Florence, Sweetheart:

I have tonight off and I am going to the camp movies to see Binger Rogers in "Lady in the dark," not so much because I want to see the picture, but because it will remind me of a perfectly lovely evening I once spent with ^{you} seeing this show. I hear it is as good a picture as it was a show, and I'll tell you about it in to-morrow's letter.

Your Monday letter arrived to-day, and I was sorry to learn that the weather is still nasty back home. However I believe that within the next three weeks you will be with me elsewhere. Please arrange for the car to be put on blocks while you are gone, and also arrange for someone to forward all mail to you several times a week, also see that you carry a good balance in the checking account, or other bank, so that you will be able to purchase Traveler's checks when you leave, also advise Max Eidler that you will be gone, and to advise you if anything has to be done about the robbery insurance. You can do this when you get ready to go. I will write

Suggest these things as they come to my mind from now on, and I wish you would note them on a piece of paper, as you will probably be distant from home, and we want to keep our affairs in good order. When you get ready to buy R.R. tickets ask Mr. Pincus to get them for you thru the office. I know I am making many plans, dearest, but I am quite certain we will carry them out. Of course, always remember I am in the army, and have only partial control over my desires and wishes. But get to thinking about being with me for a while, and I know you will be well prepared for the journey when the time comes.

Just waiting about this makes me feel exuberant, and before I forget I want to advise you that I sent you another letter to-day, via air mail. I also discussed the above matter, so please take notice of all I write. I feel fine and dandy, the weather is beautiful. Received a letter from Jules and Pincus to-day, but nothing from Bob.

Kiss Jim for daddy, and I'll kiss you in mind; but soon I hope I'll be kissing you both. Also hope my mother comes along, but I'll attend to that when I know definitely where we go.

Stay well, dearest, and my best to everyone
