

Tuesday eve.

Feb. 29th 1944

George, darling,

It's been snowing and raining all day long so Jimmie and I have a chance to get more acquainted indoors. He has a new habit of coming to me with a hurt finger or when he cries. In fact, he's getting affectionate at last and I just love it. Oh, Daddy, if you could only see the great changes in that precious son, you'd jump for joy.

In the meantime, my poor description of his daily actions will have to suffice. We're both fine and healthy like anything and you stay that way too, darling.

Spoke to Mom and Pop, they're both fine and Harry may be home in a few days.
I was undecided about sending him some candy to the hospital but I guess I'll send it when he gets home. He had some pain for the last few days and the doctor gave him some injections to relieve it. Jules called this morning, inquired about you and us and sends his best regards to you.

This morning I received your Saturday letter and the schedule for the week. Also a letter from Bob and my sister Bess. She wants Jimmie and myself to spend a week or two with her now in the country.
They (My - B. Jan) have a four room apt with a family on Sacket Lake. If you got a letter from Bers, try to answer it when you have a little time as she thinks you didn't receive it. I'm undecided about going to the country but if the weather turns to fair and milder I may change my mind. I'll let you know in advance.

Also got a notice for my salary which I'll pay this month, amount $0.82.

In this month's Readers Digest, there's an article about "The Worst Railroad on Earth". It's the work of the ^(711th) 725th Regt of Engrs who's job it is to take over the worst wrecked roads of an invaded country and rebuild them and operate them. If you get a chance to read it, you'll find it interesting only because you're in the same type of company.

Hope you had an enjoyable Sunday and I guess the smell of feet in the movies is a bit annoying when you want to relax for a few hours.

Sunny called to tell me that her sister-in-law gave birth to a baby girl (the father was killed in a crash) and she thinks Slachman is Tops and so do we. Sunny is due about the middle of April. It's a shame that our plans for a family had to go haywire but there's always Jimmie.

All my love to you, sweetheart, and a hug and kiss from Sunny Jim.

As always,
Florence

P.S. Lots of luck for those final exams.
