

WINTER WONDERLAND

WANDERLUST IN WINTER WONDERLAND—A really great way to get away from it all, if that's your pleasure, is to go snowmobiling in New Hampshire's "back country". There are trails, formal and informal, in abundance for snowmobile fun. The site above is in the vast woodlands of Dixville Notch, a comparative stone's throw from the Canadian border.

New Hampshire Winter Holidays Now Available

CONCORD - The Office of Vacation Travel's (OVT) "Winter Holidays," a compact directory on winter activities in New Hampshire, with emphasis on skiing, is now available to the public.

"Anybody contemplating skiing in the Granite State this winter will find Holidays invaluable as a directory for areas, large or small, and for general information," OVT said.

Published in cooperation with the New England Guide, also of Concord, Holidays carries advertising matters for inns, lodges, restaurants, etc., to assist skiers in finding out about accommodations.

The booklet is available by dropping a note to Holidays Ed., Office of Vacation Travel, P.O. Box 856, Concord, N.H., and may be picked up, in person, at OVT branch offices, called New Hampshire Vacation Centers, in Boston, Montreal and New York.

FAMILY FUN -- Here and there, and now and then, you will still find a family enjoying a sleigh ride in New Hampshire as this one is doing at Tamworth. Snow this depth, and greater, is usually coming in that area. Can you spot the trio of sleigh bells on the monplace in that area. (State of N.H. Photo by Dick Smith) shut?

REQUEST CONVOCAION ON WISEMAN

Jack Brouse and Marilyn Treat discuss the Wiseman issue before their meeting with President Zorn.

Constructive Dissent Towards Forming a More Adequate and Healthy Society

by Dennis Clark

I would like to take this opportunity to compliment Dr. Carl R. Granquist, Jr., on his advocacy of political inactivity and mass apathy among the populace. This article was one of best arguments for primitive conservatism and maintenance of the status quo that I have read in quite a long time.

Dr. Granquist provided two excellent examples of how mass action had resulted in a government or system more unresponsive to the needs of the people than the system in existence before the revolutionary activity. It is quite true to say that there have been several examples in history of irresponsible revolutionary action and there will undoubtedly be several more in the future. Often times it has been the case that a revolution founded upon idealistic principles was destined to disintegration due to the unscrupulous character of its leaders. What was once a genuine interest in the people disintegrated to the level of selfish lust and power and wealth. People have made these mistakes simply because of their finite nature. There is probably no one who would dispute the advantages the American political system has over many others, but this is no excuse to remain stagnant for there is still much to be done.

Until such time as the establishment is perfect, it must expect to withstand criticism and dissent. I am convinced that much of the dissent which prevails in America today is playing a more constructive than destructive role. It is not an attempt to destroy the system, but merely an effort to make it more adequate to serve the needs of the American populace. After all, it must be remembered that in theory the prime purpose of the American government is to be a servant to the people, or perhaps better stated, the people are the government. People who condemn or dissent from the establishment are not federal criminals, although several people in power would like us to think this. A man who acts out of moral responsibility to himself is a greater patriot than one who follows the lead of a propaganda infested power structure out of blind obedience. A look at Nazi Germany is significant to prove what blind obedience to a system can result in. Could Hitler have succeeded if the people in his country had exercised moral responsibility — I rather doubt it. Destruction of the establishment might not be realistic, but on the other hand, my country right or wrong is not realistic either, for as Dr. Johnson so aptly states "Patriotism is the refuge of a scoundrel." Criticism of the draft and abhorrence of the war is more aimed at correcting the system policies than at achieving its destruction. Dissent is of primary importance to the continuation of American democracy and any attempt of the system to squelch it will result in the end of democracy. If the establishment is correct it has little to fear from constructive dissent. Because the obvious voracity of its ideology will clash with the dissent and hence enhance their position, but if the establishment is incorrect this will also be evident and we will be on the way towards correcting this error in policy. The purpose of dissent is to provide a government more responsive to the needs of its people not to initiate the destruction of the government.

I will admit, Dr. Granquist, that many of the hopes which people strive for tend towards idealism and will receive criticism from a cynic or ultrarealist. But this is no reason to hold that idealism has always been bad. The revolutionary activity in America is an excellent example of the successful striving for ideals. The leaders of the revolution of 1776 were dissenting from the system that existed

Meet the New Faculty

Charles E. Hornbeck, a professor of philosophy, attended Phillips University in Oklahoma, Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., and the University of Nebraska. He has also served as an assistant professor at Emory.

Mr. Hornbeck commented that he feels KSC has good potential as a liberal arts college, and added (Continued on page 7)

Karen Lavery

Miss KSC Candidates

Sandra Ewing is a senior and an elementary major. She was born in Charlton, Mass., and attended Charlton High School where she was vice president her junior and senior years, a member of the National Honor Society, and a representative to the student council.

Sandy is a transfer student from Cottey College in Nevada, Missouri. While at Cottey she was a member of the National Student Government, a senior class representative to the executive board, a member of the Delphin Society, and a women's residence counselor. She also performed in the school play and was a member of the Glee Club.

In her spare time Sandy enjoys collecting antiques, interior decorating and flower arranging.

Karen Lavery was nominated by the class of '71. Karen is from North Attleboro, Mass., where she attended North Attleboro High. She was a member of the pep club, ski club, a staff member of the school newspaper and the yearbook. She was also Senior Prom Queen.

Karen is majoring in Elementary Education. Her outside interests include sewing, knitting, skiing, and horseback riding.

Jane Ellen Padron was nominated to represent the Junior Class. She is from Tenafly, N.J., and attended Tenafly Senior High where she was a member of the Home Economics club, Band, and Girl's Athletic Club.

After graduating from high school in 1966, she attended Garland Jr. College in Boston, Mass. (Continued on page 7)

In a meeting with Dr. Zorn and Dean Davis last Wednesday, five students were told that student opinion was being considered in the Wiseman issue.

The students, Jim McDonald, Ken and Cheryl Paradis, Gary Jonah and Marilyn Treat when asked to comment on the meeting said they were no more informed on the matter than they were when they entered the President's office, and Miss Treat said she was "dissatisfied with the system" since it apparently allowed questionable procedures to go unanswered.

In the meeting, the students said that Dr. Zorn indicated that Wiseman had not been dismissed for the alleged incompetence charges, and that the ethics of procedures did not allow specific comment from his office on the reasons for the terminal contract.

Wednesday afternoon, three students, Jack Brouse, Gary Jonah, and Marilyn Treat went to the President's office again to ask for a college wide convocation.

They reported that Dr. Zorn agreed to consider their proposal and give a response by the following Wednesday.

Mr. Brouse allegedly told the President that "we are committed to this issue, and will have to follow our convictions." The President answered saying that he felt the students would have to follow their own consciences in the matter, and added that that group coercion had never been a successful means of realizing goals. Miss Treat reportedly said that the students had been very careful to this date to do nothing that would be considered offensive, and that since the students were making an honest endeavor to act in a responsible fashion she felt that the administration should likewise accept the responsibility to answer the students' questions. She reportedly added that she was not satisfied with the administration's response to the petition, and was opposed to the procedures that are currently used for issuance of a terminal contract, and therefore, she said, she did not feel it was right for her, nor was it her responsibility to try and answer student questions on the issue. She said her main objection to the procedures is the allowance of issuing a terminal contract without stated reason.

The students said that they appreciated the availability of the President's office on the matter. "When we went to see him in the afternoon, he was busy preparing a budget report, but he took the time to discuss the convocation proposal issue in detail," said Mr. Jonah. Mr. Brouse added to that, "Yes, we appreciate his availability, and consideration, but that does not mean we can accept a negative response on our request for convocation." Miss Treat said that "in readiness to discuss the matter with us in his office still does not answer all student questions, and it does not change that which has to be changed."

When asked if it was perhaps inevitable that students could not do anything for Wiseman, Miss Treat borrowed from Marshall McLuhan, "There is absolutely no inevitability as long as there is a willingness to contemplate what is happening."

Constitutions Tabled

by Sandra Brown

The Student Senate met Tuesday December 3 in the Library Conference Room. President Don Nelson asked for the reading of the minutes of the last meeting which was a special meeting called to discuss the proposed change of women's hours.

The reports of the committee meeting were read and Marilyn Treat reported on the College Senate.

At the last College Senate meeting held on November 26, the proposal to change women's hours was informally passed and the College Senate is now awaiting a workable solution to the problem of how girls coming in late will get into the dorms.

Constitutions of the Keene State College Choir and the Keene State College Chamber Singers were handed out. But Robert Anderson, Sophomore Class President, raised the question on what criteria the Senate judges any of the Constitutions and what the purpose of the Senate is in ratifying them.

The criteria required are that the constitution show the purpose of the organization and its structure. In the past organizations were accepted if their function was not in conflict with the Student Handbook or any other College policy.

The question was raised as to whether guidelines should be set down by the Student Senate for the forming of constitutions of organizations. This was suggested because some constitutions contained more information than others.

Steve Skibonowsky moved to take all constitutions and take action to set up guidelines by which a constitution may be judged adequately. The move was seconded and passed.

THERE WILL BE NO PAPER THE WEEK OF THE 18th

Workday Overwhelms APO

December 7, 1968 was workday for members of the Eta Delta Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, the National Service Fraternity. Fraternity brothers worked from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. throughout the city of Keene and the surrounding area. A gain of $70 was realized — due both to the hard work of the fraternity brothers and the generosity of our customers. Odd jobs ranged from polishing sterling silver to painting and to raking leaves. All the members enjoyed working with the people they met. The fraternity tried to act as quickly as possible on the many calls we received. We'd like to express our gratitude to all those who made this community service project a success.

Progress has been made in our attempt for campus recognition. Our constitution was approved by the Student Senate several weeks ago. We are anxiously waiting for a national representative to come to KSC to check out our organization and to give his recommendation to the national committee. We hoped to be recognized by the national committee and by the College by the end of the second semester.

Plans are being made for a Used-Textbook Sale for the first few days of the coming semester. Fliers, requesting student participation in this campus-wide service project, are being sent to all students on campus. Commuting students can pick one up at the Student Union Desk. Further information will be posted around campus in January. We request that you return the slip at the bottom of the flier by Monday, December 16, 1968 at the latest so that the fraternity can see whether the student body will support this project or not. Return slips to the following places or people:

Student Union Desk
Monadnock Hall - Desk
Huntress Hall - Dennis Anderson in Room 111
Fiske Hall - Desk
Randall Hall - Desk
Our next meeting will be on December 17, 1968, Tuesday evening at 5:45. We will meet at the Dining Commons if possible. Any interested male students at KSC are invited to come.

Disposable Caps & Gowns

Twenty some years from now middle-aged fathers and mothers may be digging out old graduation outfits from dusty attic storage spaces.

With a little pulling-in of the stomach and standing up straighter, chances are the outfits will look just as good then as they do now... even though they are inexpensive disposable "paper" caps and gowns from Scott Paper.

And, the souvenir aspect of the disposable caps and gowns is only one reason for their growing popularity, according to Thomas W. Klein, Scott vice president and president of the company's Disposable Textiles, Inc. subsidiary.

The cap and gown the student keeps costs no more than the average $5 rental fee for a returnable cloth outfit, Klein claimed, and there is no need for a deposit fee.

Another time-consuming and frustrating chore — to both the graduates and the school administrators — which is also eliminated Klein says, is the necessity of checking in and checking out the rental outfits.

When the graduate gets his diploma, he is finished; he doesn't have to worry about standing in line for 30 to 40 minutes to turn in his rental outfit in order to get back his $15 deposit.

And, of course, school officials are relieved of the extra-curricular duty of processing, handling and storing a few hundred caps and gowns.

More than 2400 University of Cincinnati graduates wore disposable caps and gowns at their June graduation ceremonies, and the University of Massachusetts also used disposable outfits, along with other colleges and high schools, Klein said.

The Scott caps and gowns, marketed through its DTL subsidiary, are available in white, black, blue and red. They match up in looks with the regular outfits because of the tailoring, stirred sleeves, cloth bindings, and pleated front and back. The mortarboards are complete with a white nylon tassel. Manufactured of 100 percent rayon, they are said to be lint free and static-free, as well as fire-retardant. Through use of special measurement cards, the gowns can be almost custom-fitted.

Coffee House?

The Student Union Board of Control, through the hard work of Mr. Campbell, and Mr. Moore, have been given the downstairs room of the snack bar for use as a coffee house. The room may be painted or decorated in any fashion which the students feel would set the mood of a coffee house.

It is the hopes of the board that the room can be made into something more than just a coffee house. It will be a place where students can meet, be entertained, and take an active part in what is going on in the room. The students of KSC finally will have a place where they can go, and in their own way, be creative. This creativity can be reflected by poetry reading, expression of political beliefs or by just saying something one wants to say.

The board feels that if a student can express himself in the presence of forty people, he will be able to do the same in front of 4,000 people.

No definite plans have been made as to when the coffee house will be open or how it will be run. The students interested in solving these problems, and other problems which may arise are asked to meet in the downstairs room of the snack bar at 8:00 Monday evening.

If you can't make it, and still want to help, leave your name with Rick Rot, TKE House.

The room will be run by students only, so only students can make the idea a reality.

Party For Give A Damn Cast

A party was held this past weekend at the home of sculptor John Torres for the cast of Give A Damn. 15 KSC students attended, along with director Jere Michael, and two students from the summer project.

Torres spoke to the cast on the purpose of the show, saying that more important than the money that was being raised, was the public opinion war being waged through the program. He added that the project received 11 scholarships in one week's time. Director Jere Michael talked to the cast about taking the show further, and said that Colby College has agreed to make the necessary arrangements for March of second semester.

Alpha

Final preparations are now being made for Alpha's annual Christmas party for underprivileged children. To be held this Saturday afternoon at Alpha House. A list of 17 needy children was obtained from the salvation army in Keene. It is our hope that these 17 youngsters will have something enjoyable to remember about Christmas this year.

Alpha had several intramural basketball games last week, with the "A" team pulling out a close win over the Keene J.V.'s in the preliminary contest to the Lowell game. The "B" team also had a win this week by soundly defeating an independent team. This brings the "A" team's record to 3-0, and the "B" team's to 2-0. The unfortunate "F" Troop also had a game this week and amused the crowd while being defeated by Toko C. Brother John Carmozz was sidelined from the game due to an injury. F Troop's record remains unblemished at 0-2.

The winners of our raffle were picked on Dec. 3. First prize of a $100 gift certificate to Ed Bergeron's went to Mr. John Carmozz, Sr. of Manchester, the father of our injured F Trooper. The other two winners, who received $25 gift certificates, were Miss Campbell, the campus nurse and Mrs. Kilian, who works in the college library. The purpose of this raffle was to raise money for the house fund.

We would like to warn the campus to be on the alert for the Alpha Duck, who has already started snooping around for information for the Alpha Opera. His secret files have been piling up with candid photos and quotes since September. The Alpha Duck is everywhere!

explain that the holdup of ratification was not the content of their constitutions but rather the questioning of the Senate of its own ratification policy.

The Public Relations Committee was asked by Don Nelson to publicize Student Senate meetings the Thursday before rather than on Monday.

The Finance Committee asked that campus groups needing money submit their reports to the Senate soon.

The Student Affairs Committee arranged to have a meeting Saturday, December 7 upstairs in the Student Union to begin revision of the Student Senate's Constitution and to begin setting up guidelines for campus organizations' constitutions.

There was no new business but Frank L'Hommethus announced that the U. N. H. Faculty Senate recently decided to have 50 faculty and administrative personnel and 25 student representatives on the Faculty Senate.

Pseudo - Neo - Isolationism

by Tom Stauffer

Several days ago Dean Rusk announced that he intended to do some writing after he left his portfolio with Nixon's Secretary of State. This otherwise obscure bit of news would not bear mentioning were it not symptomatic of something significant for American foreign policy.

For the third time in the twentieth century, the United States appears on the verge of a major debate about isolationism. Mr. Rusk wants to be part of that debate. To people accustomed to seeing the U. S. engaging in one of its periodical exercises of soul searching and hair tearing, it will not come as a shock, but other nations, who never have understood why we seem willing to wash our linen in public, will be watching with great intensity. Isolationism versus internationalism is old hat to even casual observers of American history. Wilson's struggle with the Irreconcilables after World War I and Franklin Roosevelt's struggles with the America Firsters in the 1930's are the most notable of recent examples, but it has also cropped up among the McNary-Haugenites and Kellogg-Brandlers in the 1920's, with many post-World War II Americans before the famous Vandenberg speech, with supporters of the Ludlow Amendment in the Thirties, and with the wide variety of Americans participating in the dissolution of both McCarthy eras. However, to a new generation of Americans alive today, the seemingly obvious arguments of Clamart Oaks and San Francisco's Opera House don't appear as clear cut as they once were.

Several years ago, an important book appeared: THE ISOLATION-IST IMPULSE. The author, Selig Adler, said that when conditions were right, Americans would revert to their psychological hang up of the last century: isolationism. To Adler, Americans were especially prone to this reaction when they were disillusioned with some misadventure abroad such as the wars, the European intrigues of the Twenties and the world's march to war in the following decade. Like these other experiences, with the Vietnam War showing signs of frustration on both sides, the ideal condition for negotiations, the conditions appear similarly ideal for national dissolution.

The people who supported the war will find that Johnson's lofty call to defend freedom and self-determination was a charade. Those who have opposed the war are unhappy already. Those whose politics change with the national tide will be swept along as usual.

What is different this time is that Selig Adler's ideas about the origins of the old impulses are out of date. In the past, conservatives have led the fight for return of isolationism. In the past, dissolution expressed in the great national debate has had the positive effect of clearing the air for a short time. Today, all this is different.

Many self-proclaimed liberals, citing American urban decay but myopic about world-wide general decay, on the offensive for a change, are preparing to lead the reaction. Self-proclaimed conservatives, myopic about domestic affairs and ignorant of international affairs, are preparing these time-worn jingoism for yet another time. With their usual places reversed.

The debate has within itself the seeds of further frustration; a situation may well develop where the end result will bring added unhappiness rather than a psychological release. Hard reality forces this unprecedented change of events.

This reality is, that in spite of debate and soul searching, the United States could not become isolationist even if a national referendum were held widely endorsing such a policy. Every indicator shows that the U. S. is so immersed in the politics, economics, technology, and culture of the world that non-involvement is not even a viable option. The dollar, either directly or indirectly, backs every major non-Communist currency in the world today. U. S. productivity directly supports the franc and pound, and the mark and yen remain strong because the United States is guaranteeing Germany's and Japan's security. The dollar is the sole support for gold. The dangers of nuclear exchange, the fashionable term in use these days, intermeshes American security with that of Asia, the Middle East, and Europe. A military isolationism in light of contemporary military strategy and technology would invite war rather than peace, since perspective behavior remains the most characteristic of Soviet military traits. The cultural imperialism of Hollywood, the American tourist and the Wall Street conglomerate tie private strings with the rest of the world that government can not easily break. With world research and development centered on Massachusetts - U. S. 128 and the mixed blessing of mass communications already a long established world cornerstone, the U. S. is the scientific fountainhead in a century where science means survival. European nations fear the brain drain to American shores while the Americans sweep the shelf of Nobel laureates.

Isolationism versus internationalism is no longer debateable. World involvement has won; provincialism is not even possible. Although there are those who would make it a debate, they can only debate a ghost of the past. The retiring Secretary of State must surely think it all a bit ironic... he will debate a non-issue when he knows full well that the debate is already over.

THE SOUND OF SILENCE

by Jack Brouse

I am concerned with both the issues and the man involved in the Wiseman case. Prof. John Wiseman's adequacy as a teacher has been actively upheld and vocalized by a large number of KSC students, and if nothing else, it's THEIR MONEY that says he ought to remain - and yet his dismissal proceeds, on official-looking papers . . . behind closed doors. The inquisition tactics being employed in Wiseman's dismissal are, in themselves, a cause for consternation and questioning. I was first informed that Wiseman was being discharged for being uncooperative with the administration and inadequate in the classroom. Since then, the president of this college has, in private conversation, said that these are NOT the reasons. He said that he was not at liberty to discuss the reason(s) because it would be a breach of AAUP ethics. While adherence to such ethics may in fact be the saving grace of an individual's reputation, it represents, in the Wiseman issue, a breakdown in communications between the Administration and the five-hundred and twelve students who signed the petition to keep John Wiseman. These students have utilized the channels and procedures available to them to procure their rights, (specifically, their right to decide who should teach them and who should not) and yet the administration persists in moving with the secrecy of a Balkan assassin. We cannot even begin to presume that justice is being done, either to John Wiseman or to our own quiet demand that he be retained.

About the man. Prof. John Wiseman is a doctor of Philosophy of American history. As a doctor, he is far more knowledgeable than he needs to be; as a man who has earned a doctorate, he is far more humble about it than he ought to be. He is intelligent and rational, and a volatile, positive force to the intellectual life of this campus. He is also very quiet. He is the kind of man who can get five hundred students to sign a petition for him without his asking. He is the kind of man this campus ought to be looking for . . . NOT ISSUE TERMINAL CONTRACTS TO!

I do not know the personal motives of those factions that wish to have John Wiseman dismissed. I DO know that they are doing it to the arbitrary exclusion of the student voice.

If the administration continues its course of action on the Wiseman issue, if it continues its delinquent neglect of the student voice, then a confrontation is at hand.

I am by no means threatening holocaust or even demonstration. In the spirit of the man being supported, it will be a quiet confrontation, without malice, without destruction. Unlike the weakness inherent in the administration's silence, however, there will be a strength in ours.

WHO'S SCHOOL IS THIS?

Question: When over 1 million dollars is appropriated for a new gym, how is it that monies are not likewise appropriated to open that gym on weekends so that students can use it?

The new gym was supposedly added to the physical plant because the students needed it. And the students do need it. But the students can't use it.

At the time this goes to press, a basketball game of sorts is scheduled for Saturday morning, Dec. 7. Those playing will be faculty members, not students.

How is it that faculty members receive priority over students in use of the building, and more important, why do we even have to ask what should be considered our facilities?

The question, Mr. Keeper of the Keys, is whose school is this?

The fact that faculty use the building is almost incidental to the issue. We don't want you to say they can't use it either. The fact that they use the building simply demonstrates that IT CAN BE USED WITHOUT PERSONNEL.

We think we like the new gym. We think we'd like to make use of its facilities.

So, Mr. Keeper of the Keys, we'd like you to know we appreciate the new gym, yes, we really do, and we have one more question: Do we see the time when the facilities on this campus are made available to students or do we thank our lucky keys you don't lock the bathrooms too?

Disease Carried By Scrap Fish

Little is known about the ecology and life history of non-commercial and non-sports fish. These fish obviously are in competition for food and it appears now that they are very likely vectors of a fish disease called C. columnaris.

In studying this disease for the Atomic Energy Commission, Battelle-Northwest Laboratory, Richland, Washington, has been investigating the upstream migration of adult salmon and the downstream migration of the juveniles. They discovered that C. columnaris virus is low above fish ladders and high below these ladders. In directing their attention here, the scientists have found that fish ladders are harboring scrap fish which carry the disease.

THE MONADNOCK

Dear Elsie:

I go to one of the local colleges here in town, and I have found that this institution is anything but willing to treat me as an adult. I think that I have been thoroughly absorbed into the system because I no longer am capable of trying to change the system that allows me to be treated like a two year old, and I have recently started wetting my bed. What should I do?

Regressed

Dear Regressed:

I felt that before answering your letter, I should consult with the Deans of Women at your school. While said that your institution has a long standing record of high health standards, and recommends, (to insure maintenance of that standard), you change your sheets daily.

Elsie

Dear Elsie,

I am a junior here at Keene State

College and like most juniors who are majoring in the Liberal Arts Curriculum, I am looking forward to graduating in June of 1981. Therefore, since the event of my graduation is so rapidly approaching, I am concerned about finding a graduate school to enroll in what will continue to give me the degree of intellectual stimulation that I have become accustomed to here at Keene State. Could you please give me some information on any colleges or universities in the Mount Ivy area that measure up to the standards of Keene State.

Yours,

A Scholar

Dear Scholar, Since you have received such intellectual stimulation where you are now, you might be interested in following the faculty, when they leave, in lieu of your graduate studies. Word has it that the faculty there have refused tenure, and accepted terminal contracts with Van Camps Pork and Bean Co.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Recently the news media has been reporting on the rumors in certain circles in our nation's capital that the new Nixon Administration may for the first time do something about the current status of our foreign relations with Communist China. That is to say we may finally realize that the government in China that has been in power for some 18 years does in fact constitute the legal government. I can no longer be said with any feasible proof that Chiang Kai-shek is the real ruler of the mainland. I would say that he lost his mandate to govern quite awhile ago. Yet our present foreign policy and solutions used when dealing with China lag behind almost two decades. Our policy of just ignoring China purely for political reasons is no longer acceptable. It would be like, if you pardon the expression, ignoring the elephant in the bathroom. A change is needed in our relations with Communist China. We can no longer close our eyes as if China were some sort of a nightmare that will disappear when we awaken. If we wait too long we may find ourselves confronting a far more formidable force than we might like and with no means whatsoever of having established some sort of diplomatic communications. We cannot turn back and expect the policies used almost twenty years ago to work today. For if the United States truly wishes to preserve peace and prevent a nuclear holocaust then this change must come. China is no longer an onlooker to the Nuclear Club of Nations but an increasingly powerful member. Therefore it is my opinion that recognition of Communist China as well as her admittance to the United Nations is not a question of loyalty, of honor, or political differences, but rather one of necessity. In the final analysis I would like to say that this is my personal opinion and not that of the Young Republican Club of which I am a member. Although I do believe that the general consensus would be in full agreement with me, with the exception of a small minority of Ultra-Conservatives who already look upon me as a Communist-lover or what is worse in their book, a Linsayite. Yet I hope that the future of the Nixon Administration will not be terribly influenced by such backward Conservatives who think the way to move forward is to take three steps to the past and one step to the future.

Respectfully submitted,

Wayne E. Reile

Due to a new copy deadline, with the printer, copy must be into the Monadnock office by 5:00 Thursday evening. Events that take place from Friday morning to Sunday evening at 6:00 can be turned in by 6:00 Sunday evening, but no events of Monday through Thursday turned in Thursday at 5:00 will be accepted.

Columns are requested by Wednesday of each week, and reporters are asked to turn in copy the same day they cover the story. This can help me in covering campus news more efficiently, and in doing better make-up for the paper.

Phostalgia

by Mary Foss

If you have a grandmother, a great aunt or a grey-haired uncle, a grandfather or an aging great cousin - congratulations, you are in the minority. As we age with time, we gradually reduce the years separating "us" from "them" - the old folks, the senile and slow - those in the seventh stage.

Although we are by no means old and decrepit now, the fact still remains, we are getting no younger. Our great aunts were perhaps nineteen and our grandfathers twenty-two, yet there is no proof except for dusty photo albums and cracked unsure voices reminding to psychedelic ears.

Is there a gentle transition from the soft skin to the dried wrinkles? Yes, there has to be yet when you are there - at the end, looking back it must not be gentle.

Our generation has done so much toward change - even in our college - perhaps this renaissance can be carried throughout our lives. We the young now, could be the graceful, secure old - then. As it is; it seems the older people must compete with the glamorous and the athletic, or retreat to the old women's clubs to make pot holders.

When "they" become "we," the problem will not seem unimportant. Could our generation perhaps maintain our fire to the end - are we not close enough now in basic ideas and goals so we could communicate with a stranger who had once attended Brown University or marched to protest The War - could we not publish our own magazines without having to compete with the glamorous fashions of Vogue - could we create our own "Vogue", our own discussions and battles without being shoved around by the young to come?

If our generation can maintain their cool without being hassled by age we will have lived a momentous life.

45 States Permit Studded Tire Use in Snowy Months

Forty-five states, the District of Columbia and all Canadian provinces will allow studded snow tires on their roadways this winter, according to the American Automobile Association.

Five states still prohibit the tires containing small metal stud inserts designed to increase grip. The prohibiting states are Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

Motorists planning interstate trips during winter in cars equipped with studded tires are better off traveling between Nov. 1 and April 1, AAA says. Before and after those dates, studded tires are potentially illegal in nearly a third of all states. Opinion varies widely on the states' acceptance of "passing through" use of the tires.

States permitting unlimited use are: Alabama, Alaska, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Hawaii (except Honolulu), Idaho, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, Washington and Wyoming.

SENATE VOTES TO END BOYCOTT

CONVOCATION SET FOR THE 9th

"Sing-in at the boycott"

President Zorn's Statement Concerning The Boycott

A meeting of President R. J. Zorn and Dean C. G. Davis with Student Senate officers, President Donald Nelson and Vice-President Frank L'Hommiedieu, was held on Tuesday morning. Discussion was for clarification of the situation posed by the resolution of the Student Senate related to a boycott of classes.

Apparently campus divergences arise from differing interpretations of the nature and format of the Monday assembly held with reference to a student petition about the contractual status of Dr. John B. Wiseman. There should have been coordinated advance planning for the meeting, and in the absence of this there were different concepts as to purpose and structure.

The administration expressed its deep regret that not enough time was available for all who wished to speak and for the termination of the discussion at the scheduled end of the meeting. It was noted that the campus controversy is still in an appellate status and that resolution is outside either administrative or student jurisdiction.

There also was discussion of increased student involvement in the evaluation and appeals processes, and there was a useful canvass of some constructive approaches to both short-range and long-range situations.

The student leaders stated that they had learned more about the various matters of concern and that they recognized that direct contact with the President should have been made before a decision by the Student Senate.

All parties are very seriously concerned with the well-being of the college and all spokesmen are agreed that further discussions should seek ways of resolving the situation. It was recognized that cooling of the emotional climate could contribute to progress, and there was agreement upon scheduling another convocation on January 9.

KSC Students in European Tour

KEENE, N.H. — Ten Keene State College students will don the role of ambassadors of good will from the United States next summer when they participate in a European concert tour under the auspices of the New England State College Association of Music Faculties.

On Wednesday, Dec. 10, Student Senate leaders Don Nelson and Frank L'Hommiedieu met with President Zorn to discuss the decision of the Student Senate to boycott classes until the President apologized for the manner in which the convocation of Dec. 16 was handled, and until the president called a new convocation.

In a special meeting on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 17, the Senate elected to continue the boycott since discussion with the president that morning had not succeeded in establishing a date or procedures for the convocation. At that time the Student Senate elected to send the president, Don Nelson, and the Vice president, Frank L'Hommiedieu back to the president's office to discuss procedure, and agreed that the boycott should continue until the Senate as a body approved the convocation procedures that Dr. Zorn would be willing to establish.

In a second special meeting the Senate was told by Nelson and L'Hommiedieu that their demands concerning the convocation had been met. With no discussion, President Zorn's offer was accepted and the boycott was ended. After the meeting there was some discussion concerning the fact that the motion to accept Dr. Zorn's statement and end the boycott had come abruptly to the floor and been passed without discussion. Some of the Senate members apparently felt that the demand for an apology had not been met, since the president included in his statement sentiments of the boycott being a hasty decision on the part of the Senate, and also his statement included that the president regretted the outcome of the convocation, and that he felt that it was the fault of a misunderstanding between student leaders and himself as to the definition of a convocation. A few Senate members were concerned about these classes and felt that the president should be asked to rephrase them, and said that they felt these statements made it sound as if the convocation's failure and consequent boycott of classes had been the fault of students. The Senate leaders indicated that they felt the demand had been met satisfactorily, and that it was desirable to return to classes. The Senate seemed to (Continued on page 2)

Notice

All students are urged to consult with their advisers regarding their spring semester class schedules prior to the formal registration on Jan. 27.

Dr. Clarence G. Davis, dean of instruction, said class schedules have been printed and are available from a variety of sources, including his office in Hale Building, departmental offices and from individual advisers.

"I strongly urge students to consult with their advisers as soon as possible before registration," Dr. Davis said. "This will not, of course, be a pre-registration, but it will enable the student to plan his or her classes for the spring semester before the actual day of registration. And this advance counseling can be of great help when things are less hectic than on registration day."

Classes will begin for the spring semester on Jan. 28.
