Lady Owls qualify for nationals

By Scott McPherson
Assistant News Editor

When the season is over, the Lady Owls soccer team will have racked up quite a few frequent flyer miles.

The team—just back from splitting two games in Florida—will be returning to the Sunshine State next Thursday for their second consecutive appearance in the NCAA Division II championships.

Coach Bert Poirier and the Lady Owls learned Monday morning that they received a bid for the final-four. Also in the tournament will be two familiar teams and one, not-so-familiar team.

Barry University, who last year knocked the Owls out of the tourney in the first round, will host the games at their Miami campus. A familiar opponent, Adelphi University, will represent the northeast along with the Owls. Cal. State/Dominguez Hills will represent the west.

As fate would have it, the Owls will face Cal. State/Dominguez Hills—the only team in the tourney they are not familiar with—in the opening round on Saturday, November 11.

Asked what he knows about the Lady Owls west coast opponent, Poirier responded, "I don't have the faintest idea." However, in the week that precedes the game, Poirier plans to find out as much as he can about them.

Should the Lady Owls advance past the first round, they could face either Adelphi or Barry. Either way, they will know what they're up against.

Just last week, the Lady Owls shut out Adelphi 2-0. "We know we can beat at least one of them," Poirier said. Barry University is an old friend of Keene State. In the two times the Lady Owls faced the team from Miami last season, they only managed one goal to Barry's seven.

For the Lady Owls, this year's appearance might just be the opportunity to redeem themselves. "They (the team) feel they have something to prove," Poirier said.

There will be three key players that Poirier will be looking to lead his team in Florida. Sophomores Alison Foley, Philo Robinson and senior Denise Lyons will return to the final four with some vengeance, Poirier said.

"Nothing frightens them, which frightens me," Poirier said. However, it will take a complete team effort for the Lady Owls to bring home a national championship.

It comes down to "whoever wants it the most," Poirier said. He expects the game to be hard, fast and intense.

The Lady Owls were in Florida last weekend to play Florida International College and the University of Central Florida. The team downed FIC 3-0 on two goals by Foley and another by Robinson.

On Monday, with a national bid in their possession, the Owls dropped their game against UCF, 4-0. Poirier said receiving the national bid "took the edge out of Monday afternoon's game."

With the final-four still a eleven days away, Poirier and the Lady Owls are getting ready. But the fact that they're going to Florida "hasn't sunk in yet," Poirier said.

Men's soccer team looks for assistance

By Jason Cheek
Sports Editor

The Owls soccer team is still alive for tournament play, but its hopes depend on other teams' success, rather than its own.

In order for the Owls to compete in the conference tournament, Franklin Pierce needs to either beat or tie Sacred Heart University, and Southern Connecticut needs to do the same against Bridgeport.

Last Saturday, the Owls travelled to Southern Connecticut State University. Unfortunately the Owls played poorly, and were defeated 4-0. According to coach Ron Butcher, the Owls lacked intensity throughout the game, and never seemed to get on track. Southern Connecticut played exceptionally well, and in a word, Butcher felt that the Owls were "humiliated."

Butcher felt that as a team, the Owls underachieved this season. They were plagued by injuries all year especially to role players John Clegg, and Mark Kenohan.

Butcher is very optimistic about the future, he feels that the team is very young. Successful recruiting in the next few months will hopefully bring the Owls over the top next season.

The Owls season is not over yet, and with some luck the Owls could be playing a few postseason games.

Cross country season ends

By Jason Cheek

The Lady Owls cross country team competed in the New England Women's Cross Country Championships last Saturday at the Northfield Mountain Recreation Center.

The hilly 3.1 mile course was completed the fastest by Geraldine Hendricken from Providence College, who finished the course in a time of 17:48.

The Owls finished 20th overall, led by Tanya Home, who finished in a time of 20:36, placing 83rd. Stacey Langworthy also ran a good race for Keene, as she crossed the finish line 102nd.

Lady Owls place second in tournament

By Pat Laverty

Last Saturday was long for the local volleyball teams. Keene State hosted a round-robin tournament that lasted more than eight hours. The Lady Owls didn't mind so much because they took second out of the five teams. The Owls posted a 3-1 record in the regular competition, in defeating Franklin Pierce, Middlebury, and Southern Connecticut, before falling to Merrimack in both the first round and in the playoffs.

"They did real well...they were really pleased with their performance," said Coach Trilby Whitcomb. "They all played well, but we a' see things that need work," Whitcomb added, "As far as teamwork and team spirit go, thinking on the court and communication, it was excellent."

The previous Saturday, Keene

made the trip up to St. Michael's College in Burlington, Vermont. Stonehill College was also in attendance to take on the Lady Owls. The first match of the day was a best two-out-of-three match against Stonehill. Unfortunately for Keene, Stonehill came out flying and took the first game by a score of 15-6. "The second game, even though we did lose, they had to work for it," said Coach Whitcomb, whose squad dropped the second game and the match, 18-16.

Keene next played host to St. Michael's College in the usual, best three-of-five games. Keene played uncharacteristically from their usual slow start by quickly taking the first two games, 15-12 and 15-10. St. Michael's then awoke and took the next two games 16-14, and 16-14. In the fifth game, Keene's proverbial "light switch" clicked off for the remainder of the game and they dropped the match by a 15-6 fifth game loss.

Legislation may ban alcohol ads

By Jeffrey M. Chadburn
Executive Editor

Colleges and universities around the country may lose federal aid if they do not restrict alcohol promotions on their campuses if recent legislation becomes law, according to Ellen Copen, a press secretary for senator Jesse Bingaman (R-N.M.).

The legislation, sponsored by Bingaman and senator Herbert Kohl (D-Wis.), is an amendment to the Higher Education Act of 1965. If passed it would eliminate federal funds including student aid to any institution which allowed certain types of alcohol promotions to occur.

Copen said the amendment would prohibit distribution of free alcohol, restrict promotional literature concerning events where alcohol is served, and limit sponsorship of events to corporate identification. For example, the Bud Light Invitational would have to be called the Anheuser-Busch Invitational.

This restriction could also apply to advertisements in the college's student newspaper and programs distributed at athletic events, according to Copen. If an advertisement encourages underage or excessive consumption, then it could be considered in violation of the amendment.

Copen said there is some confusion as to what would be allowed in the form of advertising. She said that as long as the activity is part of the normal operation of the tavern or pub, and does not encourage underage consumption, then it is acceptable.

On college campuses, however, concern over the passage of this amendment has caused action by administrations. According to the College Press Service, California

State University at Chico has ordered the Orion, CSUC's student newspaper, to stop running all alcohol related ads. This is expected to cost the paper $30,000 in lost revenues.

The University of North Dakota has gone so far as to forbid students from putting beer company posters in their residence hall windows, according to CPS.

Barbara Rich, vice president of student affairs, said she could not comment on the specifics of the amendment because she has not seen the legislation. However, she said she felt there has been a great improvement at Keene State in the past 18 months.

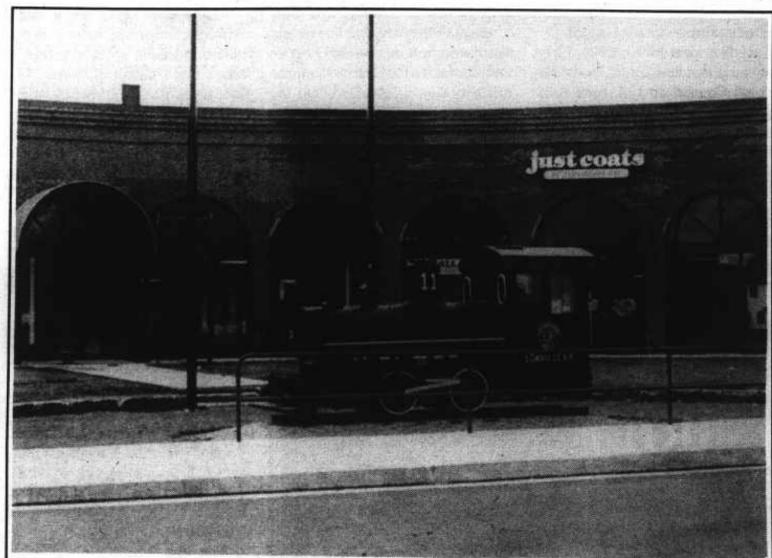

Rich said the pub has concentrated more on the programming aspect than the alcohol aspect of the organization, noting the elimination of happy hour as a positive step.

In an Equinox interview, Bill Anthony, press secretary for New Hampshire senator Gordon Humphrey, said that, although they have not yet seen the proposal, "the senator would be leaning toward opposing it."

Anthony said that what the amendment amounted to was, "the federal government trying to micro-manage the colleges."

Anthony added that if papers were not allowed to advertise alcohol, everyone—including students of legal drinking age—would not be exposed to it.

Senator Warren Rudman's office was unavailable for comment. In a related area, Rep. Chuck Douglas (R-N.H.), is introducing legislation in the House of Representatives that would tie federal aid into drug education programs in addition to the alcohol restrictions.

Outlet mall opening Saturday

By Scott McPherson
Assistant News Editor

While several proposed malls in the Keene area are facing controversy, the Keene Mill Outlet will open its doors, quietly, to the general public on Saturday, according to Bob Askey of Askey Associates, a Keene marketing firm.

Unlike the proposed Konover Mall, next to the Keene state police barracks, or the addition to Riverside (Bradlees) Plaza, Bob Boisell of the Keene Chamber of Commerce said the Keene Mill Outlet has received no negative response. He believes the new mall will actually help the downtown shopping area.

"The unofficial talk around the chamber is that the Keene Mill Outlet is definitely going to be a wonderful addition to the downtown area," he said.

Boisell said he has "no opinion" on whether the Keene Mill Outlet's success will affect the Konover mall or the addition to the Riverside plaza. "You would need a crystal ball," he said.

Boisell said the Keene Mill Outlet is a first step in linking the Colony Mill Marketplace to Main Street. "This links the Colony Mill to the Main Street (and) downtown area. The next project the chamber will tackle is to have a sidewalk put in from Main Street to the Colony Mill."

Local merchants do not consider the Keene Mill Outlet to be competition, rather a partner in the Keene business community, Boisell said. "When the water rises, all the boats float," Boisell said. He also noted that the Keene Mill Outlet is a new member of the Chamber of Commerce.

Renovation of the former Cheshire Railroad Company locomotive repair shop began in February, and will continue for several more months, according to Anita Norton, spokeswoman for Newmarket Development Corporation, the New York based company that developed the outlet mall.

The Keene Mill Outlet will include 85,000 square feet of retail space and 15,000 square feet of office space when complete. Presently, only the retail space is complete Norton said.

While full development of the mall will not be complete until spring, 23 merchants are expected to participate in a grand opening planned for 10 a.m., Saturday. According to Askey, who serves as spokesman for Keene Mill Outlet merchants, seven outlets are already open and experiencing brisk business.

"Customers evidently can't wait for the grand opening," Askey said.

Norton said that while construction will continue for several months, no major delays were experienced. "Our priority was the retail space," she said.

Because the mall is actually a renovated locomotive shop, construction proved to be more difficult than a standard mall. "The only problem—if you want to classify it as a problem—was they wanted to use the original structure," Askey said.

Askey believes the Keene Mill

KSC professor's trip to Egypt changes his views

By Missy Toothill
Features Editor

Spending a month in Egypt can really challenge your perceptions and values, according to Dr. Al Rydant, associate professor of geography.

Rydant spent July in Cairo, Egypt on a trip that was funded by the National Council on U.S.-Arab Relations. This is an Washington, D.C.-based agency which gets its money from international sources, such as Arab countries and major U.S. corporations that do business in the Middle East. "They're not a lobby group. They fund, essentially, people without specialties in the Middle East to go over and live there," said Rydant.

Rydant was one of 11 faculty and 12 high school students that were accepted by the program. The faculty had to write how they would integrate the information they learned from the trip into their classes and into the community.

Before he went to Egypt, Rydant said he "didn't think in depth about Middle Eastern issues." He knew some of the problems, such as the conflicts between Arabs and Israelis and the Christians and Moslems. He said he had a general impression of what might be right and what might be wrong.

"Going there gave me a much clearer picture of who's doing what to whom. It led me to question certain values that I hadn't questioned before. If you'd asked me before I went, 'Did I support the U.S. position in the Middle East?' Then I would have had to say, 'Generally yes.' Now, I don't think I could say that. I don't think we're going about it the right way," Rydant said. He added that he doesn't think the U.S. government understands the Middle East, and this is why the United States is having troubles.

"We've sold out for convenience. We've sold our values." Rydant said the United States is supporting a regime that doesn't allow many of the freedoms Americans cherish. "That just goes against our basic values. I should have seen this before. I should have questioned this before. I should have understood this before and I guess it took this experience for me to see that," he said.

Although the trip caused him to change his mind on some issues, that is not the intent of the agency, he said.

"I felt no pressure to change my mind or think in a certain way." No one tried to convince him that one side was right, he said. "To that extent, I think it's a marvelous program where they set you up and say 'Let's live this culture for a while. Let's experience this culture and you make your own decisions.'"

The group of students and faculty first spent three days in Washington, D.C. for an orientation seminar. They were briefed on what kinds of things to expect in Cairo. Information was given on the food, how to get a taxi,

'Erik the Viking' invades Keene

By Dave Meichsner
Staff Writer

Former "Monty Python" member Terry Jones wrote, directed and performed in his latest comedy, "Erik the Viking." It is the story of a Viking leader, Erik, who is sick of all the senseless killing and attempts to bring an end to it by awakening the Viking gods.

Erik leads his men to Hy-Brazil, an island nation off the edge of the world, to find The Horn Resounding, which will wake the gods and put an end to The Age of Ragnarock. During The Age of Ragnarock, "Fenrir the Wolf has swallowed the sun and the Great Winter has settled over the world." Because of this, men kill and spread war for no reason.

Tim Robbins ("Miss Firecracker") stars as Erik, a sensitive Viking who believes that there must be more to life than just raping, murdering and pillaging. Terry Jones (various "Monty Python" films) is the ruler of Hy-Brazil, where violence is forbidden. Another "Monty Python" veteran, John Cleese ("A Fish Called Wanda") appears as Halfdan the Black, an evil warlord who chases Erik to keep him from ending The Age of Ragnarock. Mickey Rooney makes an appearance as Erik's grandfather.

The film was made in the dry humor style of Monty Python. Terry Jones directed several of the famous comedy troupe's films but has been absent from the film industry for the last few years. He gave up the business for a while to write children's books. Coincidentally one of the books is entitled "Erik the Viking," though a disclaimer in the closing credits states that the two works are completely unrelated.

The comedy troupe had a television show called "Monty Python's Flying Circus," for three years in the early 70's and made several films together including cult favorites such as "The Holy Grail," and "The Life of Brian." Their last film was "The Meaning of Life." All hopes of another film that would include the whole cast were destroyed three weeks ago when Graham Chapman, another founding member, died of lung cancer.

"Erik the Viking" keeps alive the "Python" spirit. It is tremendously funny and has a message against violence. To get into the Viking heaven, Valhalla, a warrior must "die by the sword." The Vikings frequently show their disregard for life and willingness to die because of this belief. When they meet warriors who have died and gone to Valhalla, they are told that it really isn't worth it. It is true, they assume, that if you have to die to get there that it must be worth it, but no one has ever been able to come back to confirm this.

Although the film has some small problems when in the area of special effects, it is well worth the admission.

Paper lights used to show lighting problem

By Michael McShane
Staff Writer

Members of the Concerned Students Coalition (CSC) will hang lights constructed of paper today, in an attempt to show administrators that campus lighting needs improvements, according to Roxanne Carlone, one member of CSC.

CSC believes lights around campus are in need of improvement said Carlone and CSC's adviser Mark Schmedil.

CSC indicated dimly-lit areas include the alley behind Huntress Hall, the front of Huntress after the tennis court lights are shut off, the area around the dining commons, and Clot which leads to the Arts Center, said Carlone.

"We really want to improve the safety around here," she said. Schmedil agreed adding "it is important that they (the students) are aware of their personal safety on campus...."

It is CSC's concern that poor lighting will affect students safety, however the organization indicated that they do not blame the administration. CSC's goal is to make the administration aware that a problem exists and students are concerned.

CSC recently sent letters explaining their concerns to Vice President of Student Affairs Barbara Rich and Vice President of Resource Administration Bob Mallat.

In addition to these letters, members of CSC put up posters and paper lights around campus to illustrate areas that need better lighting.

According to Vice President Rich, an extensive effort was put forth by the administration during the past two years to address lighting issues. One improvement which came out of that address was the installation of lights on the side of Bushnell near the parking lot.

In addition to Rich's statements, Mallat said efforts to improve campus lighting have been included during renovations and other construction projects.

Although Mallat said he understands the students rationale and the "existing need" for improvements of campus lighting, he said he does not know what steps will be taken. However, Mallat added that CSC's actions indicate that attention is needed, either now or in the future, concerning this issue.

"Lighting is a preventive end and is an assuring thing to have on campus," said Rich. She added that the administration is in favor of more lights on campus to increase student safety.

From a security standpoint, Coordinator of Security Paul Bosquet, said the only area in need of improvement is around Butler Court. Bosquet said who, and how many people, use the unlighted areas are two considerations before changes can occur.

Bosquet said the administration feels they have not endangered students even though all campus areas are not as lit as well as they could be. Bosquet added, however, that some areas are less traveled and do not require as much lighting, although those areas are lit well enough so that everyone should feel safe.

CAMPUS CORNERS

A BRIEF LOOK AT THE NEWS ON NEW HAMPSHIRE CAMPUSES

University of New Hampshire

A 19-year-old woman was raped in a wooded area near the University of New Hampshire last week, according to The New Hampshire. The attack is being classified as a "date rape" because the victim knows the assailant and it took place after a party. It is not known if either person is a UNH student. This is the fourth incident of sexual violence on campus this semester. The woman is not pressing charges.

A memorial service will be held today for William Sims, a UNH communications professor who died last week of a heart attack. Sims, 51, taught classes in public speaking and argumentation. He was a member of the Academic Senate and also served as chair of the communications department from 1981-82. He is survived by his wife Friedline, six children, one grandson and his two parents.

Dartmouth College

The Dartmouth College chapter of Alpha Chi Omega is being investigated by the sorority's national organization, according to The Dartmouth. Alpha's Executive Director Nancy Leonard was on campus last week, asking all members to sign a "Statement of Commitment." Dartmouth's Alpha Chi Omega chapter is considering "going local" according to Kathy Kelleher, president of the Dartmouth chapter. The national office would like the sorority for a "reaffirmation, a touchstone, that will rekindle their relationship to Alpha Chi Omega national," Leonard said.

Phi Sigma Beta becomes Greek

By Jennifer Themel
Staff Writer

Phi Sigma Beta was officially recognized as a sorority by the Keene State College Inter-Sorority Council on October 30, according to Rosalie Pemberton, president of Phi Sigma Beta.

The group became a student organization at Keene State during the spring of 1988 when their constitution was approved by the Student Assembly, said Pemberton.

Phi Sigma Beta went through the Inter-Sorority Council (ISC) for approval as a Greek organization. The ISC consists of representatives from each sorority on campus and governs and provides for the welfare of sororities, Pemberton said.

The ISC placed Phi Sigma Beta on probation in the fall, 1988. "Probation is usually a part of any Greek fraternity's or sorority's final acceptance as an official Greek letter organization," said Barbara Rich, vice president of student affairs.

Phi Sigma Beta's probation period was reviewed in April. Following this review, the ISC extended their probation period until this fall.

"Each fraternity and sorority at KSC has a particular philanthropy that they're interested in...and have local works of charity that they become involved in. But part of all sorority and fraternity organizations at Keene State is their contribution to volunteer work," said Rich.

The philanthropy of Phi Sigma Beta is 'The Living Network Corporation.' "We help people with special needs," Pemberton said.

Phi Sigma Beta has participated in organizing letter writing in the 'Save our Schools' project, Pennies for Prevention, Oxfam, and have donated money to the Red Cross. Last year they held a 'Rocky Horror' dance and last weekend they sponsored a 'Friday Night Live' dance.

The 19 members also took part in 'Students for Students,' and 'All Greek Clean-up,' an activity that included washing Greek symbols off the desks in classrooms across campus. We do as much as we can, as much as we hear about it," Pemberton said.

Vandal control needed

Vandalism, as defined in Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, is willful or malicious destruction or defacement of public or private property.

"Landscape," the metal sculpture on the side of the Thorne-Sagendorph Art Gallery, was one of the most recent targets of vandalism at Keene State. The word malicious certainly can be applied to the damage done to this artwork.

Vandalism of all kinds is occurring more and more frequently. According to a report in Art News, incidents of vandalism increased 70 percent between 1970 and 1979. Similar statistics are expected for the 1980s. Vandalism hurts many people including students, ethnic groups, and art lovers.

Art has become a target for vandals not only at Keene State, but all over the world. Art News recently reported that vandalism to art has almost become a global epidemic. Many artworks have been axed, stabbed, decapitated, slashed, attacked with acid, and covered with graffiti.

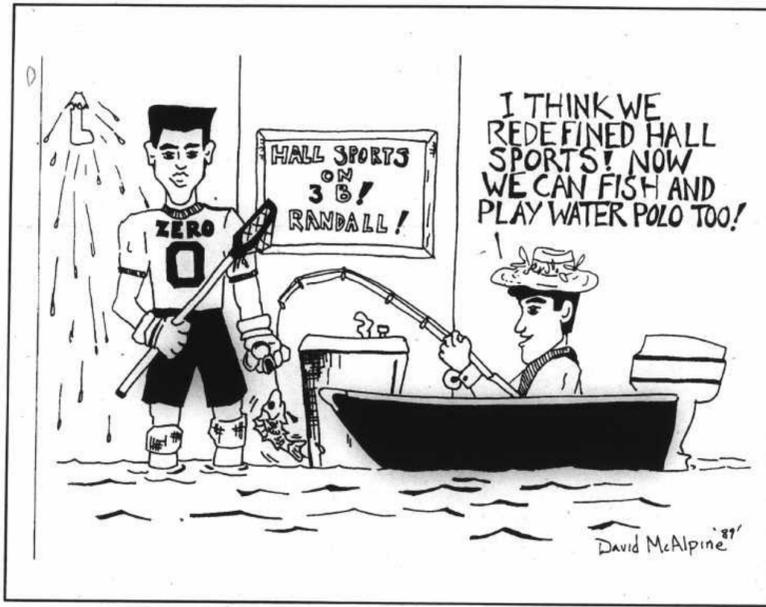

Although all art is subject to abuse, researchers seem to agree that art placed outdoors is more likely to be vandalized. According to Art News, those who damage or destroy art, do so because that particular work makes the person uncomfortable. According to several studies, works of art can evoke feelings of social inferiority, economic discrimination, and educational disadvantage. Because of these feelings, vandals subconsciously follow a popular left-wing extremist slogan: destroy that which destroys you.

However, this does not excuse a vandal from his or her crime. Destroying art has many negative consequences. Due to problems of vandalism, security checks at museums make it difficult to view and enjoy art. The atmosphere of museums has become intimidating and uncomfortable with guards intently watching every visitor. And some museums have surveillance systems that trigger an alarm if someone comes closer than 18 inches to a work. In addition, many museums forbid women to carry purses, and no one is allowed to carry personal belongings.

College students suffer from vandalism too. The price of repairing campuses damaged by vandalism is passed on to students through tuition and housing increases. Unless, however, the guilty individual is arrested. The New York Times recently reported that a student was fined nearly $10,000 for gluing the locks on seven campus buildings.

There are ways to prevent vandalism at schools and universities, however. According to Education Digest, one school district in Dale City, California, came up with an incentive plan to reduce vandalism. Each school received $500 to put in a reserve account. The students could use this money for activities, unless the vandalism costs consumed it. The program was successful in getting students concerned about vandalism. Also, instead of being silent about vandalism incidents, students spoke up and tried to solve the problem. The number of incidents dropped more than 50 percent.

Keene State needs a similar plan. Students must be encouraged to stop vandalism. If students see someone vandalizing, they should report it immediately to campus security or the Keene police. Students can not afford to be passive.

Visitors pose dilemma for roommates

"Hey, would you guys mind if I crashed here? My roommate is...um...well, she/he has a...um...guest, ya know?"

How many times have you been in the awkward situation of having to ask friends if you can sleep on their floor because your roommate(s) decided to have an overnight guest—an overnight guest of the opposite sex? Just about everyone on campus who has one or more roommates has been in this dilemma at least once. This situation is uncomfortable for those occupants sharing the same living space. Unfortunately, the rules and regulations handbook neglects to establish guidelines for those caught in this situation.

When the room belongs to both or all of you, which one of you has the right to remain in the room? Is it fair to come home and discover that your roommate is with a member of the opposite sex and you, the innocent bystander, are expected to find alternative lodging for the night.

This is obviously an unfair situation for the innocent bystander. It is unfair that you can not ask your roommate and his or her partner to leave because they were there first.

And it's unfair that you want to get some sleep because you have to get up early the next morning, only your roommate has a guest. It is also unfair that you really feel uncomfortable asking friends if you can sleep in their room again.

One solution is that they can go to the other persons room. It would be a good solution except, how do you ask them to vacate the premises? Good communication between roommates makes awkward situations like these much easier. However, even the best communicators may have difficulty with this question.

I have no problem if two people of the opposite sex are sleeping and the other occupant of the room is there also because all the occupants in the room are just sleeping. My problem with overnight guests of the opposite sex is when they are not sleeping and begin doing things that should be confined to the two of them.

If a roommate wants to have an overnight guest of the opposite sex, that is fine. However, roommates should give their roommate(s) some warning before they walk into the room and are terribly surprised. Common courtesy is all it takes.

The Equinox should not be in the 'baby business'

Why is The Equinox still soliciting the women of Keene State College to bear children for couples hoping to adopt? I refer to a classified ad placed by a couple from Franklin, New Hampshire, which appeared in your November 1st edition. Last spring, your editor remarked that since The Equinox accepts ads for apartments for rent, he saw no problem with accepting ads of this sort as well. To consider the two situations analogous is reprehensible.

The women of the college community are here to offer or to obtain an education, not to get pregnant. Women who become pregnant without having planned to do so have several options, and many local agencies are available to offer assistance. As a student newspaper, The Equinox has no business in the baby business.

TAMARA ARMSTRONG
ROBERT BAILLARGEON
FORREST SEYMOUR
MAGGIE DAILEY

Editor's Note: The Equinox offers classified advertising as a service to the community. Before this and other ads of a similar nature were published, The Equinox consulted with the University System of New Hampshire's attorneys who said that these ads are legal and many college newspapers run them.

Residential Life should protect privacy and safety

In a recent letter to resident students about dormitory safety inspections, Carole S. Henry, Director of Residential Life and Dining Services, stated that, "If the occupants of the room are not present, the staff are instructed to 'key in' to the room, and complete the inspection."

The KSC Rules and Regulations handbook has this to say on the subject: "The Residential Life Office reserves the right to... enter rooms to inspect for and correct or remove hazards to health or safety or to carry out necessary maintenance work;...to search a room but only with the permission of the Vice-President of Student Affairs".

While these statements are intended to protect the college from damages and liabilities, and the students from injuries (i.e. from themselves), they also give the Residential Life Office staff, including the RAs and RDs full, unquestioned power to enter any room at anytime, whether in the residents' presence or not. Indeed, they are never required to leave.

It is believed that these regulations are legal in the state of New Hampshire, but the potential for invasions of privacy is intolerably high and the ethics of such policies are quite questionable. Particularly, the allowance of Residential Life staff to enter rooms when residents are away is highly objectionable. Also, as there is no clear definition of how the Residential Life Office differentiates between an "inspection" and a "search" of a room, almost anything can be done by the staff member in question while in the room, simply by calling it an "inspection."

The right of Keene State College to protect its property, itself and the students is not the issue here. At issue is the students' right to privacy. This right can be interrupted briefly, but should not be open to the kind of abuses that are possible under the existing policies.

The attention of the powers-that-be is appreciated, and it is hoped that any information on this subject in the near future would be greatly appreciated. In closing, it is recommended that students pay attention to this matter both in its developments here and in their own residence halls.

Why save the whales and not the babies?

"How come, America? We save the whales and rescue the seals, but we kill our unborn children." This is a quote that is seen on the bumper of many vehicles.

When exactly does human life begin? Is it at the moment of conception or at the actual birth of the baby? This has been an issue for quite sometime.

In my own mind I believe that a fetus is a human from the moment of conception. Life is a sacred gift from God that we should not take advantage of. There are so many couples that are eagerly awaiting a child to adopt because they cannot have their own for one reason or another. On the other hand, there are many couples who have "made a mistake" and therefore abort their baby.

Some of the statistics found in the pamphlet entitled "Children...Things We Throw Away?" are absolutely outrageous:

-Of all the women having abortions have nothing to do with the life of health of the woman-they are done simply for convenience, to get rid of their troubles, and to "remain happy."

-Doctors perform 1.5 million abortions per year in U.S. - that's one for every two live births.

An abortion is a major surgical procedure which can result in serious complications- it's not as safe as some are led to believe. Statistics show that after a legal abortions, a woman faces increased possibilities of future miscarriages, tubal pregnancies, premature births, sterility, and severe and long-lasting emotional disturbances.

One of the worst aspects of abortion is that people are using it as a method of birth control. But, birth control prevents a new life from beginning-abortion destroys that new life once it has already begun.

It has been proven that the fetus can feel pain and sometimes screams when it is about to be aborted. I wish the doctors could magnify the sound to let the mother hear it. Abortion is murder! Babies are being thrown away like rotten trash.

Yes, I am pro-choice, the choice comes before the child conceived! But, I am pro-life as far as the baby is concerned!

It's time to open eyes to KSC's drug problem

It is everywhere and if you want it bad enough there should be no problem finding it. It is not only available to a certain section of the student body. It is not located in a particular place on or off campus. It has reached epidemic forms and what it is is..... DRUGS!

Although my time here at Keene State College has not been very long, it is obvious that there is a severe drug problem that faces this campus. My head spins like a top to watch the vast amount of drugs that circulate on this campus. For example, it is possible to go into a party and obtain almost any form of drug that you may want, just by asking for it. The variety of illegal substances is amazing. I am sure that this campus is not the only campus plagued by drug abuse, but I so believe it is something that this campus must concern itself with.

Many rumors and facts involving the crack-down on alcohol use within the campus community have floated

What's On Your Mind?

Interviews and photos by Mark S. Skalny

Do you feel you get what you pay for at Keene State College?

Marshall Davenson: No, the science labs are hurting for both updated equipment and faculty to handle the number of students. I think that updated equipment would be a wiser thing to spend money on than building a new dorm, remodeling the campus or other things.

C.E. Lipinski: You get out of it, what you put in, yes.

Jon Morris: No. I think more money needs to be spent on upgrading of the library, the overall landscape of the campus and to the extension of the athletic teams and proper facilities.

Jon Brooks: No. Being an out-of-state student, I feel I'm paying too much for what I'm getting. This school needs to upgrade its facilities. All I hear professors talking about is how they have no money to buy new equipment.

Class teaches how to market the whole product

By Geri Cassidy
Staff Writer

The course: IET 400 Manufacturing Enterprise. But it's more than just a course, it's the Noteworthy Corporation. The product: the Noteworthy Organizer.

According to Professor Charles Sheaff, who advises the student-run course, the class is run like a real business. "It is just like an industry where they set up the whole process of manufacturing, right through to the marketing of the product," he explained.

All 17 students are on the board of directors while simultaneously being a laborer in a factory, which gives the students a well-rounded picture of what a real business is run like. "Unlike other courses, it presents a mix of real world and a hypothetical world," said Jack Grove, president of Noteworthy Corporation. "To me it has been a tremendous learning experience because it's very eye-opening in terms of what it takes to produce something in the real world."

The course begins by the class breaking up into groups. They decide what product they would like to produce and sell, then the entire class votes on what product they like the best, said Scheaff. From there, the business begins.

Materials, cost and pre-planning are considered, as well as finding out what the market is. The Student Union funded the course with seed money and after the business begins to sell the product, they will replace the loan and then split the remaining profits equally among the class.

Sound simple? Grove doesn't think so. "What I found remarkable is the complexity of manufacturing a product. You'd never think something so easy could be so difficult to produce," he remarked.

Another student, Kelly Winslow, said, "I wasn't aware of all of the other things that happen in the manufacturing process, but now I do and I think it's great."

Winslow and Chris Bastek are in charge of the marketing aspect of Noteworthy Corp. They created a survey in order to find out what changes could be made to improve the product. After looking at the marketing results, the changes were voted on at the board of directors' meetings.

The class was also given a donation of 200 Post It Notepads by the 3M Corporation from Minneapolis, Minnesota. "We really owe them because they saved us $250," Bastek remarked.

The Noteworthy Organizers will be sold at the Dining Commons on November 20 and 21 at both lunch and dinner. The price is $8.95 each. They are also hoping to sell them in the Student Union at a later date, but this has not been confirmed yet.

In terms of any problems with the course, Grove believes that the motivation is sometimes a problem, but he said that is something we see in the American workforce as well. However, Grove went on to say that they are "more like a Japanese corporation because we take pride in our work, and probably because we're all getting equal shares of the profit."

"It's one thing to come up with the idea, but taking that idea from paper to reality is what this class is all about," Grove concluded.

Alumni association accepting grant requests

The KSC Alumni Association has announced the opening of the Alumni Grant cycle for 1990. Applications will be accepted from student groups and organizations, faculty, staff, and/or their departments, and administrative offices of the college.

Grant applications may be obtained from the Office of Development and Alumni Affairs, second floor, Elliot Mansion.

The Alumni Grants Committee considers the following points, among others, as applications are evaluated:

-Consideration is given to projects which are innovative and show promise of bringing new dimensions to the life of the college.

Spring break in Daytona may come to an end

(CPS) — Daytona Beach, Fla., officials say 1990 may be the last year they welcome students to vacation there during spring break.

City visitors bureau officials say they will send a squad of representatives to a number of campuses in early 1990 to warn students to behave well when they head south this spring.

"We want students to party, but we want them to do it responsibly," said Suzanne Smith, director of the city's spring break task force, which will decide the last week of October how many campuses it will visit.

-Alumni grant support is given to assist a project or activity or to help with start-up costs; it is not intended to sustain an activity.

-Consideration is given to projects that show the potential of improving the quality of campus life, of promoting academic excellence, and to activities likely to be service to alumni of the college.

-Consideration is given to proposals which include a funding plan beyond the life of the Alumni Grant for multi-year projects.

Recommendations of the Alumni Grants Committee will be presented to the full Alumni Board of Directors for approval on February 3, 1990.

Smith said Daytona Beach, one of the last places left that actually welcomes students for spring break, may follow other vacation spots like Miami Beach, Fort Lauderdale, Palm Springs, Calif., and most recently, Virginia Beach, Vir., in discouraging them from congregating there if things don't change.

Since 1984, seven people have died and 34 have been injured in falls from Daytona hotel and motel balconies. Last spring, the city was largely unable to control the 400,000 students who visited, Smith reported.

Students trashed hotels, urinated on lawns, passed out in driveways and disturbed residents with blaring radios.

"The community is no longer willing to put up with that" even though the visitors spent an estimated $120 million in the area, Smith said.

"The message we're taking to campuses,"

Interconnection is looking for new members

Interconnection is an adult organization for non-traditional students who attend Keene State College and who live on or off campus. New officers have been elected to the posts and are looking for people who are energetic and enthusiastic and who want to connect with other non-traditional students.

Some of the events suggested are being suggested include a wine and cheese social, Monte Carlo Night, Live Theater outings, a murder-mystery party, family outings, holiday parties, and coffee house. Any ideas or suggestions you may have to offer can be placed in the envelope outside of the Interconnection office door across the hall from the bookstore at any time. The first event is the wine and cheese social planned for Saturday November 11, from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Newman Center. The room will be available, which includes a ping pong table and a billiards table. Enjoy the evening and bring a guest if you like. If you are interested, contact Steve Bates, President Interconnection 357-7268 or Bette Norlund, Vice President Interconnection 357-0303 (leave message).

Sigma Tau Delta Honor Society inducts members

SHOWCASE COUNSELING CENTER WEEK OF NOVEMBER 13

(1) FUN NIGHT

Monday, November 13
7:00 - 8:30 pm
Library Conference Room

A hodge podge evening of getting to know new/other people in the KSC community in new and different -- and maybe unconventional -- ways. Come and find out -- bring someone you know. Bring someone you don't know. (There will be a prize for the biggest group that comes together.)

(2) INTERNAL AFFAIRS: Journal keeping for men and women

Tuesday, November 14
7:00 - 8:30 pm
Women's Center, Basement of Huntress Hall

Journal keeping is one way to begin the search for intimacy within. We will discuss the aspects of emotional connectedness to others in relation to self. A format will be presented in the form of questions.

(3) CONFLICT RESOLUTION

Wednesday, November 15
7:00 - 8:30 pm
Family Center, Family Housing Area

Most of us usually experience the emergence of conflict in our family, friendships or intimate relationships as destructive. Generally this destructiveness results because we don't know how to use conflict constructively. This evening program will help participants discover some simple tools to transform conflict into a force to create a deeper level of commitment, honesty, and intimacy in our families and friendships, new or old.

(4) THINGS TO GIVE/DO AS INTANGIBLE HOLIDAY GIFTS

Thursday, November 16
7:00 - 8:30 pm
Counseling Center, third floor Elliot

This evening program will focus on ways to think about holiday giving and being in a slightly different way. We have some ideas, bring yours to share ...

All programs are open to the entire Keene State College community:

Presented by: the Counseling Center Staff

Outlet is different from other proposed malls because Newmarket Development took a formerly abandoned building and developed it. "There is a lot of excitement in the community because with the other mall projects a lot of conflict was generated. There is less controversy with the Keene Mill Outlet because of its character," he said.

Although neighbors with the Colony Mill Marketplace—another former factory transformed into retail space—the two areas will prove to be quite different.

Phillip Silverman, a partner in Newmarket Development, said last spring, "We hope to compliment the Colony Mill."

The two shopping areas are set up in different methods. The Colony Mill is an enclosed mall, while the Keene Mill Outlet is a "center-strip" mall.

Another difference between the two malls is the stores in Keene Mill Outlet will reflect the name of the building. Factory outlets eliminate the middleman, allowing the manufacturer to make a profit while passing on considerable savings to the consumer, Askey said.

Factory outlets that are part of the Keene Mill Outlet include Gitano, Westport Limited, Crazy Horse, Might Mac, and the Ribbon Outlet.

Askey also noted that a restaurant—Imperial China—will offer Cantonese, Hunan and Szechuan dishes. "There is so much variety in one shopping area," Askey said.

Newmarket Development has previously developed factory outlets in North Conway, N.H., Freeport, and Kittery, Maine.

excuse for turning away a student in need. I think maybe the center should reassess its values and figure out a solution to this concern, here at Keene State College.

I think one solution may be to help students contact another pupil in their class who is getting a good grade and see if they will be available to tutor that certain student in that class which is giving them difficulty.

University of California bans 'fighting words'

(CPS)—As of now, any of the 161,000 students enrolled at the nine University of California campuses can be suspended or expelled for using "fighting words" that denigrate a person because of race, religion, sexual orientation or disability.

The system's effort to punish students who hurt their classmates' feelings comes almost two months after a federal court ruled a similar University of Michigan effort unconstitutional.

Just days before system President David Gardner announced the rule, moreover, Tufts University in Massachusetts announced it was dropping a three-month-old policy forbidding students from using racist, sexist or derogatory language in certain public areas of campus.

Tufts President Jean Mayer said the attempt to ban hurtful words or phrases wasn't worth the threat to students' rights to free speech.

Gardner, however, imposed the limits on free speech because he was "very concerned that, just as the university is beginning to have some considerable success in attracting a very diverse student body, we don't have atmospheres on campus which detract from the educational experience of all our students," UC spokesman Rick Malaspina explained.

Specifically, Gardner simply added a new line to an existing code of conduct that outlines what the university will or will not let students do.

He based the action on a 1942 Supreme Court ruling that declared "fighting words" to be outside the First Amendment rights.

"Fighting words," Gardner said, are "those personally abusive epithets...widely recognized to be derogatory references to race, ethnicity, religion, sex, sexual orientation, disability and other personal characteristics."

In August, a federal court said Michigan's free speech limits, which also forbade "any behavior, verbal or physical, that stigmatizes or victimizes an individual on the basis of race, ethnicity, religion, sex, sexual orientation, creed, national origin, ancestry, age, marital status, handicap or Vietnam-era veteran status," were unconstitutional.

Michigan's rules, adopted to mitigate a rash of racist fliers and actions that alienated many of the school's students, quickly led to a string of complaints that students and teachers who asked questions in class that bothered classmates were themselves sexist or racist.

If the university agreed, it could suspend or expel the student.

Iowa State ends video parties; others may follow

(CPS) - It's now illegal for students in Iowa State University dorms to rent a video, plunk it into a VCR and watch it with a group of friends in a TV lounge.

If some movie industry officials have their way, moreover, students at every college with a shared TV lounge also will soon know it's illegal.

"It's kind of stupid. We weren't hurting anybody," complained ISU student Steven Reidell. "This was something fun and nonalcoholic to do."

It also violated copyright law, ISU administrators warned dorm residents in September. The administrators, in a letter to students as they moved into their rooms, said showing videos to groups larger than "a normal circle of a family and its social acquaintances" without a license was illegal.

It's "an issue of public performance, and could violate the law," agreed a spokeswoman with the U.S. Copyright Office in Washington, D.C.

Movie industry lawyers say they're aggressively telling administrators at other campuses to either pay video distribution companies a fee or warn their students not to have video parties.

"We send schools a letter saying that they could be in trouble for violating the copyright law," said Tom Fox, a salesman for Chicago-based Films, Inc., which claims to be the nation's biggest distributor of Hollywood films.

The letter tells schools they can either pay Films, Inc., a licensing fee or be reported to the Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA), the New York-based trade groups that helps studios protect their copyrights.

The MPAA, in turn, could sue the school for fines of up to $25,000 and punitive damages of up to $10,000 per video dorm residents have shown.

"The MPAA is vehement about protecting copyrights," MPAA spokesman Mark Harrod explained, "because if you don't own your copyright, you don't own anything."

The association, however, has not actually sued any schools or students so far. "At this point, the MPAA has not found a need to take a college to court," reported Films, Inc. video licensing director Darrell Kasper.

Yet it has frightened a fair share of campuses. Bowdoin, Eastern Oregon State and Central colleges have all paid licensing fees to Films, Inc. or Swank, another distributor, for the right to let students show videos in dorms. Groups at Creighton, North Carolina State and Central Connecticut State universities, among others, also have paid licensing fees.

The amount of the fees depends on the size of the school, said Jeff Siegel, another Films, Inc. executive. They may range from $200 to $10,000 a year.

Depending on the kind of plan the 8,000 students at Iowa State's Richardson Court dorm complex choose, they could pay anywhere from $2,000 to $7,500 for the school year.

The money probably will come out of dorm residents' annual activities dues, said Blair Luddusaw of Richardson Court's student government, which plans to decide on a licensing plan this month.

Tulsa (Okla.) Junior College, for one, decided such fees were too high, and opted to let students show 16 millimeter films on campus instead, said student activities director Diane Hembree. Rental fees cover licensing rights for the 16mm films.

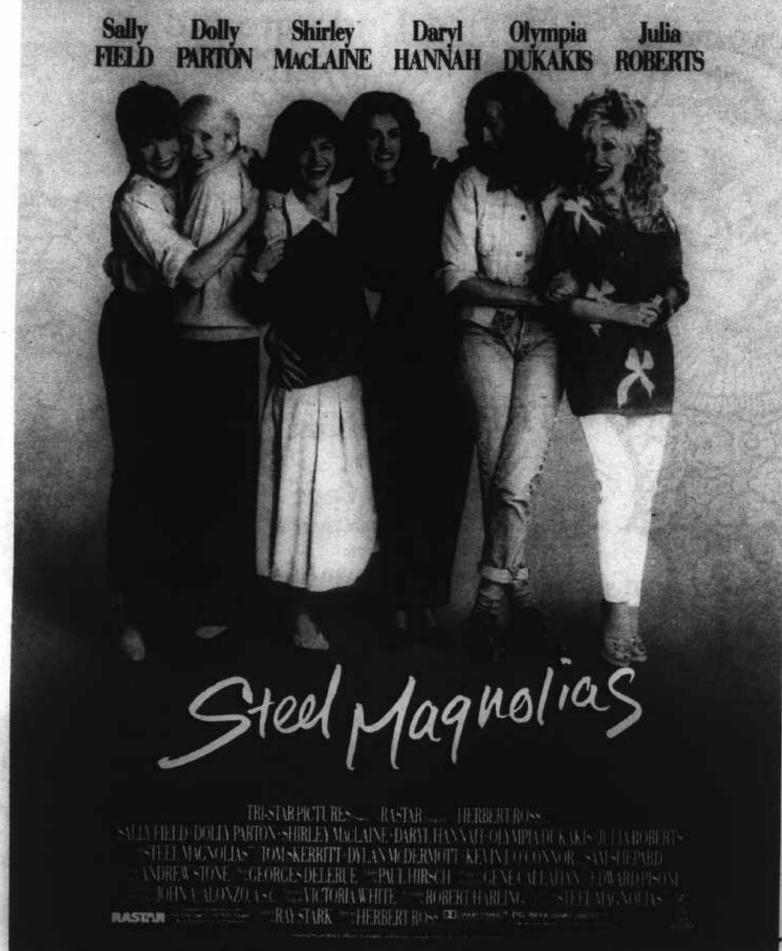

"We were better off just getting the 16 millimeter films," she said.

Some campuses have decided not to pay at all. "Some schools have basically said, 'Come get us,'" conceded Siegel, who refused to name them. "We know there is a lot of illegal video going on. These people are opening themselves up to possible litigation."

The distributors depend on informants to find campus video outlaws.

"It's not being policed in the sense that people are being hired to observe," said Chicago copyright lawyer Ivan Bender. "A lot of violations" are found when marketing companies get copies of student papers or ads, and happen to notice stories about videos.

Such was the case at Iowa State, where a client of Bender's last spring saw a story in the Iowa State Daily about a video party, and forwarded the clipping to Bender.

Field hockey closes season at Trinity Final record 6-8-1

By Ben Rich
Staff Writer

The Keene State College field hockey team closed out its season last Tuesday, October 30, against Trinity, and lost 2-3 to finish the season at 6-8-1. This year had its ups and downs for the Lady Owls as they played well against some tough teams early on, but failed to win some key games against noted coach Amy Watson. Going into the final week of play, the Owls were coming off a four-game undefeated streak and their playoff hopes were still alive. Unfortunately,

Keene lost their final three games, and were eliminated from the playoffs.

Stats do not tell the whole story, but season notables on the offensive end include Lori Osterberg, who led all in goals and total points (15 goals, 32 points), Paula Melewski added five goals and four assists for 14 points. On defense, Sherri Staples registered six saves while Kerri McDevitt added three. Jenna Knox and Amy Costa among others played well at both ends of the field and served to add the intangibles found on every team.

Lady Owls leave tomorrow for NCAA Nationals

By Louis P. Gendron
Staff Writer

The Keene State Lady Owl soccer team begins tournament play Saturday at Barry University in Miami, Florida.

In the first round the Lady Owls will face Cal. State/Dominguez Hills; a team they have not played before. Coach Bert Poirier is optimistic about his team's chances. "I'm trying to get a scouting report from people in the Colorado area, but people are reluctant to tell you anything at this stage."

He also noted that the Lady Owls are playing well at this point and have a good chance of doing well. "We've been having great practices all week. We're moving the ball around well. We have to stay on top of things and maintain our intensity and play with aggressiveness."

Poirier feels that if they get through the first round they will be in the thick of things, but he doesn't want to look too far ahead. He feels that the experience and leadership of several players give the Owls a solid chance. "Philo Robinson, Allison Foley, and Denise Lyons are big factors. Also, three out of four of our fullbacks are seniors who have experience, so we have a good chance of winning."

If the Lady Owls win their first round game, they will play Barry University or Adelphi University; two teams they have done well against in the past. "We beat Adelphi and we only lost to Barry 1-0," said Poirier.

The Athletic Advisory Board is holding a pep rally for the Lady Owls Thursday, November 9th at 11 a.m. in front of the gym and students are encouraged to attend.

Owls continue season

By Jason Cheek
Sports Editor

For the men's soccer team, last week proved to be both disappointing and surprising. While the Owls lost their bid to the NCAA Division II championships, they did manage to grab a ECAC seed. The Owls lost to rival New Hampshire College, 3-1. Senior Rudy Doliscat scored the Owls only goal to deny the shut out.

On Sunday the Owls will be playing Franklin Pierce College at Springfield College. If successful, the Owls will then play on Monday night against the winner of the other semi-final game between host Springfield College and C.W. Post for the ECAC Championship. In their only regular season game against Franklin Pierce, they lost by a score of 1-0.

The Owls and coach Ron Butcher were very surprised to be invited to the ECAC's, and hope to do well in their extended season.

Senior Rudy Doliscat is tripped up by a player in a game earlier this season. The Owls will close the 1989 season when they compete in the ECAC Championships this weekend.

Alpha defends its title in softball

By Jason Cheek
Sports Editor

The intramural softball season ended Sunday, with the defending champions Alpha Pi Tau taking home the crown once again.

Although Alpha had lost many of their power-houses, they were still avored over last years championship competitors the Kamikazies.

The Kamikazies came out of the blocks first by winning the first game of the best-of-three. The Kamikazies hit well and dominated the game.

In the second game, things became interesting. In the final inning, the Kamikazies were down by one run, there were two outs, and the tying run was on third base. Fortunately for Alpha, they were able to hold on, and take the victory by a one run margin.

In the final game, Alpha's power-houses came into play as they ran up the score and in doing so, won the final game as well as the championships for the 1989 season.

College bowl games about to be decided

(AP)- Having moved closer to a potential Orange Bowl showdown, Notre Dame and Colorado remain one-two in the latest weekly Associated Press college football poll.

The fighting Irish received 56 of a possible 60 first place votes to hold onto the top spot. While the Buffaloes retained the number-two spot and received the remaining first-place votes. Colorado put itself squarely in the drivers seat in the Big East Conference race with a 27-to-21 win over previously unbeaten Nebraska on Saturday.

The Cornhuskers slipped from number three, to sixth in this week's poll. Michigan inched up a spot to number-three. Just five days ahead of its showdown with eighth ranked Illinois in what likely will determine the Big Ten Championship.

Associated Press Top 5

- #1 Notre Dame
- #2 Colorado
- #3 Michigan
- #4 Alabama
- #5 Florida

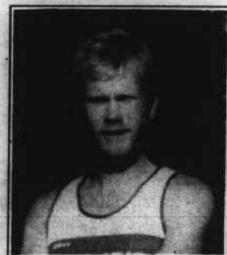

Southeastern Conference leader Alabama gained a spot to number-four and Florida jumped a spot to fifth.

After Nebraska, Miami of Florida remains seventh, Southern California is ninth, and Arkansas is tenth.

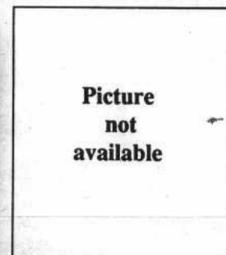

Tennessee heads the second ten, followed by Auburn, Penn State, Pittsburgh and Houston. Texas A&M is sixteenth, Clemson is seventeenth, Virginia holds down number 18, then comes West Virginia, Florida, Brigham Young, North Carolina, Texas Tech, Fresno State, and Arizona.

Athletes of the Week

Chosen by Sports Information

Rob Edson

Mary Cornell

Picture not available

A well deserving Rob Edson receives the athlete of the week award for the men, as he crossed the finish line first in his last two cross country meets. To begin with Edson competed in the New England's two weeks ago, and helped the team place 14th, finishing with a time of 25:32.

Last Saturday, Edson again led the way as he guaranteed himself a spot in the NCAA Championships, as he finished first in the ECAC Championships with a time of 31:20. In two weeks, Edson will be the only runner representing Keene State in the NCAA Division II Championships. Coach Peter Thomas said he expects Edson to place at least third.

For the women, Mary Cornell of the Lady Owl volleyball team receives the award. Cornell is an excellent server as well as setter, and her consistency is also a big plus. Only a junior, Cornell plays very smart on the court and looks to bring this into next years competition.

Owls take second in NCAA tourney

By Scott McPherson
Assistant News Editor

Someone had to lose. And following a 4-0 blowout at the hands of Barry University, the Lady Owls soccer team knew it had lost to a better team.

Coach Bert Poirier and the Lady Owls returned from Miami late Sunday night, after dropping the championship game of the NCAA Division II finals. An old nemesis, Barry scored twice in each half to end the Lady Owls hopes for a national championship.

Senior half-back Denise Lyons said while the team was initially disappointed with losing, they soon realized it was to a better team.

"We were just out classed, they were a better team and deserved to win," Lyons said.

The Lady Owls could not manage a goal against a superior Barry team, and only mustered eight shots on net. "The offense just wasn't there," Assistant Sports Information Director Mark Nogy said. Nogy traveled to Florida with the team and watched both the final and semi-final games from the press box.

"Barry dominated the game in all aspects," Nogy said. "They neutralized some of our better players."

Nogy said Barry wasted no time in finding the back of the Owls net. Just under 10 minutes into the game, the Buccaneers pushed the ball past freshman goaltender Kara Dubois.

"Our normally tight defense had a breakdown," Nogy said. Three goals later, the season was over for the Lady Owls.

Thanks to Philo Robinson's 26th goal of the year, the Owls made it one step closer to the championship than last year.

In the semi-final game against California State University at Dominguez Hills, Robinson scored the lone goal propelling the Owls one step closer to a national championship.

The goal did more than win the game for the Owls. Robinson is one of the top goal scorers in the country and that goal might just push her into the top spot. Lyons notched her 31st career assist, setting a new KSC record in that department.

"After that goal, Cal State-Dominguez Hills really turned it on," Nogy said. But thanks to the goaltending of Dubois, the Owls held on to win. "Kara Dubois made some incredible saves," Nogy added.

College may lose $700,000 in cuts

By Jeffrey M. Chadburn
Executive Editor

Keene State College is expected to lose almost $700,000 because of a mid-year recession in state-appropriated funds. The cuts may result in the elimination of programs and tuition increases, according to Keene State President Judith Sturnick.

At an open forum for faculty, staff and administrators, Sturnick said yesterday that a shortfall in state revenues will force a 10 percent recession, or recall, of funds given to the college for its operating budget by the state.

The exact percentage of the recall is not known, however, various sources put the current budget deficit at 9.8 percent, and this seems to indicate that the recession will be 10 percent.

All campuses within the University System of New Hampshire, Sturnick noted, are facing a similar dilemma. Plymouth State College, the University of New Hampshire, UNH-Manchester, and the School for Lifelong Learning may also lose funding.

Sturnick characterized this as "a significant and severe" cut that will cause great damage. She said, "To deny that would only be stupid."

A final decision on the exact percentage of the recall will not come until late February or mid-March. The college can not wait until then to deal with the problem however, Sturnick said.

There has already been activity regarding the possible measures of coping with the cut. Sturnick indicated that the members of the Campus Planning and Budget Advisory committees have met and begun discussing the situation. At some point in the near future, proposals for dealing with the cut will be presented to these committees for discussion.

"They will determine what can be cut with the least amount of damage to the institution," Sturnick said. She noted that the vice presidents have been asked to look at their departments and determine which areas could be cut or curtailed with the least amount of damage.

The college has already taken measures to conserve funds. Major equipment expenditures have been put on hold, travel by administrators has been put on hold, as well as some repair and renovation projects.

There has also been a review of the enrollment management situation with emphasis being placed on retention and a speeding up of the financial development project and applications for grants.

At the forum, administrators noted that these cuts are the beginning of approximately three years of financial problems for New Hampshire and consequently, higher education. "Next year's budget will be a budget of scarcity," Sturnick said. The five percent increase expected next year will most likely not happen and there is also the possibility of more cuts.

On the subject of cuts, Sturnick said that we must not look for the quick fix. She said the college must not give up the vision of being the public four-year college of choice by the year 2000. To achieve this vision, cuts in programs must be carefully considered. Sturnick indicated that at this time there are no specific areas targeted. She did say that the "total institution" would be looked at.

The tuition increase is a hot topic with the Board of Trustees, Sturnick said. It is very likely that there will be an increase in both in-state and out-of-state tuition in the fall of 1990. There is also some indication that the trustees may put into effect a tuition increase for in-state students for the spring 1990 semester.

Gov. Judd Gregg's office was unavailable for comment yesterday. "No institution will roll over on this issue," Sturnick concluded. There are already plans for another forum on December 5. The college will also host a "major legislative event" in January. This event will include many legislators coming to Keene State for men's and women's basketball games, as well as a reception to try to inform them of problems the college would face with a 10 percent recession.

President Sturnick will hold an open forum for students tonight from 6 to 7 p.m. in the Keene Lecture Hall in the Science Center.
