

Organization sending "Bikes not Bombs"

By CHARLES ORLANDO
Equinox Reporter

Send bikes not bombs to Nicaragua was the message Carl Kurz presented to his audience Monday night in the Library Conference Room.

Kurz is the co-founder of the Bikes not Bombs organization which publishes a newspaper and other literature to motivate people in the United States and Europe to send bicycles to Nicaragua.

Kurz, who is a bicycle mechanic and fluent in Spanish, has lived intermittently in Nicaragua for the past four years. Kurz said his "goal is to help the Nicaraguan people to get a transportation system that will be beneficial to them."

Since it began on July 4, 1984, the organization more than 1200 bicycles have reached Nicaragua through the combined efforts of Bikes not Bombs, Kurz said.

Kurz effectively explained his the audience the need for cheap, efficient transportation in Nicaragua.

"Animals are used as public transportation in countries such as Grenada and Laon," he said.

"In the U.S., 570 people per 10000 can afford cars, where as in Nicaragua only about 12 out of 1000 can afford cars," Kurz said.

Kurz also described how many people in Nicaragua carry their goods without the aid of motorized vehicles or even animals.

"At least 60 to 70 percent of the people use some form of human traction when moving goods," Kurz said. With the aid of bicycles, people in Nicaragua could transport more goods with less of a burden on themselves, he said.

Bicycles would be very beneficial in Nicaragua because "bicycles take up only two percent of parking space of cars", Kurz said. "They would be an excellent alternative in Nicaragua where there is very limited space."

Kurz also explained the process of distributing bicycles to the people. The organization distributes bicycles to people in order of need, he said. When they get a sufficient number of recipients, the organization sells the bikes for 700 cordovas, or about two weeks work for the average worker, Kurz said.

The organization, a division of the Institute for Transportation and Development Policy, obtained funds through donations from concerned citizens, lobbies, Congress and the World Bank, Kurz said.

By bringing bicycles to Nicaragua, the group is participating in "development of a third world country which corresponds with the green movement," Kurz said. And to help stop the "countless deaths," and alleviate "pollution due to automobiles," said Kurz.

During the presentation, Kurz was very critical of American involvement in Nicaragua.

"The spectre of war (in Nicaragua) is most threatening from the United States," Kurz explained. He even expressed his political views toward the past fighting of the Contras and Sandinistas.

"I have support for the Sandinistas, but I am not a gung-ho Sandinista flag waver," Kurz declared.

By sending bicycles, Bikes not Bombs, is aiding the people much more than by supplying them with bombs, Kurz said. However, there is a strong American influence helping the Nicaraguans, he said.

"There are more Americans working there than Cubans or Russians."

Keene State's own "Strange Brew" opened the festivities on Oya Hill Saturday afternoon.

a one-year representative seat. John D'Arcy is in the race for the position of class secretary. The only formal candidate for a junior class position is Pauline Chang, who is unchallenged in her campaign for the presidency.

The four candidates for the senior class positions are also unchallenged. They include Sharon Maffee a candidate for secretary; Jay O'Leary, treasurer, as well as a non-traditional representative seat; Erin O'Connor, vice president, and Eric Wilson, president.

All candidates were asked to write a profile of themselves listing their past and present experiences, why they are running, and what they hope to accomplish in the position. This information will be listed under the candidates' pictures on large posters which Sweeney hopes to have located in the library and Dining Commons.

"Students often vote blindly," Sweeney said, so the posters will help to familiarize students with the candidates.

In his profile, Wilson indicated that he wants to increase services offered to students, to work with students to solve problems in the college community, and to have a student-complain/suggestion box on campus.

Students hoping to win in tomorrow's elections include: Mike Reny, senior class representative; Beth Hall and Timothy Drew, junior class representatives; Brette Nolte, non-traditional student representative, and Jean D. Cherouny and Raquel Hall for one-year sophomore representative seats.

"Voting last year went up from the year before, and I hope we have a consistent increase" this year, said Sweeney. "Their campaigning is disappointing to me this year," she said, but "most of the major campaigning comes the night before."

Voting will be held from 8 a.m.

-7 p.m. in the Union Station, and during lunch and dinner at the Dining Commons.

More elections will be held the third Tuesday of the fall semester to elect students for freshman positions, and to fill any resignations, and empty seats left from this semester.

"Part of what you are dealing with going both ways is integrating your life over here with your life over there," she said.

"We've been through it," concluded Hastings. "We encourage anyone to attend our meetings even if it is just out of curiosity. We would be more than happy to help them. It will be worth the time and effort if they are serious about going," he said.

THE STUDENT NEWSPAPER FOR KEENE STATE COLLEGE

Fire leaves one woman hospitalized

By CARRIE MARTIN and CHRISTIAN IMPERATO
Equinox Reporters

A fire that broke out early Sunday morning in Carle Hall left 26 students temporarily roomless and one woman hospitalized for smoke inhalation, according to Ron Paradis, director of college relations at Keene State.

The fire broke out at approximately 3:59 a.m. in the closet of room 307B, where Freshman Charles Minnich was sleeping at the time, Paradis said.

Stephanie Evans, 18, a University of New Hampshire student who was spending the weekend in the dormitory was hospitalized for smoke inhalation, Paradis said. He said Evans became confused and lost when trying to escape from the fire. As a result, Evans became disoriented and passed out when overwhelmed by the smoke, he said. Evans had not been released from the Cheshire Medical Center as of Tuesday, according to a hospital spokesman.

Students living on the floor where the fire occurred have been placed in lounges or are staying with friends, said Paradis. Most of the students will return to their rooms today. Five rooms will remain closed due to extensive smoke damage.

Paradis said many students left their doors open when evacuating the building during the fire, causing the smoke to be pulled into their rooms. "We're waiting to open the rooms for the students to return to after they have been aired-out," Paradis said. He said because of the rainy weather on Monday, the windows had to be shut and the ventilation process was taking longer than originally expected.

Paradis estimated the damages from the fire to be about $20,000, with most damage existing in the room where the fire occurred. "Everything was pretty much destroyed," he said.

Provisions are being made by the college, supplying students with quarters to wash out their clothes, said Carole S. Henry, interim vice president of student of affairs. Students are also receiving two-for-one tickets at the drycleaners, Paradis said.

"Residents from Carle, Huntress and S.O.A.R. are giving towels, soap, food and monetary support to the students," said Chris Radeff, residence director of Carle Hall.

It was also reported in The Keene Sentinel Monday that police are investigating vandalism done to Minnich's car. The incident was reported approximately at 1:20 p.m. on Saturday, Paul Bosquet, coordinator of campus security, said. Minnich's car was parked in the C-parking lot and had been defaced with spray paint, obscenities and with a sorority's emblem painted in black on the car. Bosquet does not believe the fire and the vandalism to Minnich's vehicle are related. "The two incidents are only related in the fact that it was his room and his car," he said. Bosquet said there are no suspects in either incident.

"It's a pretty good probability that they (the two incidents) are related," said Sergeant Robert Hardy of Keene Police yesterday afternoon. "It's under investigation."

Keene Fire Chief Robert Guyette said the cause of the fire on Saturday is suspicious. He would not elaborate on the cause, saying that the information would interfere with the ongoing investigation that he and the Keene police are conducting.

Guyette said there are "quite a few things that have started us toward it (an investigation into arson), but that information must remain secret."

The investigation could take as long as a month or two, but Guyette hopes to complete the process in the near future. He said there are a number of factors that must be examined in order to present an accurate report.

Guyette said students and staff of Keene State handled the fire very well and were very cooperative with the fire department.

"They did a heck of a good job," Guyette said.

Lynch to resign as interim registrar, effective June 30

By LAUREN A. BORSA
Executive Editor

Margaret Lynch, interim registrar at Keene State College, will resign from that position as of June 30, Richard Cunningham, interim vice president of academic affairs, said Tuesday.

Lynch's resignation is due to "her own personal reasons," Cunningham said. Lynch refused to comment Tuesday about her departure.

A search for a new registrar began with advertisements for the position in January, 1988 and the closure date for applicants was April 1, Cunningham said. The search committee for the new registrar, comprised of Lynch, Beverly King, of academic advising; Margaret Langford, professor of modern languages; David Lombardo, director of admissions;

Charles Thompson, director of the computer center; and David Clark, dean of arts and humanities, has narrowed down the number of possible candidates. Cunningham said they will be on campus for interviews within the next few weeks.

Lynch has been interim registrar since the departure of David Porter who was registrar of the College two years ago, Ronald Paradis, director of college relations. Cunningham said a few searches have taken place for the position but proved to be "unsatisfactory." He said Lynch's contract is active until the position is filled.

Cunningham said it was still unclear as to when the newly appointed registrar would begin working, but he said it will be "as soon as possible."

Sturnick to be inaugurated Saturday

By CHRISTIAN IMPERATO
Equinox Reporter

Judith A. Sturnick will be inaugurated as the seventh president of Keene State on Saturday afternoon in the Spaulding Gymnasium. The College will celebrate the inauguration amid events including symposiums, dances and an inaugural ball.

Sturnick has been president of Keene State since August 1, 1987. Prior to coming to Keene, Sturnick was president at the University of Maine at Farmington for four and one-half years. She has also held administrative posts at Southwest State University in Marshall, Minnesota and at Capital University in Columbus, Ohio.

Saturday's festivities will begin with an academic procession consisting of 300 people which will take place along Appian Way at 1 p.m. Approximately 145 delegates representing colleges, universities, and other organizations are expected to take part in the procession, as well as a number of local people representing their institutions and alumni.

"There are about four times the amount of people we had at the last inauguration," Ron Paradis, director of college relations, said. "We're thrilled with the response we're getting from other schools."

The inauguration itself will begin at 1:30 p.m. Speaking at the event will be Dr. Marjorie Downing Wagner, the first woman to serve as president at a four-year state university (Sanoma State). She will be Jeanne Goulet, recipient of the Keene State Student Leadership Award, is presented her award from Ellen Lowe, director of campus activities.

Goulet honored for leadership

By LAUREN GLOVER
Equinox Reporter

Jeanne M. Goulet was awarded the Keene State Award for Excellence in Student Leadership at Sunday's Student Leadership Banquet in the Dining Commons.

Goulet is a senior at Keene State, majoring in Environmental Studies. She has been involved with the Newman Student Organization since her freshman year, first as a member, then as secretary and treasurer.

As president of the Newman Student Organization Goulet said she does "everything" such as helping to plan events, occasionally filling in for the other officers, being on the presidents' council, keeping up relations with the Newman Center and cleaning the Center.

Goulet said she was extremely surprised by the award because, even though "I knew I was a contender," she did not think she would receive it.

Ellen Lowe, director of campus activities, made the formal presentation during the banquet held to honor student leaders on campus. During the presentation, Lowe noted Goulet's many activities, such as her work with OXFAM, volunteer community work, helping to revitalize R.O.C.K.S., and her senior project working with the Southwest Region Planning Commission in Swansey.

"Behind the scenes," Lowe said, "(Goulet) has worked quietly to assure that a better future is obtainable and that our individual and collective dreams can indeed become our tomorrows."

As for her own tomorrow, Goulet said she has already begun looking for a job with either the government or private organizations.

Henderson selected as musical achiever

By LAUREN A. BORSA
Equinox Executive Editor

Singer Carlesta Henderson, associate professor of music at Keene State, has been selected as an outstanding achiever in music by the National Black Music Caucus. She will receive her award and be honored at an awards banquet on Friday evening in Indianapolis, Ind. "It's a collective award based on my years of performing," Henderson said Monday. "It's kind of nice to have it come together in a national way," she said.

Music has always been an integral part of Henderson's life. Her family's background includes involvement in both the church and music. "I've always known it would be music for me," she said. As a child Henderson's voice had "an unusual strength," she said. It was much more developed, with the strength of an adult's voice, she said.

Henderson attended Howard University in Washington, D.C. where she earned a MUSB in music and music education. Henderson also received her doctorate at Columbia University in the 1970s and spent many years working in public schools in Virginia.

"My career has always given a double road as teacher and performer," she said.

Henderson's singing talent has allowed her to travel and perform in other countries as well. In 1984, she travelled to Munich, Germany where she performed in an International Chamber. During the Chamber, Henderson sang in recitals and was coached by Eley Ameling, a singer on the international scene.

She also travelled to Darby, England for three months in 1983 through the International Education program at Keene State. In Darby, she acted as a tutor and faculty liaison with the school. While in England, she performed two recitals with the Darby singers and one by herself.

Some of Henderson's favorite pieces of music include French, German, American and Italian art songs.

"I think a singer has to sing in all types of styles," she said. She also noted that a singer is trained to be flexible. "We learn to be stylistically true," she said.

Before coming to Keene State in 1978, Henderson did extensive performing in New York City. While in New York, she taught at Baruch

Wilson, Peloquin elected to top postions last Thursday

By CHRISTIAN IMPERATO
Equinox Reporter

Keene State students went to the polls last Thursday electing Eric R. Wilson as student body president with 430 votes and Lora J. Peloquin as student body vice president with 301 votes.

"I'm delighted," Wilson said of his victory. "This is something I really wanted."

Wilson's ambitions for the upcoming year include his desire to see more students getting involved with student government. He said the lack of people running for positions on next year's Assembly alerted him to the problems with student participation in student government. Wilson said he plans to offset the problems of low student involvement by opening an office where students can voice their opinions and complaints about the College.

"I want an open forum between the students and the administration with myself acting as a go-between," Wilson said.

Other issues of concern for Wilson include the lack of members in fraternities and sororities involved in student government, and that seniors are not allowed to vote in the general election for student body president and vice president. He hopes to see more Greeks become involved with student politics because they constitute a large percentage of the student body, he said.

Wilson said seniors are an important voice on the campus and have ideas that could be implemented in the future.

"I think they should have a say, even if they won't be here," Wilson said. "The Greeks, as well as other students, need to be involved (in student government) to make it work properly," Wilson said.

In other election results, students elected for class president, vice president, treasurer, and secretary include: Eric R. Wilson, senior class president; Erin M. O'Connor, vice president; Jay B. O'Leary, treasurer; and Sharon L. Maffee, secretary.

Students elected for junior class positions include: Pauline S. Cheng, president; Timothy A. Drew, vice president; Rachel L. Thibault, treasurer; and Robert J. Morrill, and Jane A. Gauthier will share the responsibilities as secretary.

The sophomore class executive positions include: Robert J. Cook, president; Daniel L. Coulon, vice president; Julie A. Jackson, treasurer; and John T. D'Arcy, secretary.

One interesting result of the elections was the surprise victory of Morrill, who was elected as junior class secretary. Morrill did not formally announce a candidacy, but surprisingly found out on Friday that he had been elected.

"It was a mystery to me. I was shocked," Morrill said. "I guess I have to find out what (the job) entails."

Elections for the Student Assembly were also held on Thursday, leaving some positions on the Assembly unfilled. Students elected as senior class representatives include: Michael E. Reny, Richard W. Kendall, Gregory A. Mackey, and Steven F. Haley.

Representing the junior class for one year will be Beth A. Hall and Irene H. Vail, and Timothy A. Drew for two years. Lisa G. Williams, Jean Cherouny, Jonathan E. Leiter, and Robert G. Daigle will represent the sophomore class for one year, and Wendy M. Leone, Karen L. Tauber, and Raquel J. Hills for two years.

The non-traditional students will be represented by Eric Oparowski, Brett H. Nolte, and Jay B.O'Leary.

Activists affected by Jack Kemp's absence

by the College Press Service
Things just are not the same for many conservative college activists since New York Congressman Jack Kemp dropped out of the race for the Republican presidential nomination in late March.

And Vice President George Bush has not lit any fires among campus Republicans, who claim credit for delivering an impressively large student vote for Ronald Reagan in 1980 and 1984.

"It will be hard for me to get excited about Bush," said Dennis Kilcoyne, former executive director of the national College Republicans and a self-described "disciple of Kemp."

"Kemp was the one who excited students," Tony Zagotta, an Illinois State senior and former Kemp campaign aide, added.

"I was taken by him, as were the majority of College Republican activists," Zagotta said. "He's a young, dynamic, energetic candidate. His message of hope, opportunity and economic growth struck a chord among students who will soon be leaving school and entering the job market."

"Kemp," Kilcoyne summarized, "Cut through the gibberish."

It was no secret that much of the Kronicle budget proposal denied

By MATTHEW BLATHROW
Editorial Editor

A proposed budget of $32,775 for the Kronicle was voted down by the Student Assembly at its meeting held in the Waltz Lecture Hall last night.

"The Kronicle seems to have a financial problem every year," said Assembly Treasurer Jay O'Leary.

"They agree they have a problem, and it can't continue the way it is. There's been a lot of problems with the Kronicle this year. I have asked a lot of questions and found that there are contracts made which are not being kept," O'Leary said.

One of the main problems with the Kronicle is its constitution, O'Leary said.

"If you have ever read the Kronicle's constitution you know that it's not worth the piece of paper it's written on. They still have $10,000 left in their account, and if they had followed their budget from the beginning of the year, they would have had enough money," O'Leary said.

Another issue addressed by members of the Assembly concerning the Kronicle is that if work on the yearbook is offered as a class for credit, the college will acquire revenue from the class. Some Assembly members said such revenue should go to support such a class. Carol S. Henry, interim vice president of student Affairs, tried to clarify to the Assembly that what is being funded is the yearbook itself, not the class.

"If there are credits given, that means the school is getting revenue from the class and should pay for the class. But the Assembly is not paying for the class; they're paying for the book," said Henry.

Dr. Richard Foley, the Kronicle's advisor, explained to the Assembly, "I've inherited this organization from last year. I only took it if I could turn it around, part of that meant offering the Kronicle for credit."

O'Leary questioned why Foley had entered a $3,000 advisor fee into the Kronicle budget. "No advisors get Student Activity fee money," said O'Leary.

"The point is, advisors have been given release time in return for being organization advisors," said Foley. By putting the $3,000 advisor fee into the Kronicle's budget request Foley said he would get the attention of the administration.

"It's like catching the attention of the mule by hitting it over the head with a two-by-four," Foley explained.

The budget proposal of $32,775 for the Kronicle was viewed as a large proposal by Assembly members who said it seemed like a lot of money for a publication that traditionally is only purchased by seniors.

"The student body can not expect us to pay $32,775 for a yearbook that only goes to 400 people," said Brett Nolte, freshman representative.

A motion was finally made by Nolte that the Assembly, "fund the Kronicle's '88-'89 year book for $21,025, and other funding will have to come from the sale of the yearbook, advertisers, and the institution."

"The $21,025 will be put on hold while we work out the details of where the other approximate $11,000 will come from," he said. The motion was passed unanimously by the Assembly.

Also at last night's Assembly meeting next year's Assembly officers were elected. Next year's executive board will consist of: Chairman, Brett Nolte; Treasurer, Jay O'Leary; and Secretary, Wendy Leoney.

In other business, WKNH, the College radio station, had its budget proposal passed unanimously for the 1987-1988 academic year by the Assembly. The station will receive $22,585.00, a $5,000 increase in its budget.

The Assembly also passed the Keene State Film Society's proposed budget which includes a $6,000 increase to aid in the organization's efforts to provide free admission to movies for college students.

"The $6,000 increase is to make movies free to Keene State students and to provide a special series on Thursday nights," O'Leary said.

"This may not be their budget every year, but we feel we would like to try offering free movies to students next year."

"It's another way to provide students with a non-alcoholic choice and that's what we're trying to provide," said Mark Henderson, non-traditional representative.

WKNH elects executive board

Michael D. Plante was elected general manager for WKNH, the campus radio station during elections held last Tuesday. This is the second year-in-a-row that Plante was elected for the position.

In other election results, Diane G. Travato was elected as station manager, Christopher J. Fortier, program director; Lisa C. Pruchansky, news director; Douglas C. Johnson, music director; and Steven Langs, public affairs director.

Travato said she is happy with the turn-out of the election results. "I'm confident with the new executive board," she said. "I think they're all very competent people."

Japanese film to be presented from College Relations-

The Keene State Film Society will present the film "No Regrets For Our Youth" at 7 and 9:15 p.m. on April 21 to April 23. The film will be presented at 7:30 p.m. only on April 24.

The movie was released in 1946 and depicts the story of a young Japanese woman who matures against a backdrop of war and politics. The film follows Yukie Yagihara's development from a spoiled, selfish, only child who studied piano and flower arrangement to a woman who carries the ashes of her executed lover to his family. It then portrays how she stays to work in the rice paddies and improves the lives of farm women.

Admission to the film is $3.50, $3 for students with an ID, $1.75 for children 12 and younger, and $2.50 for everyone on April 21.

Colleges issue smoking policies

by the college press service

A few more campuses adopted tougher smoking rules in recent weeks.

Just after Stanford University announced in early March it would become the first school in the country to ban smoking in most outdoor areas as well as in classrooms, University of Illinois associate Chancellor Richard Wilson said UI might soon extend its smoking bans to all office and reception areas.

In New Orleans, Tulane University's new policy banning smoking in all indoor public areas as well as campus vehicles went into effect in March.

And University of Nebraska-Lincoln deans met March 14 to propose adopting a no-smoking policy for all campus public areas as well as offices used by more than 1 person.

Nebraska business Dean Gary Schwendiman said he was "surprised" there had "been absolutely no opposition" to the plan, but not everyone is happy about increasingly smokeless American campuses.

On February 25, University of California at Davis students lit up in a Memorial Union protest of a no-smoking policy in a coffee shop in the building.

"We (smokers) pay the same (union) fees as the rest of the student body," smoker Matt Gallagher told the Aggie, Cal-Davis's student paper. "We deserve equal use of the facilities."

Time to wake up Israel

On April 13, The New York Times printed a story explaining that Israel Deputy Prime Minister, Yitzak Navon, and Justice Minister Avraham Sharir, would be arriving in Warsaw that day to attend a week long ceremony in memory of the Warsaw ghetto uprising 45 years ago.

In the 1943 Warsaw ghetto uprising many brave and valiant Jewish people gave their lives fighting against overwhelming odds for freedom from persecution by the German Nazis.

The article went on to say, "The ceremonies will encompass a march of the living, by more than 1,000 young Jews from Israel and other countries at the site of the Auschwitz death camp in southern Poland, and the unveiling of a monument...to mark the loading place in Warsaw where in 1942 and 1943 more than 3,000 Warsaw Jews were loaded onto trains that carried them to the Treblinka death camp."

The Jewish people were persecuted by the German Nazis because of their religion and their heritage. The Jewish people have not forgotten what an injustice was done to them, and they do not intend for the world to forget. This is as it should be. However, ironically, Israel is forgetting the message that she is trying to make the rest of the world remember.

Wake up, Israel! You cannot have it both ways. Blowing up Palestinian homes, deporting, and murdering Palestinian people is in no way teaching the world about religious and racial tolerance which your people should understand, having experienced these atrocities first-hand.

Academics questioned by Johnny

By Mathew Blathrow
Recently a friend of mine, "Johnny B. Student," came to me all excited waving a letter into the air and yelling, "Ye-haw, I'm an egghead at last! Mom is going to be so proud!"

By the way he was carrying on, I thought Johnny had paid a visit to Penuche's or something. When Johnny finally calmed down he showed me the letter he had been waving in his hand. It read: "Dear Johnny, Congratulations on your singular distinction of a 6.0. grade point average for the fall semester! We're glad to see that you have been taking advantage of our fine college facilities and made them pay off for you! We would give you a scholarship Johnny, but you don't quite meet the requirements. You see, to receive a scholarship you need a 6.01 semester average. Sorry. Better luck next time. The letter was signed by the administration of the college Johnny attends.

Well, needless to say, I was very proud of my friend Johnny and told him so. But Johnny had this puzzled look. He looked again at the letter and scratched his head. "Yea, I was pretty excited to get this letter, but there's one part here I don't understand." He pointed to the part of the letter that read, "We honor students for many things, but the most important aspect of collegiate life is, obviously, the academic."

"How come if the most important part of college life is 'obviously' the academic, the library closes too early, and our library has the most limited selection of resources in the entire system of Higher Education in this state," Johnny wondered aloud.

"I confessed that I had no idea. 'How come they are going to build an athletic stadium on the flood plain across the river, yet the library doesn't even have one book of poetry by Paul Laurence Dunbar?'" Johnny continued. Again, I confessed to Johnny that I was completely clueless on this matter.

"Why do you suppose I can't get any financial aid? I'm a pretty good student and my folks can't afford to take out a second mortgage on the house because they're retiring," continued Johnny. "I mean, if they say they value academics that's great, but don't you have to be in school to give them something to value?"

"Gee Wiz Matt, did you know that the U.S. Government spends less than one percent of its total budget on education? Yet they tell us the most important job is educating America's youth, and that we're the greatest resource," Johnny persisted. "How's a guy supposed to get educated and be all academic if he can't even afford to go to school!"

At this point Johnny crumpled up the letter he had shown me and started to stomp off, muttering under his breath.

"Hey Johnny!" I called after him, "Where ya going?"

"To my room to study," he replied, "because the library is closed, and they no longer have a 24-hour study center. I guess they needed the space to enlarge the bur-sar's office or something." Johnny yelled.

Apathy on campus still a problem

To the editor:

I am writing to you about the continuing problem of student apathy, which I am against, on the Keene State College campus. Student indifference is a widespread, common problem throughout many colleges, so Keene State is not alone in facing this dilemma. The topics which students feel apathy over are as widespread as the problem itself. Two good examples pertain to eating at the Commons and being present in class.

I often wonder if upbringing (values, conscientious parents) plays a part in a student's outlook on school and if so, just how much? Obviously peer pressure plays a large role. Examples of this are in abundance. If one person talks of how bad the food is at the Commons, many times a chain reaction will occur; the person being spoken to will in turn talk to another. If a friend is not going to class and wants to party, one may be tempted to do the same because indifference may be felt toward being present in class which many times is important enough to affect the grade in that class. This in turn is apathy toward learning. If learning was important enough then party or not, the effort would be made to attend that class.

If one were studious and concerned, other students' apathy could be used to help push one into being different by not procrastinating and accomplishing what needs to be done, when it needs to be done.

I am against student apathy because it does not prove productive to the future. Those who are apathetic now will one day wish they had been otherwise, and had used their college years more wisely. Even though student apathy is a large problem it is not one that can not be overcome. With the help of more dynamic professors and an able student body, more large group oriented activities and better student attitudes, student apathy could be greatly diminished.

Spring Weekend events announced

To the editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to invite the entire student body of Keene State to the Spring Weekend 1988 events sponsored by the Social Activities Council.

Friday night, April 22 is the Ray Boston Beach Party in the Mabel Brown room, starting at 8 p.m. Saturday, April 23 is the inauguration dance in the Student Union. There will be two dance bands, "Look One Look" and "In the Flesh," and also that night in the Union Station there will be loads of free food ranging from egg rolls to chicken wings.

A great time is had by all who participate in Spring Weekend 1988. I would also like to inform the student body that this is the first year in S.A.C. history that the entire weekend is absolutely free to every Keene State student. It has been a goal of the Social Activities Council to bring quality entertainment at a reasonable price to the students of this campus, and we are proud that we outdid ourselves this time.

Also, I would like to congratulate the members who were selected as the 1988-89 executive board of

S.A.C. I am confident that they will do an outstanding job next year, and I wish them the best of luck!

Sincerely, Scott Kuhnly
President, Social Activities Council

Student involvement sought for Spring Weekend activities

To the editor:

Attention Students! Getting psyched for Spring Weekend scheduled for April 22, 1988 (Ray Boston Beach Party)?

How would you like to be a part of the most spectacular Spring Weekend ever, here at Keene State? If you're interested, there will be two information sessions on Wednesday, April 20 at 5 p.m. and Thursday, April 21 at 5 p.m. in the S.A.C. Office (located in the Student Union near the stairs). If you are unable to attend either information session, please contact Jenn Kenneson at 352-9683 Rm. 210 ASAP!

Help make Spring Weekend 1988 one to remember! Your help will be greatly appreciated by those of us here at S.A.C. Thanks and remember Spring Weekend 1988 is free.

Jenn Kenneson
Major Weekends' Coordinator.

Lack of interest in Hart's forum discussed

To the editor:

We are writing this letter after having attended the open forum for students to meet Dr. Rosemary Hart. Dr. Hart is a candidate for the position of vice president of student affairs. She was on campus last Thursday and Friday.

We were disappointed and frustrated at the lack of student attendance at this forum. Of the 3,100 currently enrolled students, five attended. Of these five, there was one member of the Greek community, one non-traditional, and three traditional students.

We realize it's a busy time of the year; however, there was plenty of time for people to play frisbee and sit in the sun that afternoon. We do not believe that students do not care. Rather, in discussing this matter, we feel the following may be possible causes:

—Lack of general awareness/knowledge of what the vice president of student affairs job entails.

—Lack of communication within the campus community.

—Not understanding how the selection process works, and that student involvement/input plays an integral part in the final selection of a candidate.

—Not being aware of the importance in selecting a strong staff to lead with Dr. Sturrock in creating a stronger college community.

The vice president of student affairs is a key position in any college. This is especially true at Keene State where there has been so much discontent among students, administration, faculty and staff, particularly in the areas of communication and cooperation.

Keene State has been through an interim period within the past 18 months to two years. It was frustrating, but it is also a chance for a new beginning. It is important that students involve themselves with the selection processes, and to insure a positive future for the college. We would be interested to hear how other people feel about this.

Opinion, answer for energy issue suggested

To the editor:

I want to share with your readers my opinion on the energy issue. First, I will say that I'm not completely for or against nuclear power. Secondly, I will say that I believe there is a better answer to our energy problem. I think Mr. Curran's article last week concerning nuclear power shows that he is well educated on this subject. However, I do not completely agree with him.

Although I agree with Curran on how dangerous the burning of fossil fuels can also be, I think nuclear power can be just as dangerous, if not more lethal than other energy sources used today. According to the Department of Energy, 71 million pounds of radioactive waste were discharged into the air, water, and ground from 1946 to 1983 at seven facilities. Additional wastes were discharged from other sources. For example, 51 million pounds of radioactive wastes were carelessly buried at the Y-12 plant at Oak Ridge without any regard for the environment or public safety.

This toxic material had done untold damage to the water in our ground, and to the health of human beings. Although Curran is right in saying that by weight there are more toxic wastes coming from non-nuclear sources, another factor must be considered. These wastes are nowhere near as toxic as plutonium. I agree with him in his claim that our's is not a hazard free world. Unfortunately, even if we all decide to get rid of nuclear power people will still die in coal mines and automobiles.

However, I believe there is a long term answer through which we can alleviate many of our problems concerning energy. This answer may be a little inconvenient, but it can help both the environment and our energy problems. It is very simple: if you are afraid of nuclear power, if you want to save more money on your utility bill, if you want a less toxic environment, if you want a stronger America, then conserve energy!

Imagine how much energy this country would save if supermarkets put doors on their refrigerators! How much energy would we save right here at Keene State College if the lights in the library and the science center were turned off at night? Our country has only 1/16 of the world's population, but we use 1/3 of the world's energy. Is this necessary? I will admit that I waste energy.

Students, teams, coaches awarded

By THOMAS ALMEIDA
Equinox Sports Editor

Keene State's Athlete of the Year Award was presented at last Thursday's student awards banquet to Denise Lyons, a member of the women's soccer team. The award is voted on by the coaches from both the men's and women's teams. The sophomore from Limerick, Ireland also received high praise from her coach, David Lombardo.

"We are very lucky to have her," Lombardo said, pointing out how vital Lyons has been to the team. In the two years Lyons has been with the Owls, she has been involved in 1/2 of the scoring. In two seasons, she has scored 21 goals, according to Lombardo.

Lyons is also no stranger to notoriety since she is in the Guinness Book of World Records. She was the youngest soccer player to represent a country in international competition at the age of 15. Representing Ireland, Lyons has played teams from all over the world, and her record replaced the record set by soccer player Pele.

Lombardo is excited about the chances of the women's soccer team winning the first Division II Championship next year with Lyons on the team.

"Surprised and quite honored" were the remarks of Kristine Sears when asked how she felt about winning Keene State's Student Athlete Award, for her participation on the women's ski team this year. She was also honored at last week's banquet.

Sears, in her last year at Keene

State, said she wished she could be a part of next year's team, which she predicted to be successful. After graduation, Sears plans to live in the Keene area and work until she applies for law school.

Other honors to students included the ECAC New England Champions trophies to both the men's and women's soccer teams, the women's basketball team, and the men's cross country team.

Peter Thomas was also named New England Cross Country Coach of the Year for the second year in a row. John LeMieux, who led the women's basketball team to the ECAC, was named New England Collegiate Conference Coach of the Year. The Lady Owls finished 21-8 in LeMieux's first season with the team.

David Lombardo, coach of the women's soccer team, presents Denise Lyons with the Athlete of the Year Award Thursday night at the sports banquet.

Baseball team's record on upswing

By PAUL AUGERI
News Editor

Last spring Ken Howe and John Scheinman took over the Keene State baseball team as interim coaches. Last spring was not one to remember.

The Owls had to wait 11 games before they finally recorded their first win. Keene also had the worst team earned-run-average (over 10.00) in New England at that time.

What a difference a year can make. The new-and-improved Owls won three of four games last week, including a 9-1 shelling of Daniel Webster on Sunday afternoon, to raise their record to 8-4 at the halfway point of the 1988 season. The Owls have shown strong vital signs in both the hitting and pitching departments. A team-ERA of 4.25 and batting average of .276 make up the components of the Owls' consistent performance. Coaches Howe and Scheinman are two men who could not ask for more.

"We are very pleased with what we see so far," said Scheinman. "Our pitchers are working hard to be good and so are the hitters. Each day we are receiving timely hitting from a different guy. That's important."

On Sunday afternoon, Kurt Barnard went the distance on the mound for Keene in the 9-1 single-game victory over Daniel Webster. The southpaw also struckout nine.

The Owls scored one run in each of five, separate innings. Keene exploded for four runs in the fifth in pushing the game out of reach. Steve Erdody and Tom Soucy each had three RBI while John Luopa went two for four including two ribbies.

In Thursday's makeup game with Lyndon State, the Owls held on, 12-11, after they took an 8-3 lead in the eighth inning. Lyndon scored five times in the top-half of the inning to tie it at 8-8.

After the Owls scored three runs in their next at-bat, Lyndon again rallied for three in the top-half of the ninth to tie the score 11-11. But Keene was not to be embarrassed.

Erdody led off the bottom-half of the ninth with a walk but was immediately forced at second on Ken Gresek's sacrifice attempt. With Mike Leahy pinch-running for Gresek, Kurt Niemic drilled a double off the fence in right-centerfield for the winning run.

"Erdody put out the fire," said Scheinman when the co-captain got the last four batters for the win.

Keene also split a doubleheader earlier in the week with Plymouth State, 3-2 and 9-3. Keene scored three runs in the fifth in helping Rob Yeaw get the win. John Luopa's two-run double drove in Matt Cicco and Mike Dodge, whom had reached base earlier with a walk and error respectively.

Rick Pearce recorded the save in a lackluster finish. Pearce forced Plymouth's Tim Hennessy to fly out on a 3-2 pitch with the bases loaded to end the game.

Mike Leahy "pitched well" according to Scheinman, "but unfortunately we didn't play well behind him as we committed four errors." The Owls only collected three hits in the 9-3 nightcap-loss, two coming from the bat of Lance Smith.

"Plymouth is the best team we have beaten since Coach Howe and I have been here," said Scheinman. "I believe this is the first game Plymouth has lost in New England in two years."

The Owls are now 8-4 and a fair amount of those wins have come from arms rather than bats. And Scheinman knows who gets the recognition, in that area.

Lacrosse team beats Bridgewater

By PAUL AUGERI
News Editor

The Keene State lacrosse team did get off to a slow start this season. If a slow start is present either in the standings or on the stats sheet, a coach can always look forward to room for improving. And the Owls are improving.

No, Keene could not overcome the minute odds of upsetting Dean Junior College, but the Owls survived in their battle with Bridgewater State. A late rally and superb goaltending by Joe Fallon enabled the Owls to get by visiting Bridgewater, 9-7 last Saturday at Carpenter Field.

Keene has evened its mark at 3-3, winning three of its last four in order to do so. Coach Jim Draper was very pleased with what he saw in the Bridgewater victory, and was even happy with his squad's performance in the 14-4 loss to Dean.

"We played one of our best matches all year against Dean," said Draper. "Right now I'm emphasizing discipline, but we are showing good patience on offense and moving the ball well."

Draper was impressed with Dean's program. The two-year school usually sees its graduates flock to other top-notch institutions such as Syracuse and Boston College. Dean's athletic director coaches the squad, so you can tell that lacrosse is treated as the eighth wonder of the world at Dean.

Goalkeeper Fallon continues to be the source of strength on defense for the Owls. Fallon was barraged with 53 shots against Dean while letting the 14 that appeared in the scorebook go by.

The Bridgewater script still featured the same plot as Fallon turned away 44 shots in the 9-7 win. The Owls trailed 5-1 after the opening period but surged back before halftime to stake a 6-5 contest in favor of Bridgewater.

Keene scored a couple of quick goals to start the second half, and the Owls' defense held Bridgewater to only one goal in the final 30 minutes. "We came back together and showed a lot of courage and guts," said Draper. "We played real strong, team defense and got into our type of ball-control style of offense. The team gave a good effort and that's how we try to play."

Mark Chilicki scored four goals and Karl Bjorklund added two for the 3-3 Owls.

Draper was indeed right when he said Fallon was "seeing a lot of rubber" in the net on Saturday.

Although Bridgewater's neverending shooting on goal was spectacular, Draper said that his club does not have to shoot so much in order to score goals.

"We like to control the ball," said Draper, "and in doing so we score at a higher percentage. We could take 20 shots on goal and put in (as many as) 10. So our shots on goal may not be high but our chances of scoring are," he added.

Keene will take its .500 mark to Carpenter Field today against "a solid squad" in Northeastern University at 4 p.m. The Owls are also looking forward to their rematch with North Adams State on Saturday in North Adams, Mass.

The Owls upended North Adams 12-9 earlier this month, but the real showdown will occur a week from today when Castleton State moves into town. Castleton shaded the Owls in March, so you can bet on Draper and his squad repaying the favor.

Lady Owls shake St. A in doubleheader win

By THOMAS ALMEIDA
Equinox Sports Editor

It was a very productive week for Jennifer Dyson and the Keene State softball team. Keene State swept a doubleheader against St. Anselm and improved their record to 12-13. This is the first time in five years Keene State has won a dozen games.

Dyson recorded her sixth straight win with a brilliant three-hit shut out in the first game against St. Anselm.

Keene State won the second game 6-5, after trailing 5-3. Laura Mackay continued her productive year with a two-run triple in the first inning. The sophomore slugger, who is batting .386, won the battle of nerves as she was walked in the fifth inning of the second game with the bases loaded.

Last week, the Owls swept a doubleheader from Bentley College and split a doubleheader with New Hampshire College. On Thursday, Keene State's Dyson stymied the Bentley batters with a one-hit shutout, 2-0. The second game was a wild one, as Bentley rallied from four runs down to tie the score in the seventh inning at 10-10. It was not until the ninth inning, when Jennifer Knox hit a sacrifice fly with the bases loaded, winning the game 11-10.

On Friday, the Owls split their doubleheader with New Hampshire College. Dyson continued her "hot" week by pitching a two-hitter in game one. Dyson was helped with extra base hits by Laura Mackay and Missy Riddle, who scored runs in the third inning. But New Hampshire College came from behind in game two and won 5-2.

Shmoldars, Phi Mu Delta are Rec basketball wonders

By RAYMOND MACFARLAND
Equinox Correspondent

The Keene State intramural department has crowned two new basketball champions. The Phi Mu Delta "A" team and the Shmoldars finished the season as top cats in the men's and women's basketball leagues respectively.

The Shmoldars entered the final game with a record of 8-1 while their opponent, the Cards, had an identical record. The Shmoldars' only blemish came when they forfeited to Kappa Gamma during the regular season. The Cards acquired their lone booby at the hands of the Shmoldars in the regular season by a score of 31-16.

The Shmoldars entered the Vamer Dome as eight-point favorites. The Cards entered the game with all hopes on the shoulders of Kathy Karr and Tina Aldrich. Karr entered the final averaging 15 points a game in the playoffs while Aldrich boasted a 10-point average.

Neither of the two disappointed their teammates. Aldrich collected 11 points and Karr added 10 as the Shmoldars were crowned champs, 47-33.

The difference in the game was the balanced attack of the Shmoldars. Jen Birdsey flew with 10, Heather Doucette met with another 10 and Mo Osbourne played sniper from 3-point land with nine. Kelly Getman also won an Academy Award for making five trips to the foul line and finishing with six points.

The Cards are a young team, and if they stay together the squad should be the favorite to take it all next year.

The men's game boasted a Greek rivalry matchup between the Alpha Ducks and Phi Mu Delta "A".

PMD found a key to the Vamer Dome with a 9-0 record while the Ducks broke in with a 7-2 mark.

The difference in the game came at the foul line. Phi Mu Delta attempted 22 gifts while Alpha Pi Tau had only seven chances. PMD collected 14 while the Ducks had five. And in the end, Phi Mu Delta came away with a 47-36 victory, their first-ever championship in the intramural world in two years.

High scorers for the 'green and gold' were the Filiat twins, collecting ten and 11 points respectively. John Hornyak led the Ducks' cause with 10.

Phi Mu Delta boasted the "thunderous trio" in Bill "Scrape the Window Sill" Bird and twins Mark "The Rebound Shark" and Scott "The Golden Shot" Filiat. All three finished the season with over 100 points. Bird finished with 108 while the twins copy-catted with 103 apiece.

Alpha Pi Tau held residence for the "tenacious trio" of "Rim Bendi" Brendan Perry, John "My Shot is On" Hornyak and "The Jungle Bungle Boogin'" Jim Tatko. All three combined for 21 of Alpha's 44 points in their win over the Kamikazes, 44-41. The three were also fed throughout the season by the "dance and dish" of Billy Bob Deshaies.

But the game itself was enjoyable to watch especially for the avid WWF fans as the contest closely resembled a battle-royale steel-cage match. It was something the Story brothers of the Dingleberries would be proud of.

Referee sees no 'party' being a basketball official

By Thomas Almeida
 "Come on ref." "Call it fair ref."
 "You're blind ref."

Those are just a few of the statements you hear as a basketball official for Recreational Sports at Keene State.

Each time you put on a black-striped shirt and throw a whistle around your neck, it is like putting a bull's-eye on your forehead for target practice. Walking onto the court for each game is like walking into the wrong neighborhood in New York with a water pistol for protection. You get just as much respect as Rodney Dangerfield and end up feeling like you are wearing a shirt that says you support drug testing for students. And what for? A scanty four dollars a game.

Now what makes a person take such abuse for an average of 16 dollars a week? There is no easy answer, even if there is an answer at all. Maybe it's the education I've received.

After my first season as an official I've learned a lot. I've learned how hard it is to deal with 10 superstars who are on the same court, especially the Larrys and Michaels. I've also learned that everyone knows the rules of basketball better than the official, and that you're not being fair if you blow your whistle because you saw a foul. Most of all, I've learned that being an official makes you a target for everyone — players and fans.

Now I can sympathize with all referees and umpires who must deal with competitive athletes and frustrated coaches. It's a tough task. The official's job is to make sure the game goes along without interference, and that neither side has an unfair advantage against the other side. This is a simple definition; however, it is difficult to achieve on the court. Not only do you have to deal with sensitive egos but also with unruly fans. Spectators on the sidelines always know more than the official. I just can't imagine being an official in front of 35,000 of them.

As an official you are always open to criticism because that is part of the job. Everyone knows more than you do about the sport. It doesn't matter that you took a class and had to take a written test to become an official. Fans still know more about the rules and regulations than the official.

Example: one player goes up for a basket and misses. "Foul," he yells. Of course there was a foul, he couldn't have missed the easy hoop.

Superstars don't miss easy shots. But when they do it's because someone else fouled them. The most common complaint is, "come on ref, call it fair." I thought I was paid to call fouls, not fair.

Then the time comes when you do blow the whistle. God forbid you might be wrong. "Oh my God," the player always yells. According to the superstars they don't even touch the other players. Of course not. The red mark on the player's arm is self-inflicted. The superstar jumps up and down, pouts, and his face turns red. The referee has now made another friend.

Maybe that's why I like officiating so much. You make so many friends. People who have never even talked to you before now have all kinds of things to say. Everyone has a warm comment for you, "Open your eyes," or "are you blind?". The more diplomatic, no less annoying, 'superstar' comes up during the timeout and says, "Watch this guy, he's fouling me all the time". Afterwards, the other guy comes up and says the same thing. Someone's fouling someone, and I haven't blown my whistle yet. That can't be!

The official is supposed to see everything at all times. Even if it means you have to use your x-ray vision to look through bodies to see the play. Maybe that's what an official should be: superman.

So why do I do it? Why open myself to constant abuse for four dollars a game? One of my first games, one ex-official "welcomed me to the world of officiating" and walked away with a sinister grin. It's he same respects, it's a rewarding job. Despite the hassles, abuse and name-calling I'll try again next year. Which should please a few. Taking the same abuse, making more 'friends' and doing the dirty work. But, it's all worth it at the end of a game when someone comes up to you and says, "good game Ref."

Maybe that's the answer.

Kemp's popularity still lingers among college crowd

College Republican national leadership supported Kemp, although the group, like the Republican National Committee, is supposed to stay neutral during the primary and caucus season.

College Republican national Chairman Stockton Reeves had close ties to the Kemp campaign, touring Central America with him last year. Reeves' predecessor, David Miner, worked on the Kemp campaign in North Carolina.

In fact, the group's ties to Kemp helped provoke state and local Republican protests that — combined with other criticisms of Reeves' leadership abilities and allegations that he cheated to win his post — led campus groups in Florida, Missouri and California into debilitating internal splits and struggles during the last 12 months.

Now the activists say they will campaign hard for Bush, whose nomination seems all but certain, but stress their hearts still belong to Kemp.

"I'm a party person," said Mary Kendrigan, a Northern Illinois university senior and former campus College Republican president. "I'll work for George Bush, although Kemp is my first choice. I still wear my Jack Kemp for President button."

"The best thing concerned young people can do now is get behind Bush," said North Carolina College Republican State Chairwoman Zann Bunn, a North Carolina State student and Kemp campaign volunteer.

"Our hopes were not played out, but that's something that happens in every race."

"I want a conservative in the White House," said Kilcoyne. "I also want a Republican. But someone has to stoke the fire in your belly. Why work for a guy like Bush who is likely to sell out the cause?"

It is Kemp, and not the vice president, who these students see as the natural heir to President Reagan's legacy. In fact, they credit Kemp with creating many of the economic programs that became symbols of the Reagan years.

"If you want to continue the Reagan Revolution, Jack Kemp is the man to do it," said Bill Peaslee, a Campbell University law student and former Kemp campaign volunteer aide.

"He created the Reagan Revolution," added Zagotta. "He sold Reaganomics (supply-side economics) to Reagan."

Northern Illinois's Kendrigan said "students lined up behind Kemp because he had a strong voting record to back up his convictions."

He always voted the right way: pro-economic growth, pro-life, and not tax increases."

If Kemp can't be the party's presidential nominee, conservative students would like to see him named as the vice presidential candidate or to a cabinet post. Such an appointment, they say, would allow Bush to show his commitment to the conservative cause.

"Kemp is a prime candidate for vice president," said Kendrigan. "He needs to maintain his position as a spokesman for the conservative movement."

Inaugural activities planned for Saturday said. A dance coinciding with the Ball will also be held in the Mabel Brown Room at 9 p.m.

The festivities will begin on Thursday April 21 and Friday April 22 when several discussion and panel presentations on gender studies will be presented. Dr. Judith Ramaley of the University of Kansas will speak at 8 p.m. on Thursday about "A New Agenda: Why Do We Need Women in Leadership Roles?"

On Saturday night at 9 p.m. an inaugural dance, coinciding with the inaugural ball, will be held in the Mabel Brown Room.

To bring the weekend of celebration to a close, an Interfaith Service led by Father C. Theodore Breslin, and the Rev. Margaret Clemens will be held Sunday at 9 a.m. in the Alumni Recital Hall.

Paradis hopes that students will attend the inauguration ceremony as well as the other events. He is unsure about the total cost of the weekend of activities, but he did say funding is coming from the College budget and various private sources.

"There has been an amount allocated from the college budget" for the ceremonies Paradis said. "But it's hoped that the ball will be self-funding."

Three Rec teams are champs in final league competition

The most exciting game of the championship week involved the Just for Fun league. The game found the East defeating the West in double-overtime 44-41. Andrew Pyszka of the East sent the game into the first OT when he sank two freethrows with 2 seconds left on the clock. Jake Cahoon nailed a jumper and made it a three-point play after getting fouled to keep the East alive at 40-40.

In the second overtime, with less than 1:00 to play and the East trailing by one, Rich Kendall hit a turnaround jumper to put the East up 42-41. Chip Stowell stole the ball and found a streaking Cahoon for the breakaway layup for the final nail in the coffin.

Conservation needs to be implemented to save energy

In fact, almost everyone wastes energy. I think everybody, including myself, should make more of an effort to conserve energy. It is all too easy to blame someone else for our energy problems. The Arabs, the communists, the D.O.E., or even Lester the Lightbulb. But, it is the people who must take it upon themselves to solve this problem, and one way to help this situation is to stop wasting electricity. This may be inconvenient, but it sure beats having a tainted environment. I am not saying this solution will completely rid us of our problem, and one way to help this situation is to stop wasting electricity. This may be inconvenient, but it sure beats having a tainted environment. I am not saying this solution will completely rid us of our problem, or am I claiming it is the only good solution. I am merely saying that conservation will greatly help us all.

ALL SCHOOLS ARE NOT CREATED EQUAL

A major difference between public schools in New Hampshire boils down to the amount of funding communities contribute to education. Teachers' salaries are one of many components affected by the funding system, which almost entirely relies on local resources.

Some school districts believe that quality pay attracts quality teachers, resulting in quality education. Other districts, however, don't believe that top teachers are worth top pay.

In the 1988-89 school year, a new teacher with a bachelor's degree can earn $15,000 in one district and $20,400 in another community. A new teacher with a master's degree can earn $15,900 in one district and $22,100 nearby.

An experienced teacher with a master's degree can earn a maximum of $21,840 in one district and $36,083 elsewhere. Reaching that top salary level, however, can take anywhere from 6 to 27 years, depending on what salary schedule a district offers.

The National Education Association—New Hampshire, an affiliate of the nation's largest teachers' union and professional association, believes good teachers are worth good pay.

Listed below are some of the highest and lowest salaries being paid for the 1988-89 school year, according to contracts settled by April 1.

TEN LOWEST SALARIES

MA Base Salary	MA Base Salary	MA Base Salary	MA Base Salary

TEN HIGHEST SALARIES

Listed below are the 10 highest and lowest maximum salaries teachers can earn according to steps on salary schedules, which are determined by years of experience and education levels. These maximum salaries are paid to teachers with master's degrees, although teachers can sometimes earn higher salaries with additional education, such as an MA+15 or a doctorate. The faster teachers reach the top of the salary schedule and earn maximum pay, the higher their total career earnings will be.

Lowest MA Max. Salary/No. Steps To Reach It	Highest MA Max. Salary/No. Steps To Reach It

Racial problems spark police action

by The College Press Service

In a switch of tactics, administrators at Penn State and the University of California-Berkeley sent in police to break up black student protests of escalating racial confrontations on their campuses.

Racial tensions also erupted, though less violently, at the University of Kentucky and Georgia Southwestern College.

On April 9, police broke up a 15-hour long sit-in at Pennsylvania State University's Telecommunications Building by about 150 black students hoping to dramatize, among other things, their request for more attention to their needs by administrators.

Ninety-one students were arrested, and charged with trespassing.

On the other side of the country, police on April 7 arrested 18 of the black students who had occupied the Berkeley's housing office to demand that three white students who had been harassing a black freshman woman be expelled.

In February and early March administrators and protesting black students entered week-long, peaceful negotiations to end sit-ins and treat racial complaints at Hampshire College and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Minority students at Tompkins-Cortland Community College in New York, the universities of New York at Buffalo, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Iowa, California-Santa Barbara, and Illinois, as well as Dartmouth College and Fairleigh Dickinson University, among others, also have protested alleged campus racism this school year, but the protesters themselves were not arrested.

Administrators at Berkeley and Penn State, however, seemed to run out of patience with their protesters.

After quickly arranging to discipline and move three white students, who verbally harassed and wrecked the bicycle of Freshman Traci Morris, Berkeley administrators sent police to break up the sit-in.

"This protest is the culmination of a lot of different things that have gone unresolved at the university," African Students Association President Michael Stoll said in explaining why the protesters would not move even after hearing that Morris's tormentors had been punished.

Berkeley spokesman Ray Colvig said the 18 students were not detained, but issued summonses for trespassing and released. He characterized the protest — and the police response — as "well-organized and non-violent."

"There was no resistance," Colvig said.

At Penn State, the 150 students who occupied a building for 15 hours saw President Bryce Jordan's "quick" use of force as proof Penn State did not care about them.

"I think it's a terrible message to send to students when the president of the university would rather send state troopers to meet with them than come himself," said student government President Seth Williams, one of those arrested.

"People were manhandled," said Darryl King, a student protest leader. "This is symbolic of the way they treat us here at Penn State."

Brad Hemstreet, a Penn State spokesman, said officials tried to negotiate a settlement and have someone besides Jordan speak to the protesters before police were called in, but the students refused.

But at the University of Kentucky, officials managed to defuse building campus anger about a racial slight without arrests or confrontation.

College and did numerous radio and recital performances and sang at Baruch's commencement in Carnegie Hall. She was also a paid soloist at the famed Riverside Church where she continued to sing until coming to Keene State.

As a professor at Keene State, Henderson said she is able to give her students "a love of music; the drama of performing."

"I teach people who are going to be teachers in music," she said.

Henderson is also one of the original founders of the National Black Music Caucus. This caucus is an organization associated with the Music Educators National Conference (MENC), which formed in 1972. Henderson said the theme for the MENC focused on American music. She said some people were upset that there had not been any black members on the planning committee for the conference. They were disturbed, she said, because black music was such an integral part in the development of American music, yet there were no representatives.

Members of the Keene State community will have a chance to hear the talent of Henderson when she sings during the invocation of the inauguration of Judith A. Sturnick, president of Keene State.

Experience, work attained through involvement in co-op CO-OP

Keene State, is now working part-time as an intern in accounting.

"It is a great experience. I am learning things I would never learn in a classroom," Rudolf said. Rudolf also found that his work in the co-op is not what he wants to do for his career. But, he feels that he has learned a lot by taking on extra jobs within his co-op such as utilizing his computer skills.

"One class that Keene does not offer is Life 101, and the co-op gives you a chance to walk out the door before your time," Rudolf said.

Not only is the co-op program valuable to the student, but it is very valuable to the employer as well.

One company that Keene State had many programs with is the Peerless Insurance Company of Keene. Richard Hyatt from Peerless Insurance, who works with personnel, believes that the co-op program works very well.

"It is an excellent program, and the need is met to train a lot of young energetic people."

Hyatt believes there are two main benefits to the employer of a co-op program. "First, there is a lot of work to be done for intelligent interested people, second the program allows people to develop their interests and ideas," Hyatt said. The Peerless Insurance Company hires roughly six co-op students after their graduation, he said.

Delio wins award for her essay in magazine

By LAUREN GLOVER
Equinox Reporter

Diane Delio, author of "The Humour in Hamlet," has been awarded the Frederic Fader Award of $200 for the best critical essay to appear in The Rectangle, the magazine of Sigma Tau Delta, the International English Honor Society. Delio was notified of the award after being honored for having "The Humour in Hamlet" chosen as one of nine essays nation-wide to be published in The Rectangle.

"It excited me, but made me nervous," Delio said. People in Christian circles "have always been bugging me to write and I laughed," she said. Now that she has received her award, Delio said she has begun the research on an idea for a book that has been "sitting in the back of (her) mind" for some time. The idea is the "equality between men and women as found in the Word of God."

Delio said she will co-author the book with a friend who is an editor. "In this matter, two heads will be better than one," she said.

"My honor is going to give me a little piece of tradition," she said, by paying for a college ring that she has wanted.

That ring will become a memory, Delio said, because it will remind her of the honor bestowed upon her.

Sheryl Mellon won the tricycle race, along with Deania Parham, for Sigma Rho Upsilon during Greek Week.

Photographer presents film, features outdoors

By CHARLES ORLANDO
Equinox Reporter

Canadian photographer John Wilson presented his film "High Country Adventure" last Thursday in the Waltz Lecture Hall, which concluded the Outdoor Film Adventure Series sponsored by the Biology Club and Beta Beta Beta.

"High Country Adventure" was filmed in the Yukon, located farther north than Alaska. Most of the footage was filmed in late spring, and one of Wilson's intents was to film the porcupine caribou herd during its seasonal migration, he said.

Wilson also explained that during the filming he was stalked by a grizzly bear which he called "his most dangerous encounter." One could see the mounting tension portrayed in the film as the bear gradually approached Wilson while he was filming. The grizzly "was maybe 50 feet away; only ears and eyes in the camera lens," Wilson said. Very quickly; however, the "bear picked up our scent and ran the other way," he said.

Wilson told the audience that the Yukon is under a great deal of scrutiny since many biologists have expressed their concerns about industrialization in the region. The general attitudes of these biologists, Wilson said, is "if they (industries) look for oil, it could create serious problems for the wildlife."

Also noted during the presentation was the tremendous amount of fossils discovered in the Yukon. It is believed through fossil evidence that "27,000 years ago man lived here (the Yukon)," he said.

Wilson, who went to school near Montreal, Canada started his career as a filmmaker in 1971. He learned the craft by apprenticing with a filmmaker rather than going to college.

Dr. Goder, professor in biology, said approximately 200 people usually attended the presentations of the Outdoor Film Presentation Series.

He also said the series has been a ritual at the College for 23 years, and has attracted much interest. He said the films "give many a chance to experience something that they otherwise could not afford."

THE STUDENT NEWSPAPER FOR KEENE STATE COLLEGE

Sturnick inaugurated amid weekend festivities

By PAUL FREEMAN
Equinox Reporter

Judith A. Sturnick accepted the presidential seal of Keene State College in an inaugural ceremony last Saturday afternoon in the Spaulding Gymnasium. The ceremony was the cornerstone of a weekend of events planned around the inauguration of Keene State's seventh president.

"I want to tell you that this is one of the most wonderful days that I have ever spent in my entire life, from beginning to end," Sturnick said in her acceptance speech.

"I truly will give you the very best of my mind, and my heart, and my courage," she said.

The inauguration was preceded by a procession of approximately 300 people along Appian Way. The procession included nearly 145 delegates from other colleges and universities, trustees of the University system, student and alumni representatives, and local officials.

As the delegates entered the gymnasium they passed a line of students who were holding signs, singing and cheering. Some of the signs addressed the lack of housing on campus while others expressed support for Sturnick as the new president.

The songs; however, were addressed to the new president. With guitars in hand, Christopher Fortier and Sanger Robinson led the singing of "Hey Jude" as Sturnick passed by.

"It was not done in a derogatory manner," Fortier said, "it was merely to address the proper party."

Once inside, the ceremony began with Sturnick receiving greetings from Eric Wilson, newly-elected student body president; Keith W. Mistretta, alumni association president; Eleanor M. VanderHaegen, representing the faculty; Claire Van Ummerson, chancellor of the university system; and Aaron A. Lipsky, mayor of Keene who presented Sturnick with the key to the City.

In her greeting, VanderHaegen said, "It is indeed a glorious day for Keene State College." "President Sturnick, you come to a faculty rich in talent and expertise, and we promise to continue exercising these abilities," she said.

However, VanderHaegen went on to say that the educational partnership between the College and the faculty needed resources if it was to continue. She compared Sturnick's task at Keene to that of the Jews in the Old Testament, by saying that Sturnick was faced with making bricks without straw.

VanderHaegen concluded her greeting by calling on the friends of Keene State to help create a new Jerusalem in the foothills of New Hampshire.

The Keynote speaker for the ceremony was Marjorie Downing Wagner. Wagner is a personal friend of Sturnick's as well as the first woman to serve as president of a four-year state university in the United States. Wagner's speech was entitled: "New Leadership: Challenges and Opportunities." In her address, Wagner listed the elements of a "good college" said, "Keene State College has all these things; it is clearly a good college."

After the inaugural ceremony, Sturnick was honored at a reception and an inaugural ball. The Ball was also held in the gymnasium which was decorated for the occasion with columns, boughs and floral arrangements. Ellen Lowe, director of campus activities, described the overall effect as "very greek."

Entertainment for the evening was provided by "The Majestics." A cash bar was available as well as a hot and cold hors d'oeuvres selection that included caviar and smoked salmon.

Ronald D. Herron, former dean of student affairs and vice president of student affairs at Keene State, also attended the inauguration and said he thought Sturnick would do a wonderful job as president.

"There is a great fit in character (between Sturnick and the School)," he said.

At the Ball, Sturnick said, "I'm proud of the campus, but I am really proud of the students. It's been a wonderful day."

Other activities held in conjunction with the inauguration included several discussions and panel presentations, lectures and a dance in the Mabel Brown Room that coincided with the Ball.

Kristine Howland, assistant to the president, said an estimation on the cost of the weekend was still unclear. She did say, however, that the rumored estimate of $45,000 was too high.

"It was much smaller than that," she said.

Students expressed their concerns on Appian Way by way of signs addressed to the College administration, trustees, and public.

Student's demonstration illustrates unity

By LAUREN A. BORSA
Equinox Executive Editor

The possibility of the formation of a new student organization on campus, and a petition requesting extended library hours, are two signs that the student unity exhibited during a demonstration held on campus Saturday has not died. The demonstration was held before the inaugural ceremony of Judith A. Sturnick, president of Keene State.

During the demonstration, students lined the sidewalk outside Spaulding Gymnasium where the inaugural procession passed by. The procession included Keene State faculty, administration and the university system's board of trustees.

By way of signs, singing and clapping, students expressed their grievances with the College, which include lack of housing and the limited library hours. At the same time, students expressed their support for Sturnick as the new president.

The student unity exhibited during the demonstration appears to be continuing since many of the students involved gathered to meet Monday evening in the Randall Hall lobby. Many of the 15 to 20 students attending the meeting were part of Saturday's demonstration, said John Kors, a sophomore and an organizer of Saturday's demonstration. Kors said the meeting resulted in the decision to distribute petitions on campus to gain student support for an extension of the hours of the Mason Library.

Petitioners are requesting that library hours be extended until 12 p.m. Monday through Thursday and until 10 p.m. on Friday. The library is now open until 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday and until 8 p.m. on Friday. Kors said petitioners are also requesting that library hours also be extended on the weekend, as well.

It is also being requested that the Library Conference Room be used

Rich named to administrative post

By CHRISTIAN IMPERATO
Equinox Reporter

The University System of New Hampshire board of trustees voted Saturday to make Barbara Rich the new vice president of academic affairs at Keene State College.

Rich will be replacing Carol S. Henry on July 1 and has already met with some students to discuss her plans for the future. Henry has held the position of vice president of academic affairs on an interim basis for the past two years. She will be returning to her former position as director of residential life.

The trustees approved Rich, who was the choice of Judith Sturnick, president of Keene State, for the position after a search committee was formed to make a recommendation of who they thought should occupy the position of vice president of academic affairs.

Rich met with members of the campus Greek organizations yesterday morning to discuss student involvement at Keene State. She said communication at the College must improve, and that she is hoping the administration and students can work together instead of at different ends of the same spectrum.

Rich is now senior vice president and vice president for student affairs for planning and research at Marymount Manhattan College in Tarrytown, N.Y. She also served as teacher consultant at Highland Park Schools in New Jersey, and as educational specialist at Livingston College of Rutgers University.
