near-perfect shooting could Plymouth hope to stop Keene.

The game was a preview of the NESCAC Northern Division Championship game to be played at Spaulding Gym on Feb. 26. It is certain to be a SRO game, for the third time in 1972.

Owls wreck hapless Lyndon

The Owls lifted their regular season mark to 15-4 with a 99-79 rout of Lyndon on Monday. Despite the fact that starter Randy Bowman did not make the trip, there was never much doubt about the outcome.

Captain Kevin O'Leary exploded for 30 points. The big night for O'Leary could not have come at a better time. Leading scorer Jose DeCausy scored only 9 and was ejected from the game in the first half.

The rest of the Owls responded to the call also. Ron Pierson picked up 15, Jim Drew 12, and Ollie Dunbar 10. Wit Summers picked up 19 rebounds to pace the Owls in that department. The Owls owned the board all night, and even guard Ollie Dunbar picked off 16 cars.

Last Wednesday the Owls topped Castleton at Spaulding Gym. The Owls led by a 12-0 score, early in the game, and were never really threatened. Jose DeCausy led all scorers with 29.

Castleton showed very little to anyone in a very boring game for both the Keene players and fans. The players were obviously just going through the motions against an extremely inferior opponent. Another factor had to be that the Owls were looking right past the game to Saturday's Plymouth encounter.

Randy Bowman played a fine game. He was his usual hustling self and collected 14 points. Bowman was again starting in place of freshman Jim Drew, who is still trying to return to early season form following an ankle injury.

None of the other Owls were overly impressive. DeCausy was scoring well underneath, but not hitting on his outside attempts. Wit Summers scored only three against a small team. But Summers and DeCausy were solid enough under the boards to insure victory.

The benchmen saw plenty of action, as a total of eleven Owls ended up in the scoring column.

Kevin O'Leary picked up 12 for the Owls and Jim Drew added nine.

The Owls host Salem tonight and The British Olympic Team on Friday. Anyone wishing to meet the British players may do so at Randall hall Lounge at 3 o'clock Friday.

Saturday the team is off to Providence for a meeting with a tough Rhode Island college five.

ON-CAMPUS HOUSING. Contracts for next year's on-campus housing are now available from the Housing Office (Chesire House). Only the first 700 applicants will be guaranteed space. Contracts should be returned to the Bursar's office with a $50 deposit by March 20.

Fights hurting the game

By PETE HANRAHAN

The collegiate basketball scene has been marred this season by a great number of brawls. The number and complexity of these fights have risen to alarming heights. This is so much true that even our own Basketball Owls have been involved.

On The Inside

On January 15, the Owls travelled to Manchester to meet New Hampshire College. Aggressive defensive tactics by NHC, plus some very loose officiating, ended up causing an all out brawl. The brawl included fans as well as players and coaches.

At the University of Minnesota a few weeks ago, the most alarming of all fights, so far, took place. Visiting Ohio State led by a convincing margin with 20 seconds left. Then, on a drive to the hoop, OSU center Luke Witte was deliberately fouled by two Minnesota players. One of the players bent over and held out his hand to the fallen Witte, apparently in a sportsmanlike gesture. But as Witte rose, the player deliberately drove his knee into Witte's groin.

All hell broke loose, and the court was mobbed with free swinging fans and players. Another player, a reserve from Minnesota, stomped several times on the head of Witte, who was still writhing in pain on the floor.

Sequence photographs from Sports Illustrated verify the above story. Also, a nationally televised game between Marquette and South Carolina ended up being nationally witnessed fistfights.

The true athlete is a performer, not a brawler. This year the non-athlete is making his gory mark on the collegiate basketball scene. I hope he is weeded out before he ruins the game for all involved.

Trustees hike non-resident tuition $150

By RON BOISVERT
Monadnock Exec. Editor

Out-of-state students at KSC will be paying $150 more in tuition next year the UNH Board of Trustees decided Saturday. Identical tuition hikes were voted for Plymouth and UNH.

The new tuition figures for Keene and Plymouth will be $1,450. UNH out-of-state fees jumped to $2,150.

The $150 figure is based on per-student costs computed for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1971. New Hampshire state law requires that non-residents pay the full per-student cost of education.

Dr. Thomas N. Bonner, UNH president, emphasized that in-state tuition rates would not be affected by the non-resident hike. The trustees are hoping that the current special session of the state legislature will provide $811,000 so that in-state tuition could be cut 10 per cent. This would mean a reduction of $65 for KSC students who are New Hampshire residents.

Some Hope

Dr. Leo F. Redfern, KSC president, said Monday that there is "some hope" that the legislature will grant funds for in-state tuition relief. He added that passage of requests for additional student financial aid does not seem as likely, however.

The greatest adverse affect of the non-resident tuition hike, according to Redfern, would be the "considerable burden placed on students who enrolled here when tuition was much less." An unwanted transfer could have serious effects on these students, he said.

Redfern also said that the hike would place further strain on KSC's financial aid resources.

"Although our ability to aid is limited, we will make every effort to aid the out-of-state students who may now be eligible for financial aid," he said.

David Kyle, Student Senate president, called the concept of charging non-residents twice the tuition for the same education "ridiculous."

High tuition costs are keeping students out of college, both residents and non-residents, Kyle said.

In-state applications for KSC are down some 17 per cent while out-of-staters are up 11 per cent.

Kyle called for more support from the legislature for higher education, even if it means the passage of a broad base tax.

Pressure on Trustees

Redfern explained that "the trustees see the educational, cultural, social and economic advantages to the state" of having out-of-state students. But, he said, relief will not come to the out-of-state student until the legislature removes its pressure on the trustees.

Redfern said that based on very preliminary assessments of this year's per-student expenses, the trustees might be able to announce an out-of-state tuition reduction for the fall of '73.

"But as long as there is the legislative intent there will be a drifting upward (of the out-of-state tuition) due to the inflationary economy and the increasing cost of providing a good college education," Redfern said.

Rep. Paul N. McCloskey (R-Calif.) outlined his views on the war, the draft, the environment and other issues for a SRO crowd in the KSC Coffee Shop Monday morning.

Rep. McCloskey urges anti-Nixon vote

"It's not what happens in November that is important, but what happens on March 7," Paul McCloskey said before a packed KSC Coffee Shoppe Monday noon. McCloskey reaffirmed his pledge to force President Nixon to stop the war by making a strong showing against him in the New Hampshire primary.

"We are no longer willing to die, willing to bomb, in the support of a corrupt government in Saigon," McCloskey said.

When asked if he would support Richard Nixon in November if he should withdraw from Vietnam and secure re-nomination, McCloskey said no.

There are other issues involved. It would be hard for me to support him for his Southern strategy, or the policies of Attorney General John Mitchell.

McCloskey, who spent about an hour answering questions from the audience, was asked to explain his vote for the D.C. Crime Bill.

"There were about 220 provisions to that bill, including important ones like reform of the juvenile court procedures."

"Although I did not support some provisions, including the wire-tapping measures, I was not prepared to vote against the entire bill, he said.

He also stated that, on a number of other issues, he was forced to vote for the entire bill despite his disagreement on certain sections of the bill.

On the latter, he said, "I only supported a measure to shut federal funds to those convicted of a violent crime."

McCloskey had things to say on a number of issues:

THE ENVIRONMENT - "At present 50 per cent of all funds for sewage treatment comes from local property taxes. Federal participation must increase, perhaps as much as 70 to 90 per cent."

DRAFT - "I am reluctant to establish an all-professional army. It is a question of an army of reluctant soldiers versus an army of men who like to kill."

DRAFT AMNESTY - "We can't have amnesty as long as there is a war going on. However, if I were elected President, I would grant across-the-board amnesty, with a condition that the person serve two years in an alternative service."

ABORTION - "I am for a liberalized abortion law. I feel that a woman has the right to decide whether to have an abortion, and, if she can't afford it, she should receive government assistance."

DEFENSE SPENDING - "With cuts in spending in Vietnam, Europe, and wasteful projects, it should be possible to cut the military budget by 15 billion."

Commons gets new director

Tom Dowling of the ARA Food Services has been appointed new director of food services for the KSC Dining Commons. The 27-year-old director has been here for only a short time, but he already has changes in mind for the Commons.

Having had experience in the culinary field at several other state colleges and universities Dowling feels he knows what the student's needs and wants are.

One of the changes which has already been implemented is that the person doing the ID checking has been moved to the Commons entrance. "This was done in order to prevent the rip-off of meals," Dowling said. "This in turn will enable us to save monies and give us the opportunity to offer the students a better menu variety."

Other changes that have been implemented are: toasters in the dining rooms, menu changes, better food preparation methods, the temperature of the food itself ("make sure the hot food stays hot"), and the reduction of number of hours per worker.

One major dilemma which has plagued the dining commons year after year has been stealing. Last year alone $5000 was spent replacing silverware, salt and pepper shakers, glasses, etc. that were removed, Dowling said.

"I am asking for full student cooperation in these areas," he went on.

Dowling has sought help in these and other matters from the Commons Advisory Committee. Although the committee is "strictly advisory" it is the "sounding board of the commons" and supplies necessary feedback from the students. The committee is presently studying the expansion of the Commons itself and has already voted a schedule change for Sunday breakfast and lunch.

Dowling, a native of Connecticut, has also been director of the dining facilities at Southern Connecticut State College, Cheshire Academy in Connecticut, Westchester State College in Pennsylvania, Lincoln University and Chaney State College also in Pennsylvania.

We Know a Secret About the President...

Richard Nixon will do anything to get re-elected. ANYTHING.
A vote for Paul McCloskey can prove to the President that he must

- end the war.
- dismiss unqualified, inept persons from his administration.
- tell the truth
- revamp the tax structure and the welfare system.
- clean up the environment.
- stop discrimination against women.

AND MUCH, MUCH, MORE.

Vote for McCloskey on March 7, and your vote can force Nixon to make these changes IMMEDIATELY. Vote for McCloskey on March 7, and watch Nixon jump. Then trick Dick once again and don't vote for him in November.

'Afro-jazz-bluesrock' Comes to Keene State

Wende Smith

Sigidi, a 3-man group which plays "afro-jazz-bluesrock," is appearing here on the Coffee House Circuit, Wednesday, and Thursday (Feb. 21-23) at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Brown Room. Admission is 25 cents.

The group consists of singer Wende Smith, who also plays piano and guitar; bass and saxophone player Sherman McKinney; and drummer Steve Solder.

Sigidi plays mostly original material covering a wide scope of topics. "We always attempt to enlighten folks if we can," they say. "That's just turning you on to something hip we discovered; it's also a message of truth."

Afro-jazz-bluesrock means something "rhythmic and exciting, and also mellow and sweet," Sigidi says.

Musical influences on the group are everyone from Bessie Smith and Billie Holiday, to B.B. King and Jimi Hendrix. Added to these influences are those of their home environments. "In Chicago as well as any other huge urban center, the only escape from the chaos is to be able to go off alone and reflect. Watts, L.A., one of the largest ghettos leaves one with a lot to write about."

Sigidi believes that the calmer state of the world is creating calmer music. "We think quieter music with emphasis on acoustic instruments, way-out vocals and lots of bells and percussion is what's coming," they say.

The group has previously appeared on the David Frost and Mike Douglas Shows, at the Newport Folk Festival, and at various clubs in New York and Los Angeles. After next week they'll be able to include Keene State College on their list.

YRC to hold mock presidential elections Thurs.

A mock presidential preference election will be held at KSC Thursday (Feb. 24) by the Young Republicans Club.

Students will be able to cast their vote from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Student Union and the Dining Commons.

Lawrence J. Blandini, a senior from Wakefield, Mass., and president of the YRC, said that students who eat at the Commons will be able to vote in the Commons lobby at either breakfast, lunch or dinner. Other students may vote in the Student Union hallway leading to the coffee shop, where a table and voting booth will be set up.

Blandini said he, YRC vice president Chris Kilbride, a junior from Indian Orchard, Mass.; treasurer Wayne Helie, a graduate student from Keene; and secretary Donna Wescott, a junior from Newington, Conn., will be manning the voting tables throughout the day.

"All the various possible presidential candidates, both announced and unannounced, will be on the ballot," Blandini said. "Students will register as either Republican, Democrat or Independent and then will vote for the candidate of their choice under that designation."

"We hope to have every student on campus take part in the 'election,'" Blandini said. "The ballots will be counted immediately after the polls close at 7 o'clock, and will be supervised by David Harvey, our advisor. The results will be announced as soon as possible, hopefully on the following day."

Bonner holds off on new PR appointment

DURHAM - The now vacant position of university vice-president of public relations will not be filled at this time, Dr. Thomas N. Bonner, president of the University of New Hampshire, said last week. Patrick Jackson resigned from the $30,000 a year position two weeks ago while under attack by the Manchester Union Leader.

Speaking at a news conference televised by the New Hampshire Network, the UNH president said he had recommended establishing the position of vice president for university relations "to improve our ability to give you real information, to raise confidence in the university and to listen to your views."

He noted that the position covered four campuses and its responsibilities covered areas running into hundreds of thousands of dollars. "The post was intended to save the university money through better fund raising and cutting waste and duplicating, as well as increasing the effectiveness of our contacts with you in the state," he said.

Bonner charged that the controversy concerning the hiring of Jackson on a short-term basis centered on misunderstanding of what public relations is and its place at the university. "But," he asked, "did any one of the attackers come to ask me, to try to find out? No. Apparently they did not want to find out. Not once did Pat Jackson say an unkind word to his attackers," Bonner continued. "He would not even rebut the obvious and painful distortions. Much personal anguish has been brought to an able, to a gentle, to a good man."

"I am personally going to continue to work for real public relations," he asserted, "which means openness, frankness, no concealment and a belief in the democratic process and the people of this state. Though the job may now take longer, the goal is still the same."

He called on New Hampshire leaders and the press to join in telling the people of the state "what is right" about UNH. "Help us get legislative understanding and support so that we can act this year to pay competitive salaries to our able faculty and staff."

Bonner cited the $1,000 UNH in-state tuition, highest at any state university in the nation, as a major factor in a 20 per cent decline in freshman applications in the university system.

Included in a supplemental budget recommended to the special session of the Legislature by Gov. Walter Peterson is $811,000 for reduction of in-state tuition by 10 per cent—or $100 per student at Durham. ($65 per student at KSC)

Politician-comedian Paulsen slates campaign stop here

Comedian Pat Paulsen - who is also a Republican candidate for president - will appear at Keene State College Friday night, at 7 o'clock, (Feb. 25) in a dual role.

Paulsen will don his comic's hat for the first hour of his presentation in the Brown Room of the KSC Student Union. Appearing with him will be former Monkee Mike Nesmith, who now heads a group called "The Second National Band." Admission for the comedy segment is 49 cents.

Candidate Pat Paulsen then will switch to a serious role, delivering a political speech for which admission is free.

Paulsen is officially entered in the March 7 New Hampshire presidential preference primary on the GOP ticket. He ran for president as a "write-in" candidate in 1968 and gathered several thousand votes nationally. Fifty-one persons voted for him in New Hampshire.

Paulsen was a late comer to the primary race, collecting the needed signatures for his name to appear on the ballot one day before the deadline.

Paulsen, whose state campaign director is Wayne Justham, the director of the UNH Memorial Student Union, has stressed the need for a non-politician in the White House.

The questionnaire includes three "essay questions:

1) "What do you like and/or dislike about this course?"

2) "What do you think needs to be changed?"

3) "Would you recommend this course to a friend?"

The Senate gave recognition to the newly-formed KSC Ski Club, recognized Neil Donohue as the new Bahai Club representative and Norman Michaud as the first representative of the newly-formed Alternative One Club.

The meeting, which was held in Randall Hall Lounge, adjourned within one hour. Twenty-two Senate members did not respond to the roll call.

The next meeting of the Student Senate is scheduled for March 6.

Any student organization budget request received after Feb. 28 will not be considered for approval, according to Dayl McComb, Student Senate treasurer.

At Monday night's meeting of the Senate, Miss McComb said that a detailed account of the current year's spending must accompany the budget request.

In other financial matters, the Senate voted a $100 donation for the play "Marathon," $50 for next week's appearance of Daniel Ellsberg, and $129 for Student Senate stationery.

Proposed course to go to Senate

A new humanities course for 1972-73, to be taught by members of four departments, was approved by the Senate Curriculum Committee Wednesday (Feb. 9).

The proposal will go before the College Senate at its March 1 meeting. Introduction to the Humanities, (KSC 200) would be coordinated by Dr. David F. Battenfeld of the Department of English. Team teachers will include members of the Departments of Art, Foreign Languages and History.

The committee also recommended that present foreign language phonetics course be worth three credits instead of two and be listed as a separate course for each of the languages offered. Although students in all three languages take the same course, the committee decided that separate listings in the catalogue would clarify the purpose of the course in relation to individual majors.

In other action, the committee decided to list Math, Biology, Earth Sciences, Chemistry/Physics and Mith/Physics as major fields of study leading to a B.S. degree.

Monadnock Editorial

UNWELCOME IN N.H.

Nowhere is the out-of-state student as unwelcome as in New Hampshire. Despite the leadership, new ideas and economic input that out-of-staters bring into the state, the legislature insists on assessing non-residents for the full cost of their education here.

The state of New Hampshire is selfish in denying aid to all but her own children. Such a situation is a disservice to the University and the state. Until attitudes change, New Hampshire can never hope to continue to attract fresh blood.

Editorial Points

500 years from now, who'll know the difference?

Choked in the dust of superfluous verbiage, the wagon train of life rolls on.

The new vote could play a very important part in this year's elections, especially if it doesn't turn out at the polls.

In the typewriter of reality, one must occasionally change the ribbon.

Keene State College would do us all a great service by putting Thelonious Monk at the keyboard of the Huntress Hall chimes.

Letters to the Editor

INSURANCE ARTICLE PRAISED

To the Editor:

Congratulations to you for bringing the Consumer Reports article of January, 1972, on Life Insurance to the attention of students.

Companies with high pressure sales programs should be discouraged from going on to college campuses: the college student should be free to pursue an objective course of studies without being made a target of commercial exploitation.

It is rare for a college student to have enough business experience to see the pitfalls behind a sales pitch. Honeyed sales talk can flatter a person into believing that he knows a lot about business, when he actually knows next to nothing.

Every high school child knows, for example, that, to buy life insurance one pays a premium, and on one's death a stated amount goes to one's beneficiaries. What few high school children and college students know is that there are many kinds of life insurance, that the field is a vast and confusing one which requires expertise.

There are indications that, in recent years, fraudulent life insurance has been increasing. When a student lays out his meagre resources on a big, important expense like life insurance, he could be buying himself a lot of grief. Students should consult their fathers, if they are experienced in business, or a relative or friend of the family who knows about insurance before buying.

Thomas T. Pond, Jr., A Grad Student

ON HARES, HISTORY, AND OMELETS

To the Editor:

As a second year student (sophomore) at Keene State, I feel entitled, as well as qualified to make an important observation. I wouldn't make it if I were a first year student, for I understand the relationship between experience and comparison, and know the importance of that relationship in making major observations. Haste does in fact make waste, and hasty observations based on incomplete data prove not only false, but are oftentimes a bit of the hare that bit the dog.

First, so you don't think I am just running off steam, let me tell you that I am a reasonable mature and responsible adult, as witnessed by the fact that, as I have told you, I don't make hasty observations. Patience comes with experience, and it is truly a virtue.

My observation has to do with campus committees. Now, how many committees are there on this campus? EXACTLY MY POINT! And after all is said and done, I ask you, what is accomplished? They just can't do it, is the point. There's simply too many cooks spoiling the broth.

To make an analogy to bring home my point, did God send a committee? No! Why not? Because he was smart enough to know you sometimes have to put all your eggs in one basket if you want a really good omelet.

History will bear me out on this, I know. The most successful men have taken the bull by the horns, so to speak. We might denounce them as power hungry maniacs, but we must still admit they got things done. Can you name a single exception? I may be wrong, but if I am, I'm in good company: Napoleon, Charlemagne, Huey P. Long, F.D.R., Faulkner, Jefferson, and I could go on and on. I rest my case.

History repeats itself, especially if you make it happen, and it's time we did. Perhaps if we could learn to let one cook do the broth, we couldn't get so much egg on our face.

'Is ----- still in Washington?'
'No, he's at The Monadnock.'

By ERIC MALONEY
Monadnock Political Columnist

Startled by the revelation that George McGovern eats Hershey bars, I landed along with the senator's press following at the Lebanon Airport last Wednesday afternoon. We consisted of a handful of reporters, a couple of staff photographers, and sundry aides and workers.

The press was honored by a special limousine, to take us wherever the Senator went. We pulled out of the airport, and headed for our first stop in Hanover.

The man in the front seat, who looked like a history teacher I once had, turned around and introduced himself to the NBC girl as the reporter from the National Observer.

"Hi," she said, "I've been dispatched from Cleveland and this is my first time out in the field."

"Is ----- still working out of Cleveland?"

"No, he was transferred to New York."

We arrived about 4 p.m. at the Hanover Inn where McGovern would be spending the night. He retired to his room to do a radio program, before leaving for the Dartmouth Cafeteria.

Chilean Democrats

I was hustled into room 202, along with a group of Christian Democrats from Chile. They were here on a government-sponsored tour of the U.S. to observe American politics.

"Romeo and Juliet", the two McGovern staff photographers, came in briefly and "Juliet" stretched herself on the bed as if Rudolph Valentino were going to walk out of the bathroom.

I sauntered down to the lobby at about 4:45, and listened as the man from UPI chatted with the guy from Newsweek. Newsweek had his kid along, to do a report for school.

"How long have you been working for UPI?" Newsweek asked.
"About three years," said UPI.
"I'm working out of Washington," said Newsweek.

"Oh, is ----- still in Washington?"
"No, he was transferred to New York." McGovern was - as is evidently typical of politicians - late. He spoke briefly to the Chileans in the lobby. They didn't answer, because they don't speak English.

We all trooped over to the Thayer Dining Hall, to be greeted with a huge President Muskie sign. The senator ambled through the main hall, trailed by a motley crowd of reporters, photographers, political jugglers and jesters.

Dining Room Rounds

After he made the rounds of the other dining rooms, he chose to eat in the last one. No one seemed to mind that he butted into line, or didn't bother to pay.

McGovern sat down, and the people crowded around him. Romeo and Juliet snapped pictures, while everyone else complained about how hungry they were.

Newsweeks I and II were leaning against the wall.

"Hi," I said to Newsweek. "Who are you covering this for?"
"Newsweek," he said.

"Oh."

We stood around and watched the senator eat. Over on the other side of the room, someone had propped up a sign on the disposal conveyor belt. It read, "We're tired of old men thinking up slogans."

A few minutes later, we were back outdoors. The limousine was waiting, and we piled in for mystic destination. (Actually, everyone had a schedule but it wasn't cool to know it.)

Before long, we were at the home of Judy and Roland Miller for an open house. The New York Times who looked like Robert Culp, charged into the living room and began eating. The other reporters headed for the dining room and booze.

"I read in the Lebanon paper upon my arrival today that FDR Jr. was here." The candidate announced, "and said that William Loeb and I had some sort of alliance. (chuckles) I've been telling my staff all along that what this campaign needed was some humor. (chuckles) I'd like to thank FDR Jr. for giving us that humor." (chuckles)

"Say," I said to a bystander with long

hair, "are most of these people McGovern supporters?"

"I don't know."

"Are you a McGovern supporter?"

"I don't believe in voting."

"Oh."

McGovern answered some questions, and then we were off again. It was time to visit the Lebanon McGovern for Presidential headquarters.

It was in an office building across from Woolworth's. On one side was the Muskie headquarters, and on the other side was the Nixon headquarters. Across the hall was the Department of Health.

There were about a hundred people jammed into the little room. I found myself stuck behind a woman whose hair smelled like play-dough. Everyone was pushing and shoving, and all the reporters stood on the fringes talking.

The New York Times: "Whatever happened to -----?"

Newsweek: "Oh, he's in Vietnam, but he's coming back to Washington this month."

The New York Times: "Good man, good man."

Finally, McGovern managed to push his way through the crowd.

"I'd just like to thank you all for the wonderful job you've done. My wife and I really appreciate it."

He started pushing his way back toward the exit. By now, I was out of the crowd, and standing by the stairs. He walked past me with the inevitable smile on his face.

My God, I thought, he's got lock-grin.

It was back in the limousine, and off to the Hanover bowling alley. When we got on the outskirts of Lebanon, we were pulled over by one of the McGovern cars. A kid with pimples jumped out screaming, "We took the wrong turn! We took the wrong turn!"

So we were five minutes late. McGovern had already shaken hands with most of the people in the bowling alley.

Newsweek got his kid a hotdog and a coke. They sat down. McGovern left. We all rushed back to the limousine.

Newsweek slammed the car door on Newsweek II's leg.

"Are you hurt, son?" he asked a la Chuck Connors.

"Yes."

"Well - are you hurt badly?"

"No."

"Here's your hotdog."

Five minutes later -

"This hotdog is bad."

"O.K., son, I'll take care of it."

We stopped at another bowling alley. The New York Times and the Press Secretary played pinball while McGovern drank beer. Alan King was on television, and some of us watched.

From there, it was to one more house party. We stood around and slumped while the Senator answered questions. This was the last stop.

Back to Hanover

It was ten thirty when we got back to the Hanover Inn. I was to stay at a McGovern's worker's house, and waited for her in the lobby. She came down and told me that I would have to stay with someone else in a fraternity.

I asked a McGovern aide where my sleeping bag was.

She went up to the desk clerk, and said, "I'm looking for a sleeping bag."

"I'm sorry, Madam, but we only have beds."

I finally got to the fraternity house. The kid who was to be my host asked me to paper a dorm with leaflets announcing a McGovern lecture the next day. Sure, I said, why not.

The next day, it was back to Lebanon to visit a third grade class that was having breakfast under a program that McGovern had pushed through Congress. The kids had milk and pop tarts. McGovern drank the milk.

At this point, I accepted a ride back to Keene. It was all right with the McGovern crew - I didn't really belong there, anyway. They thought they'd invited someone from the Monadnock Ledger.

My candidate is better than your candidate

By DAVE COOK

"The President rules the war and tries to stop war."
"He works a lot, too."

Those were among the statements made by third grade students from St. Joseph Elementary School in Keene. They came to KSC last week to see presidential candidate George McGovern.

The senator was making an informal visit to the campus but the real story was the kids' reactions and comments.

Of the five, one favored Nixon and the other four were split between Muskie and McGovern. The war was their main concern and they generally supported who they believed would end it quickest.

Their faith in the opposing candidates differed sharply, however.

"I'd vote for Muskie because he'll stop the war."

"Muskie's just going around and saying things. I think Nixon's got the right idea because he's not telling the people what he's doing so the won't fight amongst themselves and he'll have a chance to work out a secret agreement."

One little girl supported McGovern because "he'll give amnesty to all the people in the war." But when she was asked what amnesty is, she replied, "I don't know."

They all knew the major candidates' names, party affiliations and home states however. And, in a display that is rare among the adult voting populace, they agreed that all Democrats should support whomever the party nominates and the nation as a whole should support the man who is already President.

Why would they vote for somebody else, if the country should support the President? "Because somebody else might do better."

They did show signs of being party-line voters, however. When asked what Senators McGovern and Muskie have in common, they all affirmed that both were Democrats, whereupon four voices shouted, "Yeah, Democrats."

Not to be outdone, the lone Nixon supporter simply shouted, "Booo."

Championship is on line as Keene hosts Plymouth

By PETE HANRAHAN
Monadnock Sports Editor

Saturday night the basketball Owls face the Plymouth Panthers at Spaulding Gym for the NESCAC Northern Division Championship game. The winner earns the right to play for the conference championship next month.

The championship game will be played this year at the home gym of the Southern Division champs. Boston State is favored to win the South, although Rhode Island College is a strong contender.

Having twice defeated Plymouth, the Owls have to be considered strong favorites. Plymouth with their tall, gunning guards, will probably employ the same offense that KSC has seen twice this season. However, Paul Cilley was successful in scoring off Jose DeCausey at Plymouth, and the Panthers may try to use him a little more.

The Panthers employed a box and one defense against the Owls in their last meeting two weeks ago. Point man Bruce Johnson dogged Kevin O'Leary while the box collapsed on Jose DeCausey's lane area. O'Leary was held to six, but DeCausey managed 33, with most of his points coming on tip-ins. The defense did, however, make it difficult for the Owls to get the ball in to DeCausey.

This time the Panthers will probably concentrate on boxing Jose away from the offensive boards. If they can contain both DeCausey and O'Leary, the Owls will be in serious trouble.

Wit Summers, Randy Bowman, Jim Drew and Ron Pierson would have to take up the slack. While all have the capability, it would be tough to make up the difference.

Ollie Dunbar will undoubtedly draw hot-shot Richie Thibideau as his defensive assignment. Twice this season, Dunbar has throttled Thibideau, who as a rule takes, and makes, a lot of shots. Bruce Johnson, Paul Cilley and Dick Blood can all score, but for Plymouth, Thibideau is the key. As he goes, so go the Panthers.

It will be the end of the line for the losing team. The house should be packed, so get there early.

KSC Instructor captures honors

A Keene State College physical education instructor and two Keene State students took high honors in the New Hampshire Badminton Association "C" Tourney held recently in Concord.

Miss Daisy Herndon, instructor of physical education, defeated Linda Dame of Rochester, N.H., in the final to take the state's women's single title for 1972. She teamed with Mrs. Maren McBride of N. Swanzey, a junior special education major at KSC, to take second place in the women's doubles. The duo knocked out the first seeded team of Dame-McIntosh before being defeated in the doubles-final by Mrs. Hope Webster, a junior physical education major at KSC, and Mrs. Jan Wilson of Keene.

In the men's competition, Steve Stabler of Keene paired with Norm LeTendre of Manchester to win the men's doubles over Filson Glanz of UNH and Dan Heylinger of Keene. Stabler and Mrs. Wilson combined to capture the mixed doubles over Reg and Becky Fleury of Bristol.

Glanz won the man's singles, beating Heylinger.

Basketball Owls now 16-4

Salem State edged, Olympians dumped

The Basketball Owls upped their sectional record to 6-0 with a win over Salem State last Wednesday. The Owls won by a narrow 89-83 score in a poorly played game.

The Owls, playing their third game in five days, looked dead on their feet. Starters Kevin O'Leary, Wit Summers and Jose DeCausey were benched midway through the second half, and never returned to action.

Salem remembers DeCausey

Salem apparently remembered DeCausey, who had netted 36 points and pulled down 28 rebounds in the first meeting. As a result, the Vikings were double and triple teaming DeCausey all night. After scoring 18 hard-earned points in the first half, DeCausey appeared frustrated and tired. For the first ten minutes of the second half, Summers and DeCausey just jogged up and down the court while O'Leary was playing very sloppy basketball. Without these three, the Owls continued to do what they had been doing throughout the game, playing just well enough to stay ahead.

Pierson, Bowman shine

Ron Pierson and Randy Bowman scored 18 and 20 points, respectively. The hustle of these two players saved the Owls from a loss which could have been devastating. DeCausey finished with 20 and O'Leary added ten. Ollie Dunbar, who had been injured early in the first half, came back strong in the second half, picking up eight points. But all in all, it was a long night for everyone involved.

Fans got a treat

Owl Basketball fans got a real treat Friday as the Owls walloped the British Olympic Basketball team 83-62. What the fans saw was an outstanding performance by the play-off bound Owls.

Even though it was only an exhibition, the game was a refreshing change from Wednesday night's poor showing against Salem. The Owls were really moving the ball, especially in the second half. Everyone was hustling and playing unselfishly. Jose DeCausey's 33 point performance on the inside, was balanced by the combined outside shooting of Ron Pierson and Kevin O'Leary. Each had 13 points.

The Britishers were obviously not playing a native sport. But by the time they finish their 16 game - 21 day tour of the United States and Canada, they will undoubtedly be much more a team than they were against the Owls.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT is diminutive Keene State College coed Jane McHenry looks way up to meet Willie Cameron, a member of the British Olympic basketball team that visited Keene (2/18) during its 21-day, 16-game American tour. Jane a sophomore from South Weymouth, Mass., is 5-feet-11, while Cameron, 24-year-old clerk from Glasgow, Scotland, stands 6-feet-9½. Keene State's Owls defeated the Olympians, 83-62, and handed the visitors their worst defeat in 11 games. (KSC News Photo)

Owls face crucial tests

By PETE HANRAHAN

Coach Glenn Theulen's Basketball Owls now enter a very crucial three days. Thursday the Owls host Husson College of Bangor, Maine.

During semester break, Husson buried the Owls, at Bangor, by a 109-87 score. In that game, Jose nasium. Keene's record away from home is 8-4.

Husson will be Keene's last regular season opponent, and the game must be considered pivotal. Hopefully, the momentum which the Owls built in the last half against the British Olympians will continue through the Husson game. The Owls were really moving in that second half, better than they have all season long.

Saturday the Owls host Plymouth in the game which will decide the NESCAC Northern Division Championship. A win will send the Owls south to meet the winner of the Southern Division.

If you have not seen a game all year, don't miss either of these games. The Owls must win both convincingly if they want to be considered a serious threat to win the conference title.

On The Inside

DeCausey fouled out after scoring a season-low of 8 points. The rest of the Owls just could not make up the difference.

The feeling amongst the players is that Husson can be had. For one thing, the Owls have rolled up a combined record of 10-1 in the friendly confines of Spaulding Gym.

... SPORTS ... COMMENTS

Saturday's Plymouth game marked the second time that veteran referee, LARRY MITCHELL has done a KSC game this season. In December, he called a close game at Spaulding Gym when the Owls met North Adams. At Plymouth, the players were almost tackling one another and getting away with it.

Owl RANDY BOWMAN always seems to be where the action is. Not only has he earned himself a starting position, but he also deserves a lot of credit for his contribution to the recent win over Plymouth. While the other Owls were faltering in the first half, Bowman's aggressive play on the floor and off the boards kept the Owls from getting too far behind.

The arrival of DAN BIEBEL means a lot of help for Bob Taft's cross country and track squads. Biebel transferred to Keene from Gordon College, Mass. His credentials are impressive. Dan has been All-NAIA in cross country for two straight years, finishing 4th in 1970 and 2nd last year.

The Plymouth Fieldhouse would appear to be an architectural miscarriage. The fieldhouse has absolutely no functional unity. The swimming pool is one meter short of competition length, making any record set there meaningless. The track is banked so high that a runner has to cut his stride in half to keep his balance. The main gym is only half painted and the handball court wall surface is jointed cinderblock.

After MIKE AUMAND quit the Basketball Team, KSC lost its only three-sport performer. Among his accomplishments, are membership on an NAIA Championship Soccer Team, on a NESCAC Championship Basketball Team. All these accomplishments have come in only two and one half years at Keene State.

Dunbar and DeCausey-two reasons for Owls' success

The road to the starting lineup has been a long one for Junior Ollie Dunbar. A high school standout at Manchester West, Dunbar waited for two full seasons before becoming a starter with the Owls.

Ollie was seventh man for Coach Glenn Theulen's 1969-1970 team. He saw action only in spots, where he was usually asked to play just a couple of minutes of intense defense.

With the maturing of Kevin O'Leary and the arrival of Junior College transfer Tom Konrady, 1970-1971 did not spell much promotion for Ollie. He again played in spots, in primarily defensive assignments.

One could see, however, improvement in his offensive game, both in handling the ball and in shooting.

This season, Dunbar has captured a starting job. He still does not score a lot, as a matter of fact he shoots just enough to keep the defenses honest. However, he is still playing that hustling defense, usually drawing the opponent's top guard for coverage.

After fighting to crack the starting lineup for two years, don't expect Dunbar to willingly give up his place, although opposing guards probably wish he would go back to the bench.

Players of the Week

Coach Glenn Theulen can attribute much of his success to one town in Indiana. Vincennes Junior College first sent Dave Terry and Joe Whiten to Keene State in 1969. In 1970, Randy Bowman, a native of Vincennes, transferred to Keene. Finally in 1971, VJC sent Jose DeCausey, the most talented athlete ever to don an Owls uniform, to KSC.

DeCausey has led the Owls to a regular season record of 16-4. He is the top scorer and leading rebounder on the team. Lately opposing teams have been double and triple teaming DeCausey, in an effort to shut him off. But all of this has been to no avail. The fact is, DeCausey so out classes the competition in this conference, that he literally cannot be denied his 25 points per game.

DeCausey has of late developed more and more as a team player. Frankly, he has been very heavily criticized for being downright selfish. But to anyone who witnessed Friday night's game (vs. the British Olympians), it was obvious that DeCausey was developing rapidly towards being the apex of a strong team.

Talent and unselfishness could soon turn Jose DeCausey, KSC's most talented athlete ever, into KSC's best athlete ever.

Anti-discrimination bill to face Senate today

By DANA SULLIVAN
Monadnock Staff Writer

Four months of controversy may come to a head at today's meeting of the College Senate if an anti-discrimination proposal drafted by four senators is voted upon.

Charles Hildebrandt, Nora F. Kerr, Norman Michaud and David Smith collaborated in drawing up the proposal in November. It was introduced to the Senate Feb. 2, passed by the student affairs committee Feb. 9 by a vote of 6-1-1, and it is now scheduled for action in today's meeting.

The proposal is not the first item on the agenda, but President Leo F. Redfern, Dr. Hildebrandt, and student affairs committee chairman David Smith have estimated that there will probably be time to allow for some debate on the question.

Smith said that although the motion is not itemized on the agenda, issued Monday, it will be included in his committee report, making it the fourth item of discussion in the meeting.

See fraternity reaction on pg. 5

Toward KSC costs

By THE MONADNOCK STAFF

It cost $5.1 million annually to run Keene State College, but the New Hampshire legislature contributes only $1.1 million, or 22 per cent. The rest is supplied mainly by student fees.

The biennial college budget is divided into two parts, President Leo F. Redfern explained Monday. One is the general education budget and the other is the auxiliary enterprises budget.

Of the general education expenses, the state paid 53 per cent in 1960 and 44 per cent in 1965. This year's estimates, however, show state aid down to 32 per cent. Tuition must make up the other two-thirds, Redfern said.

"Keene is moving rapidly toward semi-private status," Dr. Thomas D. Aceto, dean of students, commented. "In most institutions in the U.S., two-thirds comes from the state and one-third from tuition. Here, out-of-state students are paying the bulk of these tuition costs."

These students, who make up 25 per cent of the student body—a figure limited by the legislature—pay about 46 per cent of the total tuition costs.

Thus KSC tuition costs are among the highest in the nation, according to Rep. James E. O'Neil of Chesterfield, deputy speaker of the state House of Representatives.

"New Hampshire has not grown proportionately as fast as the University system, therefore adequate funds are not readily available," he said.

The University is now seeking more state aid which would lower in-state tuition 10 per cent Redfern said. But out-of-state tuition rose $150 only last week.

Legislative action on the added budget request in the special session is not complete, O'Neil said. Until aid is forthcoming, KSC will have to keep its belt tightened.

"The University is on a hold-the-line budget now, which ranges from paper clips to hiring new faculty," said David R. Leinster, history professor and member of the College Senate Executive Committee. "This cannot fail to damage the quality of education here."

Rep. O'Neil cited various examples of budget tightening: "There have been no salary increases for the academic staff; the choice of courses is dwindling; there have been maintenance cuts, and the student-faculty ratio is rising. As a result of these and other problems, admissions are down 17 per cent," he said.

There is no aid whatsoever to the college's extension and summer sessions.

"Our budget is 100 per cent generated within the program," Dr. Paul G. Blacketer, director of the program explained. "We have been trying for six years to get state funds but our chances are the same now as they were six years ago—zero. They don't even reach the point of being serious."

The program can probably continue as it is at present, but it cannot develop to meet state education needs, he said. "This is one of the dilemmas that we are facing now."

The cost for the afternoon and evening courses is $30 per credit hour. For the summer session, students pay an additional $15 in-state or $30 out-of-state registration fee.

Auxiliary enterprises get little or no state aid. This includes the dormitories, the dining commons, the KSC Bookstore, student activities, student union and athletics, Dean Aceto said.

The building cost of residence halls at KSC, although backed by state bonds, must be entirely paid from room rents. The other half of the $580,000 annual cost for the afternoon and evening courses is $30 per credit hour. For the summer session, students pay an additional $15 in-state or $30 out-of-state registration fee.

at $465 per year. The average room-boards cost in 1965 was $700, Aceto remarked.

All student extracurricular activities are supported exclusively by either the student activity fee ($50 per student) or the Student Union fee ($30 per student).

The only state aid in auxiliary enterprises goes to the KSC Health Service, of which the state pays 60 per cent. Students are required to pay a $10 health fee.

The UNH system is the least supported land grant system in the nation, with a $17.06 per capita tax contribution annually, Rep. O'Neil explained.

If New Hampshire were to raise that per capita figure by just three dollars it would mean $2 million in increased aid to education, according to President Redfern.

"Keene's share would be more than enough to raise faculty and administration salaries by 5 1/2 per cent and to reduce in-state tuition by 10 per cent," he said.

Redfern reported that the University of Massachusetts (which is 49th in per capita support) built a whole community college system and upped salaries with only a five dollar increase in per capita state aid. New Hampshire would still be last in the nation after a three dollar increase, he added.

cussion in the meeting.

Under senate rules, meetings begin at 4 p.m. and adjourn no later than 6:15 p.m.

The resolution, if passed, would bar the use of the college name and funds for organizations which practice "arbitrary exclusion" on the basis of "categorical identification."

The resolution also covers the hidden costs of use of facilities and personnel and would place the burden of proof upon the organization.

Most of the opposition to the Hildebrandt proposal comes from fraternities, athletic groups and their sympathizers.

In the debate in the student affairs committee meeting Feb. 9, Patrick Murphy, a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon, opposed

Carle escapes serious fire

Quick action by three residence counselors prevented a smoldering bureau from developing into a serious fire at KSC's Carle Hall early Monday morning.

Smoke from a bureau placed too close to a heating unit touched off fire detectors at about 4:20 a.m. in the dorm's 3D section lounge. Counselors Jonathan Manley, James Roy and Robert Stomski removed students from the area and extinguished the fire.

Three fire engines were called to the scene. Firemen set up fans to blow smoke from the area.

Dorm official reported no damage other than the single bureau.

The 300 student residents returned to their rooms in less than one-half hour.
