Dean search committee elections held today

By C.J. Foster
Equinox Staff

Elections to fill the four faculty openings on the Dean Search Committee will be held Wednesday, February 5. There are eight faculty members on the final ballot from which the top four vote-getters will be chosen to be seated on the committee.

The eight appearing on the ballot were the top eight vote-getters in the January 29 nominating election. They are Stephen Smith (Education), Delmar Ogg (Industrial Ed.), William Sullivan (English), Ted Kehr (Physical Ed.), Richard Scaramelli (History), David Leinster (History), Stuart Goff (Math) and Paul Blacketer (Education).

The committee will also consist of two chairmen whose positions will be filled by Dr. Malcolm H. Keddy and Joan R. Davis, one administrator, James C. Hobart the Director of Administration, and one student. The student will be Student Body President Frank Easton.

President Leo F. Redfern asked Easton to appoint a student to fill the position on the committee and Easton appointed himself.

"I was very interested in this and because of its importance I decided to do the job myself. I have appointed students to positions on other occasions and those positions were not adequately filled," said Easton.

Once the election for the four faculty positions are held and the seats are filled, the committee will begin the process of examining the resumes that have been sent to the college in response to the advertising. According to David E. Harvey, president of the faculty association, and the man in charge of the faculty elections, the first thing that will be done will be a sorting out of the resumes.

"For instance I would assume that those who applied who do not have an earned Ph.D. will simply be sorted out. Then once the list is trimmed down to half a dozen candidates who seem to be the most promising, they will be brought to the campus to be interviewed and to interview. This is usual procedure in search committees I have seen in operation," Harvey said.

After the interviews have been conducted the college search committee will decide on the top three candidates in order of preference. Then these three candidates will be contacted to assure that they will accept the position should it be offered.

"A number of these people will have applied to other institutions and may have had a better offer by that time. If not then the names of these three will be sent to the trustees with the committee's recommendations.

"The trustees will make the ultimate decision as they do in all cases involving the hiring of permanent personnel," Harvey said.

Easton hopes that the students will take an active interest in the selection of a new dean of the college. Even though they have only one vote he feels that the students should make their voices heard.

"I would like to set up meetings between the students and the candidates if that is at all possible. At this point I'm not sure it is possible but I can't see any reason why it shouldn't be," Easton said. Easton went on to say that he hopes that any information a student might have on a candidate will be brought to the committee's attention.

"I don't care if the information is pro or con. Maybe a student might know of a potential candidate that he would like to bring to the attention of the committee. If so, all the student has to do is come to me and I'll talk with him about his ideas and forward them to the committee," Easton said.

Inflation to raise dorm rents, says Hage

By Jerry Falardeu
Equinox Staff

Inflation may raise the rent for your dormitory room anywhere from $75 to $175 next year, according to Richard T. Hage, KSC housing director.

There are no other factors involved in the rising costs, he said.

Included in the inflationary costs are: hourly labor costs, up $5,948 over last year; supply costs, up $8,500; salaries, up $17,753; fringe benefits, up $2,019; and operating maintenance costs, up $58,000.

An energy cost of $120,000 over last year's amount will also effect the cost of on-campus living, Hage said. Also, the debt service (mortgage) increased by $158,000 this year, he added. The Owl's Nests and the Tidale Married Student Apartments added to the mortgage payments, beyond that which is paid annually for the other dorms. Carle Hall's yearly payment alone is $200,000, he said.

"Combined, all these costs are large, and the student must make up the difference for on-campus housing, which is not funded by state appropriations," Hage said.

"There are several ways to alleviate some of these increases," Hage said. "Summer session, rent charged for conventions held here over the summer, and refrigerator rentals can help to relieve some of the expenses, he said.

Also, additional credits from the entire college maintenance budget provided some help, in that the residences don't have to pay for full operation costs alone.

However, Hage said that there are presently 69 vacancies in campus housing, resulting from withdrawals, leave of absences, academic exclusion, release from housing for marriage, student teaching, financial and medical problems, transfers and graduation, another revenue loss.

This is offset in part by 35 double

Pete Seeger, foremost folk singer here Tuesday night

Folk singer Pete Seeger will be performing in Keene State's Spaulding Gymnasium Tuesday, February 11, at 8 p.m.

Seeger, one of America's foremost folk artists and song writers, has been in the vanguard of American music since the late thirties. His compositions include "Turn! Turn! Turn! (To Everything there is a Season)," "Where Have all the Flowers Gone?," "If I had a Hammer," "Last Train to Nuremberg," "The Ball of Rhinny," "If I had a Golden Thread," and "Waist Deep in the Big Muddy."

Seeger began his wanderings in 1938, after spending two years at Harvard. Hitchhiking and riding the rails, he became strongly influenced by folk artists like Woody Guthrie, Leadbelly, and John Lomax. He later joined with Ronnie Gilbert, Lee Hays, and Fred Hellerman to form the Weavers, one of the first successful folk groups, that later influenced such musicians as The Kingston Trio, Peter, Paul, and Mary, Joan Baez, Tom Paxton, and Bob Dylan.

Always a controversial figure, Seeger was labeled as a communist and a subversive during the McCarthy era. He has been blacklisted from television on a number of occasions because of the radicalism of his thinking and his songs.

In the late sixties, Seeger began sailing the Hudson river on the sloop "Clearwater," to dramatize the pollution which has been destroying the river. Holding hootenannies all along the river, the "Clearwater" crew has been raising money to help clean the Hudson and keep the "Clearwater" going.

Seeger has also made a name as a balladeer and a master of the five-string banjo. The songs which he and the Weavers helped to popularize include "Last Night I had the Strangest Dream," "Wimoweh," "Guantanamera," "Wreck of the John B.," "House of the Rising Sun," "This Land is Your Land," and "Goodnight, Irene."

Always quick to spy new talent, Seeger likes to introduce unknown folk artists. At a New England College concert two years ago, he brought with him a gospel group to raise money for a school in Mississippi. Seeger also played an important part in the success of many Newport Folk Festivals, which helped bring to the public attention musicians such as Bob Dylan, Phil Ochs, and Buffy Sainte-Marie. The concert, sponsored by the Concert and Lecture series, will be free for people with KSC I.D.'s. The general public will be charged $1. Tickets will be available to the college this Monday, and to the public Wednesday, February 5. Tickets can be obtained at the Student Union office.

As of today, the Student Union still hasn't sold out the Seeger concert.

Beta Beta Beta will sponsor an Audubon film titled "Journey in Time" tomorrow. The film will be shown in the Waltz Lecture Hall at 7:30 p.m. General admission is $1.50 for adults and $.75 for students, with KSC students, faculty, and staff admitted with an I.D.

'Blood on the Tracks'

By Jim Colburn
Equinox Staff

"Blood on the Tracks" is the Dylan album that we've been waiting for since John Wesley Harding. Bob Dylan has finally come out with a superb album after five years of lackluster or simply bad albums.

"Blood on the Tracks" is not a regression to his earlier music, but rather a progression. Through the five year drought between 1969 and 1974, Dylan occasionally wrote quality songs. Parts of "Morning After," for example, were good. On the whole though, his really quality songs of the last five years were recorded by other performers.

"Down in the Flood," by Blood, Sweat and Tears and "Long Distance Operator," by James Cotton are just two of Dylan's best that were recorded by others.

"Blood on the Tracks" is in some ways reminiscent of John Wesley Harding, and Planet Waves. Planet Waves, his last album, was an improvement, but still just a shower during a drought when a deluge was necessary.

"Blood on the Tracks" is the deluge. Lyrically it is more coherent than his "speed freak folk rock," and his songs are personal and autobiographical, without excluding the listener. It is something a rare few singers and composers can do. Hints of long forgotten idols, Guthrie, Mississippi John Hurt, Jimmy Rogers (the singing Brakeman, please) surface subtly.

Although lacking the shock value and the social import of the classic Dylan albums, "Blood on the Tracks" is easily his best since 1969 and probably his best since 1962. "Buckets of Rain" are good after a drought.

KSC and city avoid court case

By Stephen Gordon
Equinox Staff

The Keene City planning board avoided a court case with KSC last Monday, when it granted the college a building permit to renovate Elliot Hall, without requiring the usual, formal application, George E. Roentsch, city councillor at-large, said.

Had the city not granted a building permit, the case probably would have gone to court, said Roentsch.

During last Monday's meeting of the board, college representatives outlined their plans for building and expansion on campus. Among these plans was the renovation of Elliot Hall, the former Elliot Community Hospital.

But they were not there to request a building permit, said Robert L. Mallat, director of physical plant. Mallat, who was at the meeting, said they were there only to inform the planning board of the college's intentions.

Mallat explained that the college does not recognize the city of Keene as having the power to restrict Keene State College, which is "an arm of the state," from building on its own property.

"A lower level of government cannot restrict a higher level," Mallat said.

He acknowledged that if the board had not given a building permit, legal action would have been taken.

As a precedent to KSC's point of view, Mallat cited the recent courthouse controversy in Keene. The county wanted to put the new courthouse in Fuller Park. Keene argued that this violated its zoning laws, and the issue went to court (in the old courthouse). The New Hampshire Supreme Court ruled that Keene could not put restrictions on the county, a higher level of government.

Roentsch said he had anticipated that the courthouse issue would be what KSC would "hang its hat on," adding that since that issue concerned zoning, the college's hope is a "false hope."

"The question is not zoning," said Roentsch. "The question is Site Plan Review."

Site Plan Review is the method by which plans for building and renovating in Keene are reviewed, and then approved or disapproved. Normally, applicants for site plan review must submit completed forms to the planning board outlining all of the intended changes and/or construction.

According to the New Hampshire Revised Statutes Annotated 36:19-a, Roentsch explained, "A municipality...may further empower the planning board to review, and approve or disapprove, site plans for the development of tracts for non-residential uses."

This law states nothing about the higher level of government being exempt from it, said Roentsch.

The reason that the planning board decided to give the college a building permit, and even be "perhaps not as rigorous" as it normally would, is two-fold, said Roentsch.

First, the issue concerned only the "remodeling of a present building," which is not as crucial as building a new one, he said.

Second, the college did "comply with the spirit of the law," Roentsch said. If the case had gone to court it would have been only because there was no formal application for site plan review, a technicality, he said.

But Roentsch did place an amendment on the approval of the building permit stating that "in the future, the normal procedure would be followed," he said.

The city councillor outlined the reasons why he felt that the college should not be exempt from the city ordinance.

"It would negate home rule," he said, "and New Hampshire, above all, is a home rule state—Thank God."

Roentsch, like Mallat, had a precedent for his point of view. He cited the example of certain municipalities overriding the state's efforts to build an oil refinery in New Hampshire.

A public institution, state or otherwise, should be just as subject to the laws of its community as the private citizens, said Roentsch, adding "perhaps more, but at least as much."

"Some degree of responsibility, is what I call it," he said.

Grand Canyon wildlife film to be shown "Journey in Time," an Audubon wildlife film on the Grand Canyon, will be presented by the Keene State College Biology Club on Thursday, February 6, at 7:30 p.m. in the Waltz Lecture Hall of the science center. The film will be narrated by its producer Robert W. Davison.

The movie commemorates the centennial of the Grand Canyon's discovery. It explores the natural monument's beauty, ecology, and history, and looks at the wildlife inhabitants of the canyon.

Davison, a native of eastern Colorado, has produced more than a hundred films. His work has appeared on such television programs as "Wild Kingdom," "Animal Secrets," "Animal World," and "Audubon Wildlife Theatre." Davison's educational films are being used in schools and libraries throughout the country.

Tickets for the lecture-film will be on sale at the door. General admission is $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students. KSC students, faculty and staff will be admitted free with a college I.D.

Clark joins Wheelock

Deborah Clark has recently joined Keene's Wheelock Elementary School staff as a primary resource room teacher. She will be teaching students in grades 1-3 who need extra help, and will be supervising student teachers from Keene State College.

Clark earned her Bachelor of Science degree in Special Education in 1970 from Florida State University. From 1970 to 1972, she taught in the special education department at Pentucket Regional Jr. High School in West Newbury, Mass.

She received her Master of Science degree in Child Development and Family Relations from the University of Rhode Island in 1974. Her master's thesis was titled "Self-concept of Nursery School Children."

Wheelock is Keene State's laboratory elementary school, designed to give observation and student teaching experience to education majors.

Harris will visit KSC

Former U.S. Senator Fred Harris, candidate for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States, will visit Keene on Thursday, February 6.

Harris will speak to the Monadnock Health and Welfare Council Board of Directors at 12:45 p.m. and at 1:30 p.m. will visit with members of the Keene Senior Citizens Council. At 3 p.m. he will take part in a "Comparative Politics" seminar at Keene State College.

State and local journalists will meet with the former senator for a press conference to be held at Antioch Graduate School, 1 Elm Street, Keene, at 4:30.

The public is invited to attend a coffee to be held in the Antioch library (1 Elm Street) at 7:30.

LIVE sends students on urban duo

Molly McNeill
Equinox Staff

Have you ever tried to live in a city for a couple of days with $1,500? Operation LIVE (Learning In A Vigorous Environment) members will be doing just that this weekend. Eight students, in groups of two, are going to a city with $3 per couple. It is up to them to decide how to spend their money and what they want to do from Friday afternoon to Sunday.

"We are giving the students an opportunity to experience something they normally wouldn't," Keith King, director of LIVE said. They all have certain expectations and can get anything out of the weekend they want. All I'm asking them to do is check in once a day to let me know they're still living."

The students don't know what city they're going to yet because King hasn't really decided and he doesn't want any fraternities to cause problems.

Barbara Herby, who is going this weekend on the trip, said, "It's a design your own weekend. You can get to know the city or the people, anything legal. And there are people that are willing to take you in and help you. There are plenty of colleges, hospitals and restaurants and there's always the police station." Herby added she could bring extra food and money, but she won't.

Keene State has never had an urban duo weekend before, King said. However, the Outward Bound Program has done it several times, he explained. "I spent four days in Montreal with six people once. We had $2.25. We worked in hospitals, and slept on their lawns at night. There were youth hostels but we didn't want to stay in them. We bought peanut butter and ham and day-old baked goods."

If someone on the trip gets into trouble, King will be in the city. They will know what his number is and where to find him, he said. In the city they will let nature take its course and they will survive, he said. "You have to know how to handle nature; don't fight it."

LIVE is not a selective group of people, King said. "It's not just Phys. Ed. majors hanging around in the basement of the gym. Anyone is welcome to join these projects."

LIVE will be holding another urban duo weekend March 7, 8 and 9.

An anonymous young man in King's office said that to go on an urban duo weekend, "You have to be a good garbage

In search of new images

The other day I went to the novelty shop.

"I was sick of myself, so I thought I'd come in to see what you could do," I said to the attendant who, I could tell, didn't quite get off on me either.

"What seems to be your hangup, sir?" he said, looking me over behind bone-rimmed sunglasses.

"No. This'll do. Just suit me up with something more dashing, will you?"

Half an hour later we had gone through everything from Mannix Magnetism to the Night Porter to no avail. I was rather attracted to the Flash Gordon image, but it looked like it might be a little too much, especially the price.

Meanwhile, the salesman was trying to hurry my decision.

"Look," he said. "Maybe you'd just like your batteries recharged."

"I'm still looking," I answered.

"A face lift?"

"No. Thank you."

"Some new skills? Poetry, perhaps?"

"I'll know it when I find it."

"It's almost closing time..."

"Don't rush me, I'll find it!"

"But your looking at the last one we have in stock, sir."

He was right. And what a beauty — "Roller Derby Champ-helmet" and skates not included.

In despair, I wound up buying a purple cape, a Lone Ranger mask and a pair of Spider's suction cup shoes, and rode home stuck to the back of a bus.

From the Staff

"I think I need a new lifestyle," I replied. "Something on the exciting side."

"Good lifestyles are hard to come by these days," he instructed me. "And they are becoming quite expensive as well as rare," he cautioned.

"You can bill me later," I told him.

"Right now I just gotta get out of this personality. It's making me itchy."

He cleared his throat and gave me a disapproving look. "You wanna switch the body too?" Want I wanted to do was get into something more assertive, quick, and clamp his nose with a pair of pliers.

Pub Club is the perpetrator of decadence

Eric Maloney

Last week in this column, the KSC Pub was mentioned as a perpetrator of decadence on the college campus. Additionally, it was charged that the Pub management was primarily responsible.

It is obvious from the negative reaction that the subject needs further elaboration.

Things out of hand

"Things were getting out of hand," said former worker Karla Baldwin, explaining why she quit. "They were turning down the lights, turning up the music, giving out free beer, and encouraging people to get drunk."

It was difficult as a worker, because other workers were condoning the activities, she said.

"I agree that you can't be too strict," she said. "But you can't be without order at all."

Under the former management, occasional rowdiness and release of aggression was expected, Baldwin said.

Now, it's happening all of the time, she added.

Apparently, the Pub Club Board is not concerned about the Pub as a business.

"They just want to make it so that their friends can have a good time," Pat LaFree, another former employee, said.

The reason for this is that the new board feels that it doesn't have anything to worry about. The Pub is established as far as they're concerned, and they now believe that they can let things slide.

The newness has worn off; there are students now here who have no idea why the Pub was created, or why the original board of directors tried to maintain tight control.

The responsibility lies ultimately with the board.

"The Pub manager (Ron Wajda) is given responsibility, but what can he do when everybody is stepping on him?" Baldwin asked.

"The people on the Board don't respect Ron as manager," LaFree said. "They're playing a game to see if they can pull the wool over his eyes."

"Ron could be stronger, but it's hard when you walk into the place and everybody hates you," she added.

(Wajda, a graduate of Keene State, is a full-time employee of the Pub. He was hired by the board of directors to carry out the policies, and is not involved in the decision-making process.)

Wajda's hands are tied by the double standard which exists in his relationship to the board. Some of the board members are also workers, and are therefore both his employers and his employees.

A proposal that would have prohibited board members from working at the Pub was defeated last fall. The motion was presented largely because, although the manager recommends Pub workers, the board makes the final decision. They are therefore hiring themselves. This can be a most lucrative procedure, as witnessed by the fact that four of the seven board members are also currently working.

Hoopsters deserve better

To the editor,

In regard to your article in the January 29th edition of the Equinox, I would like to make a few comments.

First I feel it was done in very poor taste and with much disrespect to a talented ball team.

This article seems to sum up all the nickel-dime comments Glenn Theulen has been passing out in the Keene Sentinel for the majority of the season.

As a former ballplayer and now an avid fan, I can certainly sympathize with the indignation that must be felt by the very fine players of the KSC Owls at the absurd comment by Theulen that the Owls are in the need of talent! I wonder if he realizes the waning attendance of this year? Several people like myself had attended the out of town games so I feel justified in commenting on this.

Maybe other people feel as I do; that the team does not lack talent or is a losing team, but rather we are tired of watching the players being rouletted about and never given the chance to jell as a team.

One who has followed high school ball at all can attest that the likes of Keeler, Yeaton and Pierson are indeed talented ballplayers and were standouts in their respective high schools in New Hampshire. It certainly is a shame that Mr. Theulen is more preoccupied with his lack of funds for bonus babies than with utilizing the current talent at his disposal.

To the team members I would like to

New music at KSC series

Jazz ensemble is involved in a wide variety of activities

By Paula Rowland

Editor's note:

This is the first of a series of articles on music at Keene State.

In the last few years, Keene has become one of the leading spots in the state, as far as the performance of jazz is concerned. One of the reasons for this was the formation in 1970 and consequent development of the KSC jazz ensemble under the direction of associate professor William D. Pardus. The group has played a very large part in the exposure of and the appreciation of jazz throughout New England.

Since its inception five years ago, the ensemble has already been involved in a wide variety of activities. These include numerous alumni functions at the Eastern Regional Convention of the Music Educators National Conference in Boston, (of which an LP recording was subsequently released) and at high schools and colleges throughout New England. Also, the ensemble had the opportunity recently to take part in a trip to Rumania, but lack of funds prevented them from going.

William D. Pardus, associate professor of music and the group's director, has been active in the field of jazz since the age of fourteen. He has performed throughout New England and Europe. Pardus enjoys doing his own arrangements. Unfortunately his busy schedule prevents him from doing more writing, he said.

The ensemble serves two important functions: providing young musicians an atmosphere in which to learn the various aspects of jazz by application and to entertain the public.

The twenty member group consists of four trombone players; Anne Griswold, Steve Cummings, Nancy Whitaker and John Marcousa, who also double on tuba; five saxophones; Alan Chase (tenor), Phil Martin (alto), Brenda McLean (alto), Chris Pardus (tenor), and Scott Mullett (baritone); six trumpets, Chris Weber, Fritz Wendlandt, John McKay, Gerry Polk, Larry Brown, and Dick Raymond. Five percussionists, Tim Smith (drums), Mike Martin (congas), Jim Pappas (bass), Chet Gould (guitar) and Ted Mann (electric bass).

The music that they perform ranges from the "big band" jazz of Stan Kenton and Count Basie to the jazz-rock which is so familiar to everyone today. They've also done arrangements that the students themselves have written. They open every concert with "Caroline and Her Magic Cello Enters the World of Jazz Rock," which has become the group's trademark.

One of the problems that the group has encountered is a large turnover in personnel. It is difficult to retain a continuity and balance in the group for any length of time, said Pardus.

Also, because of the relatively small size of the music department, there are certain sections which need additional personnel, that just can't be found within the department itself. Membership in the group is open to anyone by audition. Non-music majors, if interested, are urged to try out.

Next week the ensemble goes on tour. They will be traveling to Wolfeboro, Berlin, Meredith, and Bethel, Maine, as well as several places in Massachusetts. Also, this spring they may do a television show out of Durham.

The KSC jazz ensemble is a unique experience for all involved. The spirit is evidenced in every performance. Last semester's on-campus concert was proof that the public enjoys listening to their music just as much as they enjoy performing it.

Pardus: the arranger

Maloney - the pseudo-intellectual

To the Editor,

In my past four years at Keene State College I have read almost every edition of the Equinox. During those four years I have seen some excellent articles, which, unfortunately, were greatly overshadowed by poorly written, poorly edited and generally saline articles and editorials, authored by a group of true pseudo-intellectuals. This group, of which you, Mr. Maloney, figure as one of its more prominent dolts, has continually criticized every aspect of this campus, with absolutely no regard whatsoever for any other organization or group which has attempted to do some constructive good for Keene State. Continually you and your equally biased and close-minded friends have written completely meaningless and destructive articles with the only apparent purpose being to promulgate your self-made myth of your intelligence.

Rarely, if indeed ever, have you bothered to present constructive, helpful ideas for the betterment of the academic and social areas of Keene State. It has been, rather, your constant policy (with amazing regularity) to present to the student body a newspaper filled with some of the most foolish, mindless editorials, while adamantly refusing to employ any semblance of a college person's intelligence.

One of your favorite topics has been the fraternities, which you continually bicker about. You appear to find a great deal of fault with fraternities, yet you have never bothered to ascertain what the meaning of a fraternity is, and what is exactly entailed in being a member of a fraternity. My patience has, after four years, worn so thin, that at this point I can feel only unremitting pity for you, as an empty headed, self-centered, egotistical fool who cannot grasp reality. It is time for you to quit your path of endless criticism (which is the mark of a weak man) and attempt, if you can muster the backbone, to help this college. Instead of printing further similar articles which are, by the very fact that they are printed, a complete waste of the student's money.

In conclusion, it would benefit us all if you would remove yourself from your tower (or is it pedestal?) on the third floor of the Student Union, from which I recall you once refused to move the Equinox for you felt that this view gave you a better grasp of the students (what self-delusional), and see the vast majority of the students of Keene State College as they truly are, hardworking and conscientious people who believe in the virtues of an open-minded, total college experience. It is an experience which would greatly benefit you.

Sincerely,

Maloney - on his pedestal

To the editor,

Can you believe that after two weeks of college courses the students are still allowing themselves to be "pulverized by pseudo-music which undoubtedly is forcing the imminent in the collapse of the American system of values."

Wow! Yes students as pointed out by Eric Maloney's editorial in the January 29th Equinox, "The social irresponsibility such as is being exhibited on this campus is largely a result of students not accepting their responsibilities for shaping their own lives."

And yes, as Maloney pointed out we are all being terrorized by

"ABSTRACTIONS" That's right, abstractions. Which, in some of us, cause undefinable forces which vaguely set the traditional freshness and enthusiasm of youth."

But what can we do about it? That of which is spelled out by student social philosopher Eric Maloney. "Stop! All the abstractions, which are products of the atmosphere, but that of decay is perpetrating all of us" and force us to go to college socials and to join the largest student organization in the history of Keene State College, "The KSC Pub Club."

You must enter the doors of the Pub Club with caution, due to the fact that our Highly Regarded (sic) Manager is controlling the noisy uncontrolled, grimy atmosphere of the inside with complete authority.

It is my opinion that our patrons are adult enough to extend their gross behavior in a civil and intelligent manner, having fun, allowing themselves to become less pressured by the "conscious of the effect which they have on their environment and consider carefully their motives and actions."

I am sure that frustration, immaturity and other emotional deprivation will not peculiar to depress you into making us all

Yea, Maloney!

To the Editor,

Bravo! Somebody has used another word besides "apathy," and "social irresponsibility." Has a nice clear cut ring to it. Hats off to Eric Maloney, the man must be a genius!!!

Thanks given

To the Editor,

Thank you very much for the timely and complete coverage of the college's Monday Night "History of the Cinema" series. All are welcome, and there is, as you stated, no charge.

However, credit must be given to the appropriate people, and it is not true that the Fine Film Society is sponsoring this program. The series is being jointly sponsored by the Student Union, the Division of Continuing Studies, and the English Department. We have Dean Stewart, Dr. Keddy, and Mr. Milani to thank for the funding. However, questions and suggestions covering the program may be directed to me, as co-ordinator.

Sincerely,
Larry Benaquist

confirm that there are plenty of fans who feel you are a top notch team and would be second to none if you were coached by someone who was interested in the fundamentals of good basketball, rather than displaying open contempt for the veteran players with his comments and starting lineup.

The lack of talent seems to be that KSC is lacking the likes of a Digger Phelps or a John Wooden!

Women's swimmers off to a strong start

The KSC women's swim team has gotten off to a strong start this year under the direction of coach Scott Lockman. At the semester break the Owls record was 2 wins and 3 losses and a respectable 5th place finish in the Masse-Spears Invitational Relays at Wellesley College. This year's team has a lot of depth and versatility with freshmen Lynda Horne, Sylvia Corley, Beth Poschel, Donna Betzig, Laura Kearney, Mary-Alice Ford, and junior transfer Kay Brady and Darlene Lambert joining veteran's junior Lynette Gemme, and Seniors Cindy Sanford and Donna Kuethe.

After demolishing Fitchburg State in their first meet by a score of 79-24, Keene lost the next meet to UNH. The Owls led by one point until the last event, a 400 yard Freestyle Relay: UNH won the relay and the meet by a 57-51 score.

The high point of the season, so far has been the dual meet against Southeastern Mass. University where the Keene women not only beat the SMU swimmers, but earned 2 out of 3 places in all but one event. Starting out in the 200 yard freestyle, Keene's Kay Brady and Donna Kuethe finished 2nd and 3rd. Keene took 1st and 2nd in the 100 yard individual medley with Donna Betzig and Lynette Gemme finishing in 1:14.5 and 1:15.9. Linda Horne and Sylvia Corley earned 1st and 2nd for Keene in the 50 yard backstroke and in the 50 yard freestyle Keene's Beth Poschel won in 28.5 with team mate Laura Kearney earning 2nd in 30.5. Cindy Sanford and Mary Alice Ford picked up 2nd and 3rd place finishes for Keene in the 50 yard breaststroke. In the 50 yard Butterfly event Owls Donna Betzig and Lynette Gemme tied for 1st with a time of 33.9. Keene continued the dominance in the 100 yard events with Beth Poschel and Laura Kearney taking 1st and 2nd in 100 yard freestyle and Linda Horne and Lynette Gemme taking 2nd and 3rd places in the 100 yard backstroke. Both of Keene's relay teams the 200 yard Medley Relay team and 200 yard freestyle relay team beat the SMU teams. In the diving event, Keene's Sylvia Corley took 1st with 63.5 points and Beth Poschel diving for the first time in competition earned 3rd with 47.25 points. Keene's other diver, Darlene Lambert was unable to accompany the team to SMU. The final score was 75-29.

Keene then participated in the Masse-Spears Invitational Relays at Wellesley College and finished 5th out of 15 teams including Radcliffe, Northeastern University, MIT, Boston University, Smith, Brandeis and Wellesley.

The Owl women then dropped two meets in a row losing first to an extremely strong Southern Connecticut State College team on Tuesday Dec. 11th and then dropping another, two days later to the University of Connecticut. Although both of these meets were losses, the individual performances and times were much improved.

In November the New England Women's Intercollegiate Swimming Association published the top 10 times for each event. Keene placed 4 swimmers and a relay team in this. Linda Horne was 8th in both the 50 yard and 100 yard backstroke. Donna Betzig was 9th in the 100 yard Individual Medley. Beth Poschel was seated 8th in the 100 yard freestyle and 4th in the 50 yard freestyle with a time of 28.5. Keene's 200 yard freestyle relay team of Linda Horne, Donna Betzig, Lynette Gemme and Beth Poschel are seated 8th with a time of 1:58.5.

There are four more meets scheduled for the women- Boston College, Brandeis, Wellesley and Dartmouth College.

Facts from Fizz

Owls by 30 points over Bentley

Well, here it is February and no one has put the sports world on its ear yet. No, not since Johnny Miller left the cover of Newsweek and sank into relative obscurity by passing the "Hawaiian Open" have we been entertained. Perhaps some predictions for 1975 are in order.

The "Superstars Contest" will be won by Harmon Killebrew on the strength of his 25.9 in the 100 yard dash. The runner up was Orlando Cepeda.

*Dave Cowens will be voted M.V.P. and Bob McAdoo in a fit of terror will sink Ernie D. From 15 feet. Swish!

*Oscar Robertson will be fired by CBS and replaced by Johnny Most to comply with the fairness doctrine. Goodbye, Oscar.

*Abdul-Jabbar will leave Milwaukee and go to the Washington Bullets for Kevin Porter and Washington's number one draft pick until 1989. Let's see that 's 15 inches and 15 draft picks.

*Jim Rice and Fred Lynn will be voted "Co-Rookies of the Year" but the Red Sox will lose to Baltimore in the last week, despite Dick Poole's 30 win season.

*Bobby Orr will be the first player ever to score from behind his own net on a backhand while being molested by Dave Shultz.

*The Owls will beat Bentley by 30 points and make the cover of "Ripples Believe it or Not."

Yes it looks once again like the Celtics are the class of the NBA Sundays display against Milwaukee was awesome, unless one starts to wonder if the Bucks without Jabbar are really worse than the New Orleans Jazz. John Havlicek played his 1000th game for the Celtics and looks to be coming into his own as a basketball player. The only serious competition visible in the playoffs is from Washington, but never count out the Buffalo Braves who can score lots of points on anyone. The West however, seems very weak.

In all seriousness the ABC Superstar Competition has to be the biggest waste of time of all. How millions of Americans can stay glued to their TV sets to watch Carl Yastrzemski ride a bike or Rod Laver hit baseballs is beyond comprehension. Watching athletes perform in their own artistic expertise is a matter of some interest but the "Superstars" is an insult to Americans—and shows a definite lack in culture, but so does most of what's offered on the tube these days.

The Red Sox will enter 1975 with the usual number of ifs. Baltimore and the Yankees appear to have a definite edge on the Sox but let's hope they at least make it interesting. For the sake of the sentimentalists let's hope Tony Conigliaro makes a comeback.

Whether you blame it on that old college nemesis "apathy" or the new standby—student alcoholism—recent Owl home games have been less than sellouts. Perhaps sports has lost a bit of its lure on the College campus in today's world. Getting excited about a meaningless athletic contest seems absurd to some, and a waste of time to others, and these feelings are often justified. Competitive sports, however, are often a good form of cheap entertainment and if you feel yourself getting excited, don't suppress it. The Owls are capable at times of playing very entertaining basketball, if less than artistic at times.

Gym team is defeated

The Keene State College Women Gymnastic team lost to Westfield State College and Connecticut College February 1 in a meet held at Westfield State. Connecticut had a strong 72.45 followed by Westfield State with 68.00. The Keene team finished a strong third with a score of 66.00.

While the Keene team was bested in the team scoring, there were a number of individual stars which brightened Keene's day. Senior Han Souza scored a 7.25 in the vaulting event and later scored a strong 6.75, despite a fall, in the beam.

Mary Lou Moscaritolo, and Cheri Rovegno both received a 6.65 in the vaulting event with Moscaritolo also scoring a 4.6 with her bar routine. Lorraine Houk scored a 4.7 on the bar in her efforts for the Keene team. Gail Grafton led the Keene team in floor exercises with a score of 6.15.

The next gymnastic meet will be held at 12 noon at Plymouth State College February 8. Along with Plymouth State, Keene will be competing against the Dartmouth Gymnastic team.

Ski team gets 3rd

The Women's Ski Team fared well in its first divisional meet hosted by Bates College at Lost Valley, Me.

Keene placed third overall out of a field of nine teams. Keene's alpine team is the best in the division. As the Nordic team gains experience and confidence Keene should place first or second at the Division II Championship. This would allow them to go to the Division I championship.

Individual performances: Sue White, first place slalom, first place giant slalom, tenth place cross-country. Loren Clark, third place slalom and fifth place giant slalom.

Owls are victorious over Johnson State

Coach Glen Theulen

By Gary Fitz
Equinox Staff

The Owls reached the .500 point with victories over Johnson State and the University of Maine at Portland-Gorham last week.

Coach Glenn Theulen said he feels his team is now ready to play consistent basketball the remainder of the season. They seem to have settled the internal squabbles that have hampered the club's effectiveness of late, he said.

All was not a bed of roses in last week's games, however. Despite playing very well nearly the entire game against a talented Johnson State, the Owls nearly blew a seven point lead in the last two minutes. It was a Johnson mistake, however, that cost the Vermont team a chance for victory.

Trailing by two with six seconds remaining Johnson called an illegal timeout. This relinquished any hope of sending the game into overtime.

Friday the Owls entertained the University of Maine at Portland-Gorham, who was suffering through a nightmarish season. They have won only one of their 13 games this season. They have only eight players, which include four freshman and two sophomores.

The Owls, perhaps a bit overconfident, played in a daze the first seven minutes. When they awoke they found themselves trailing 16-2. From this point on the Owls played well. They reduced the lead to three with one minute remaining and trailed by only five at halftime.

Led by George Roy (20 points, 11 rebounds), Jim Drew (22 points), Al Hicks (20 points) and Mark Yeaton (16 points) the Owls blew out Portland-Gorham in the second half. In the first two minutes they turned a five point deficit into a three point lead. The second half belonged to the Owls.

George Roy's play was particularly outstanding. Roy had resigned the team prior to the Johnson game but was back in uniform and played inspired basketball on Friday. It was the kind of ball Roy is capable of playing and which Keene needs from the so-big man. Especially considering the uncertain status of Jim Blamy who played only two minutes against Portland-Gorham. Blamy has been hampered by frequent illness and his status is often a game to game proposition.

Theulen has decided to go with Ron Pierson and Jim Drew at guard. Freshman Brian Watterson will be used only when the team is ahead. Brian is a steady performer who makes few mistakes, but the Owls need more scoring punch. The balanced scoring in the Portland-Gorham game has been lacking most of the season.

The Owls travel to Plymouth Saturday night to take on the arch-rivals the Panthers. The teams split their two games last year and as the proverbial saying goes "You can throw out all the records when these two teams meet."

Women downed by 27 baskets

The Women's Basketball Team travelled to the University of Mass. on Feb. 3 only to be defeated by a score of 82 to 55. UMass jumped out to an 8 point lead 2 minutes into the first half followed by a scoring surge midway through the half with another 8 points in a row.

UMass executed their offensive plays extremely well with the team always cutting and moving into the key. Their defense had an excellent press which dampened Keene's offense (or the hopes of ever beginning one). The tall UMass team used their height to their best advantage grabbing the majority of the offensive and defensive rebounds and dominating the boards.

Keene's defense tightened up in the latter stages of the first half allowing the team to gain some ground on the scoreboard. The first half ended with the UMass team leading the Owls by a score of 42 to 19.

Keene came out playing better ball in the second half, popping in 36 points. The defense failed to stop the UMass scoring machine, however, who never let up through out the game and who were never in any danger from the Keene Owls. The final score was UMass 82 and Keene 55.

Keene's high scorers were freshman Diane Lowell with 14 points and junior Debbie Higgins with 10 points.

The Keene State Women's J.V. team fared no better than did the varsity in their game. It was clear right from the start that UMass was going to have little trouble with the Owls.

Moving the ball well and showing their talent with a number of outside jump shots and individual moves under the offensive boards, UMass lead easily at the half by a score of 45 to 17.

Lead by high scorers Maureen Tracy and Helen Steele who scored 13 points and 8 points respectively, the Keene team came out strong in the second half. At least scoring wise. The defense was helpless against the UMass team and a number of bad passes by the Keene club were quickly converted into points by an alert UMass defense. The final score was UMass-63, Keene-43.

The Women's Basketball Team travelled to Fitchburg State College last Saturday and defeated the host team by a score of 46 to 38.

It was a well played game defensively with the tough Fitchburg defense stopping the Owls from deploying their fast break while the Owl defense allowed the host team to score primarily from the foul line. The half ended with the Owls in the lead 23 to 15.

The second half opened with the Keene team playing as well as they had the first half with the Fitchburg team stepping up their pace a little. The game was physically a rough one, with Diane Lowell and Karen Pelletier playing outstanding ball in defensive and in the rebounding department.

The high scorers for the varsity club were Debbie Higgins with 19 points and Diane Lowell with 12 points.

Lead by Ann Keenan the women's J.V. team outplayed their Fitchburg counterparts winning the game easily by a score of 70 to 48. Ann Keenan was the outstanding player for the Keene team scoring 19 points and pulling in 15 rebounds.

Some swimmers drift away-- only 6 of 13 remain

Starting the season with thirteen swimmers, nine being veterans, the men's swim team has slowly depleted until only six remain: They are: Russell Conroy, a senior (Back, Free), Carl Arlig, a junior (Free), Dave Hague, a junior (Free), Ron Demers a junior (Breast, IM), Bob Beaulieu, a freshman (Breast), and Dan Caron, a freshman (Breast, Free).

Coach Bill Papajohn says, "The K.S.C. Swim Team is striving to win as individuals since there is no way the can win as a team. We lack depth, struggling against teams we would normally beat and losing badly to teams we would come close to beating. For example, W.P.I. in the past has been a team we could easily beat. This year we took seven 1st places and still lost the meet. We weren't taking any 2nd and 3rd places."

There have been three meets since the swimmers have come home from their winter training program at Winter Park, Florida. Jan. 17th Worcester Polytechnical Institute played them a visit. First places were taken by Arlig (200 Free, 1:50), Hague (50 Free, 22.9), Demers

2:32.2). Larry Rooney took a second place in the 1000 Free with a time of 12:19.7 and thirds were taken by Demers (200 Fly, 2:24.7) and Caron (200 Breast, 2:36.5). The final score was KSC-41, WPI-64, with Keene scratching the 400 Medley Relay, the 400 Free Relay and the 1 & 3 Meter Diving.

UVM visited Keene Jan. 22; KSC lost 32-78. Firsts were taken by Arlig (200 Free, 1:56.5), Demers (200 IM, 2:11.2) and Demers (200 Breast, 2:23.2). Second places were Hague (50 Free, 23.2), Hague (100 Free, 51.2), Arlig (500 Free, 5:17.8), Caron (200 Breast, 2:35.3) and Conroy (200 Back, 2:16.1). Thirds were taken by Caron (200 Free, 2:03.6) and Conroy (1000 Free, 13:0). Again Keene had to sacrifice the 400 Medley Relay, the 1 & 3 Meter Diving and the 200 Fly Events due to the lack of participants. KSC swimmers in the 400 Free were Arlig, Caron, Hague, and Hague. They trailed UVM's relay by 13 seconds.

On Saturday the Owl's went to Southern Conn. First places were taken by Demers in the 200 IM (2:08.7) and the 200 Breast event (2:19.16) in which he qualified for nationals (2:23.2). Another first place was taken by Hague in the 100 Freestyle event at a time of 51:22. Hague also placed second in the 50 Free with a time of 22.78 in which he also qualified for Nationals. A second place was also taken by Arlig (200 Free, 1:54). Third places were taken by Conroy (1000 Free 13.33), Conroy (200 Back, 2:16.3) and Arlig (500 Free, 5:19.86). Final score left Keene trailing 26-86.

Keene swims Central Conn. on Feb. 4. Colby-Feb. 8, (home), and goes to the Nationals Feb. 18-22. New England's this year are to be held at Brown University at Providence, March 6, 7 & 8. National qualifiers are Ron Demers in the 200 Breaststroke, Carl Arlig in the 200 and 500 Freestyle events and Dave Hague in the 50

Dave Hague: a veteran swimmer.

(200IM, 2:11.5), Hague (100 Free, 51.7), Conroy (200 Back, 2:21.5), Arlig (500 Free, 5:32.8) and Demers (200 Breast,

Owls lose in waning seconds

The Owls lost a heartbreaker to Western New England College last night, 66-63. They were unable to stop the inside penetration of the big Golden Bear front line. Frank Bailey, a six foot seven inch Junior, led Western with 28 points. George Roy and Jim Blamy each had 14 for the Owls.

Blamy, who occasionally shows signs of brilliance, kept the Owls in the game in the first half. He had 12 points and several rebounds. Surprisingly Jim played very little in the second half. Roy had all his points in the second half, but Blamy was missed on defence against the big Western club.

The Owls trailed by nine with ten minutes remaining, but quickly fought their way back. Two baskets each by Al Hicks and George Roy brought the Owls to within one at the eight minute mark. The lead changed hands several times in the remaining minutes.

Western stalled with a three point lead and two minutes remaining but the Owls after several frantic fouls, got the ball back for Al Hicks who made a jump shot.

Pub out of control from the sane and responsible management of co-founders Paul Lassina, Mark Courtney, Jeff Gady, and Rit Pare, is out of control. The current president and his underlings have decided that nothing, including their responsibility to the college community, is more important than themselves and their friends. The atmosphere of drunkenness, which has become so conducive to vandalism, is a by-product of their selfishness that they choose to deny and ignore.

The rest of the campus does not realize how close the Pub is to being shut down by the State of New Hampshire. The only way that this can be avoided is if the Pub membership, and responsible members of the board of directors, take action against the inconsiderate clowns who are presently running the show.

Another plan that Mallat told the board about is transferring of all parts of the college that are now on the east side of Main Street to the west side. Since this will definitely mean more building, a lot of the talking in this dispute may be done by lawyers.

Constitutions

Glenn Stone of the student government constitution committee has announced that all organizations must submit a constitution to the committee by next Friday. The constitutions must be submitted before the organizations wish can be funded, he said.

The final drafts should be addressed to Stone and placed in the Student government mailbox, he said.
