Men booters strong; steal Sumner Joyce tourney

By THOMAS ALMEIDA
Equinox Sports Editor

As it is in every sport, the task of a defending champion to repeat its successes is a difficult one. This year the Keene State men's soccer team will find out just how hard that goal is. But if this weekend is an indication, the Owls plan to give it all they have. After opening the season with a frustrating 1-1 tie with Franklin Pierce, Coach Ron Butcher's team stepped forward and shut out both Buffalo State and New York Tech in the Sumner Joyce Tourney, 4-0 and 2-0. Led by last year's leading scorer and most valuable player Jesus

Menendez, the men's soccer team outplayed both visiting teams and ended the weekend undefeated with a 2-0-1 record. Butcher, who is in his nineteenth season as head coach, sees a challenging year ahead for his ECAC Champions. Heading into the season, the Division II Owls are ranked fourth in New England and thirteenth nationally. In describing the upcoming schedule, Butcher said it will be "...tough, tough, and tougher."

Butcher expects every game to be a big one. Every team the Owls face will have goals of trying to outdo Keene State. Butcher hopes his team does not get "...hooked up in the hype" and become nervous as a team. He said his philosophy will be to take one game at a time.

One advantage for the Owls will be that most members of the championship team have returned. The only starter from last year not returning is former goalie John Ramos. Ramos will be replaced by last year's backup goalkeeper, Jamey Durham. Butcher describes Durham as an outstanding player who is also very quick. He predicts that Durham could very well become an All-New England performer. Durham is already off to a great start by allowing only one goal in his first three starts.

The Owls should be strengthened by the addition of two new players: Freshman Jim Prouty, who comes from Plymouth Carver, and Mark Kernohan, a junior transfer from Canada/Ulster Community College. Kernohan has already made his presence known by scoring a goal in the 2-0 victory over New York Tech. Returning from injuries is starter Sean Daley and Craig Levesque. Butcher views them as valuable assets in the Owls' quest for another title.

Keene State returned to the field yesterday where they tried to extend their winning streak against Quinnipiac College. Keene has dominated Quinnipiac over the years, losing only once in eight games.

The Owls' next home match will be a week from today against the University of New Hampshire. Game time is 3 pm.

How will Ken Howe fill vacant soccer shoes?

By AMY CAHILL
Equinox Reporter

Ken Howe repeatedly has told people that in taking over the women's soccer program he has big shoes to fill. He is, of course, referring to the shoes of Dave Lombardo. In his seven-year coaching hiatus, Lombardo has compiled a 78-35-6 record and two ECAC championships.

Those are big shoes. To help fill those shoes is assistant coach Meg Sydlowski, a four-year player and two-time All-New-England midfielder.

Realistically, Howe can look toward leading his team to another ECAC championship, but right now his concerns rest elsewhere.

In the Lady Owls' first two games of the season they have yet to score a goal, something that has to be done in order for the squad to capture any kind of championship.

"I don't know what it is," Howe said. "We build it all the way up and we can't finish. I don't know if it's trying to be too fancy and give a perfect pass instead of just letting the ball fly. I don't know," he said.

In their first home game of the season on Sunday, the Lady Owls suffered a 3-0 loss to Division II Sonoma State University (Ca.). It was this game that had Howe worried about Keene's scoring drought.

"We had no touch of the ball," he said. "It was hitting off shins, we didn't have that good of control. We did some good things; it's not all negative. The build up is there, it's either the pass or the pass before that gets intercepted or something."

The Lady Owls' 1-0 loss and season opener against Division I Boston College proved to be more impressive. According to Howe the women, playing under the lights and on astro-turf, conditions that are not pleasing to them, more or less dominated the first half. But at the 34:00 mark, on what Howe called a defensive lapse, BC's first shot on goal hit the crossbar and the rebound went in.

"We played great at BC," Howe said. "We put it together in spurts. The second half we played even, but again, we couldn't finish."

It's not that the talent isn't there.

Field hockey squad set for competitive action

By SCOTT McPHERSON
Equinox Reporter

With a blend of returning veterans and incoming freshmen, the Keene State field hockey team returned to action last weekend.

The Lady Owls opened the 1988 campaign with a scrimmage tournament at Smith College. The team participated in five forty-minute games in what Coach Amy Watson called a judge of her teams talent. "I should be able to tell pretty well next week," Watson said on Friday as her team prepared for the tournament.

The Owls lost only three starting players to graduation so indications are that they should have a competitive team.

Leading the team as captains are two of last year's three leading scorers, Sharon Walsh and Suzie Page.

Page, a senior from Lancaster, N.H. will also return to her mid-fielder status for the '88 season. As a senior, Walsh, a second team All-American last season, will return to

THE WEEK IN SPORTS

By THOMAS ALMEIDA
Equinox Sports Editor

In the Major League Pennant race, the N.Y. Mets and Oakland Athletics have all but officially won their divisions...As of Monday, the Mets stood ten games out in front of the Pittsburgh Pirates while Oakland extended its lead to 11 games over the Minnesota Twins...The Mets are on their way to another 90-win season thanks to its pitching staff, mainly David Cone (16-3) and Dwight Gooden (17-6)...The A's have used both power and pitching to dominate the American League West race...They've been in first since the third week of April due mainly to Jose Canseco's MVP year...He could become the first baseball player in history to have 40 homeruns and 40 stolen bases in the same year...The A's also are not hurt by the fact that they have two of the five winningest starters in the league.

Things are still up for grabs in the AL East and the NL West...Boston returned home from their road trip in first place...By Monday the lead was 3 1/2 games, this due more to the Detroit Tigers fall from grace than a Red Sox charge...The Tigers have lost 17 of their last 20 games, due mainly to their lack of pitching...When asked about the downside, Sparky Anderson said, "I am not going to say anything." I wonder why...But now that the Tigers are in trouble the team to watch is the Yankees...The Red Sox and Yankees play seven more times this month and it should be interesting. Meanwhile out on the coast, the NL West leaders are the Los Angeles Dodgers are fighting off a late-season charge by the Houston Astros (5 games) and the Cincinnati Reds (6 games)...But even if the Dodgers hold on, what comes next might not be pleasant...In their regular season series with the NY Mets, Los Angeles is 1-10.

Also in sports...Oil Can Boyd is gone for the season as a Red Sox pitcher but "Rocket" Roger Clemens seems to be back after his one hitter against Cleveland...Fred Lynn will now be able to participate in post-season play for Detroit after the Players Association filed a grievance against the rule that requires players to be in their new team's city on August 31...New York Yankees Tommy John celebrated the 25th anniversary of his major league debut last week...As a present, Cleveland Indians rookie Luis Medina knocked out John for two homeruns in one game...Medina was born in 1963, John's rookie year...Bill Walton may not be playing for the Celtics this season...Instead he may be on a team in Italy...Celtic new Head Coach Jimmy Rodgers may start Brad Lohaus and bring Kevin McHale off the bench.

Quote of the week, Former Yankee Manager Billy Martin, "If I were still managing the Yankees, we'd be in first place, although I don't mean that as a knock at Lou (Pinella)."

Task force to address greek, non-greek issues

By Amy Williams
Equinox Assistant News Editor

A Greek Life Task Force is being established in order to address greek and non-greek concerns at Keene State, said Barbara Rich, vice president of student affairs.

The task force will officially begin work by the end of this month and will include approximately four students from the Greek community, a member of the faculty, and student affairs staff, said Rich.

Several incidents occurring in past years at the College, including vandalism and cases of inebriation of both Greek and independent students, prompted the formation of the committee, said Rich.

The idea for the Greek Life Task Force was cultivated from concerns expressed by greeks, and at a meeting of the fraternities and sororities with Rich.

"It was my idea of a way to help address some of the issues," said Rich. "But it came out of the meeting I had with the greeks in the spring."

"This task force is a problem-solving committee that is set up to eliminate or prevent problems that exist now or may come up in the future," said Mike Flanagan, president of Alpha Pi Tau fraternity.

"To address issues of concern and come up with a set of recommendations that can be supported by all of the greek organizations on campus is the purpose of this committee," said Rich.

"We have an opportunity now for a new beginning," she said.

"I think it's (the Greek Life Task Force) a really good idea and hopefully a lot can be accomplished through it," said Kara Levens, president of the Sigma Rho Upsilon sorority.

"I hope that we can close the communication gap between the greeks and the administration," she said.

"It promises a lot of hope for the greeks right now," said Flanagan.

"My commitment is to the student body," said Rich. "And I believe that by working closely with the greek organizations things will improve."

Students elected to executive, representative posts

By JEFFREY CHADBURN
Equinox Reporter

Freshman class elections were held yesterday, and Neil Abercrombie Cronin garnered almost 60 percent of the vote to become class president.

Also attaining offices were Vice President Alexander Macleod IV, Secretary Jennifer Atkins, and Treasurer Glenn Turgeon.

The freshman class also selected Cronin to serve as one of the class representatives to the Student Assembly. Four other students were also elected to serve as representatives to the Assembly including: Courtney Rayno, Jennifer Atkins, Mark Waskells, and Kelly Considine.

The two remaining posts will be decided in a run-off election between Donna Castricone, Amy Parise, and Wendy Thompson, all of whom tied for the final spots.

In other election results, Carlene Flibotte was selected as the Assembly representative for the non-traditional students.

The sophomore class voted for students to fill the vacancies on its executive board. Hans Fiedler, on a write-in campaign, won the office of vice president. The treasurer of the sophomore class will be decided in a run-off election between Steve Pollard and Erik O. Parowski.

Another write-in candidate, Pam Pelligren, also successfully waged a campaign for junior class secretary.

Service now provides escorts for the campus community

By CHARLES ORLANDO
Equinox Reporter

An escort service is now available at Keene State for the safety of students, staff, faculty, and registered guests, said Paul Bosquet, coordinator of campus security.

The service began September 5 and consists of five escorts not affiliated with campus security, Bosquet said. He said service is provided all week from 7:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. and can be obtained by calling extension 458.

"They (the escorts) travel in a blue van back and forth to X-lot, downtown, and the mall area," he said. Escorts are also available to walk people home at night.

"This particular service deals primarily within the campus, from, say, the Owls Nest area to the library or to the outer apartments," said Bosquet.

During the first week of operation 18 people called the service for assistance, Bosquet said. He said is expecting the number of calls to increase as the weather turns colder. A lack of escorts appears to be the only problem with the service. "We are really looking for about 16 people to carry the weekly hours," Bosquet said.

Bosquet said Plymouth State College in Plymouth, N.H. also attempted to institute the same safety program.

"Apparently it ran for a year and then it failed, due mostly to a lack of man power."

Escorts for the program receive $4.15 per hour, and must meet requirements in order to work for the service, Bosquet said.

"The student can not be on academic probation, must have a good standing in the College, and can not have been in serious trouble (violation) on or off campus," Bosquet said.

The idea for an escort service originated with Linda White, a student at Keene State, Bosquet said.

"Last year, she was on the safety committee and made a proposal to President Sturnick concerning an escort service which would benefit the campus community. Because of her work, the escort service is now a reality," he said.

White travels to Europe to attend international conference

By MISSY TOOTHILL
Equinox Reporter

David E. White, professor of education at Keene State, left the hills of New Hampshire for Europe Monday to attend the twenty-first conference of the International Board on Books for Young People. The conference is being held in Oslo, Norway, September 26 thru September 30.

The trip will be a mixture of sightseeing as well as a focus on children's literature, said White. The trip is being sponsored by the Keene State College Children's Literature Festival. The theme of the conference is "Children's Literature and the New Media," he said.

Approximately 25 professors, librarians, and editors of children's books are going on the trip, White said.

According to an IBBY brochure, the conference will include various workshops titled "Radio", "Computers", "When Books Become Movies", and "Reading Through the Press." Those in attendance will also meet with authors and illustrators.

While visiting Denmark, White will visit the home of Hans Christian Anderson as well as meet the editor in chief of the Children's Danish Book Publishing Company, he said. In Sweden, White will visit the home of Carl Larsson, a famous Swedish illustrator. He will also visit the Hermitage Art Museum in Russia.

White said students who take his Children's Literature course will gain new insight after he returns. "I will incorporate what I learn into my class presentations," said White. "This is one way to bring global education into the classroom."

The trip will mark the second time White has attended the IBBY conference. It is held biennially and White last attended the session held in Czechoslovakia in 1980, he said. "I made invaluable contacts and friends on the first trip," he said. "It's exciting to meet people from all over the world interested in the same things."

Collective offers support, quiet workplace for artists

By ELIZABETH KOISTINEN
Equinox Reporter

If you are an artist you realize that frustration is a normal part of your creative life, and you probably wish, in those times of despair, that there was a quiet place for you to work, and a sympathetic ear or a critical eye to assist you. Well, for you creative people, such a serene place and attentive ear do exist. Last spring, the Art Collective organized solely for such a purpose.

The Art Collective is an organization that provides its members with a place to work for a small membership fee. Part of the third floor of the Arts Center at Keene State is devoted to work space for members of the organization. The group also meets there bimonthly for formal meetings to discuss problems within the artists' community.

"When people get together, as a group with the same interests, they work easier, it's easier to disseminate information," said Kevin Burke, president of the organization.

"We bring the artists together so they can feed off one another," Burke said. The support provided to these artists is often in the form of critique. The group's members help each other by expressing their honest opinion about each others work.

The organization also "provides a vehicle for the students to gain exposure," Burke said. One way in which exposure is gained is through art exhibits. The second floor lobby in the Arts Center is now sight of an exhibit titled, "This is Wat's Happenin'..."

The Art Collective also provides members with special educational services. The group is planning trips to Boston in November and possibly New York City in December.

Fitness Center now available to campus

By LISA BACH
Equinox Reporter

A Fitness Center is now available for the first time at Keene State and is open to the entire College community.

Located on the second floor of the Spaulding Gymnasium, the Center is equipped with Cybex Eagle weight machines, four stationary exercise bicycles and one upper body ergometer.

Rebecca Brown, director of the Fitness Center, said extensive renovations such as installation of wall-to-wall carpeting and full-length exercise mirrors were needed before opening the Center. Considerable work still needs to be done in order for the Center to be completed, said Brown.

The student rate for the Fitness Center is $30 per semester, and the faculty/staff rate is $40. Varsity athletes pay a fee of $20 per semester.

It was through compromise that the rates per semester for the Fitness Center were established. A committee of six people representing the recreational sports, athletics and physical education departments chose to reduce the fee paid by varsity athletes, said Hazel Varner, director of recreational sports. Varner was in charge of a Nautilus Center at the University of Rochester where all students paid the same fee. Since this program was successful, Varner favored the same policy for

From Our Archives...

Editor's note: The Equinox is in the process of adding some new highlights to its pages. "From Our Archives" is an example of that attempt. Over the summer we were fortunate to find copies of The Monadnock—Keene State's student newspaper before The Equinox. Many of these papers date back 20 to 30 years; and each week we will feature a reprint from one of the issues.

It is our hope that readers will find the reprints informative, amusing and an aid to learning more about the history of the College. We welcome any comments you may have.

This week our reprint is taken from a April 29, 1971 issue of The Monadnock. Over the last few years many people have written letters to the editor complaining about student apathy on campus. It is obvious from this reprint that such apathy did not always exist at Keene State.

New Tone to Movement Set

KSC STUDENTS JOIN ANTI-WAR PROTESTS

40 KSC students were among the 300,000 protesters who flocked to Washington, D.C. Saturday to participate in the largest anti-war rally in U.S. history.

As President Nixon rested at his Camp David, Md. retreat and all Federal Buildings were closed for the day, the protesters flowed for hours down Pennsylvania Ave. and spilled into the Capital Building area for the rally. A variety of speakers, including Dave Dillinger and Rennie Davis of the "Chicago 7", Senator Vance Hartke of Indiana, Rev. Ralph Abernathy of SCLC, Coretta King, and Navy Lt. John Kerry of the Vietnam Vets Against the War, then spoke from the Capital steps.

Senator Hartke drew cheers from the crowd when he outlined his proposal to end the war and then said "That can be edited down to two words - out now."

'Created a Monster'

John Kerry of the Vietnam Vets Against the War, reading the speech he gave before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last Thursday, said, "The country doesn't know it yet but it has created a monster, a monster in the form of millions of men who have been taught to deal and to trade in violence, and who are given the chance to die for the biggest nothing in history."

A thing which particularly impressed the KSC contingency was the atmosphere of the protest. "Nobody was tense...everything was calm...you just couldn't believe it." Although the omnipresence of the police was felt, they were "fantastic" according to the KSC group. They were "helpful...nothing was forced." No military were present during the march or the rally.

Another particular which made the march different from others was the participation of the over 25 age group. Workers unions, women, children and even senior citizens were represented. 70% of the protesters, however, were youth.

The activities, which were sponsored by the National Peace Action Coalition attracted various groups including veterans, SDS and gay liberation.

"What counted was the number of people," a KSC student said. "There were nice people everywhere...no one put us down the whole trip."

Accommodations for the KSC group was provided by the Temple Emmanuel a few miles outside Washington. The KSC Commons provided "boxes and boxes" of food for the students. "They deserve some credit," said a KSC student. Money for the bus was provided by the Student Senate and the classes of '72, '73, and '74.

When the KSC group returned Sunday night a banner streaming across Appian Way greeted them saying "We're with you for peace." President Redfern provided coffee and donuts for the returning students.

"This is all so gratifying," exclaimed one student. "Although only 40 people went down, the people here were with us." "Hopefully it proved something," she said.

Outlines goals for student affairs

Rich appointed to administrative post

By MISSY TOOTHILL
Equinox Reporter

Barbara Rich has been appointed as the new vice president for student affairs at Keene State. Rich's appointment began July 1. Rich is replacing Carole Henry who served last year as interim vice president for student affairs. Henry is now director of residential life and dining.

"I chose to come to Keene State College because to me I sensed a feeling of spirit and commitment to the College," Rich said.

Rich's education includes a B.A. in political science at City University in New York, an M.A. from Rutgers University, and both a M.A. and Ph.D. from Teachers College at Columbia University.

Before coming to Keene State, Rich worked at Marymount Manhattan College in New York. She began at Marymount in 1978 as assistant dean of academic affairs. Rich also served as associate dean of academic affairs, vice president for student affairs, planning and research. Rich appears to be very interested in the needs of Keene State students.

"I have several goals for this position. I've listened very carefully to the concerns that students raised with me when I was on campus last year for interviews," Rich said.

Rich said one of her goals is to provide educational leadership to address issues concerning self-esteem, greek life, substance abuse, security, AIDS, sexual harassment/bias, date rape, students with disabilities, commuting, and residence students.

"What I'm primarily looking forward to is addressing the areas of communication, leadership, and developing a sense of community," she said.

A total of 12 goals and an action plan for each has been developed for the division of student affairs, said Rich. She said her personal goal is to be accessible to students. She also wants to be made aware of what issues are important to Keene State students.

During the summer Rich lived in the Bushnell Apartments by the Arts Center, an opportunity Rich said she is thankful for since it allowed her to experience living on campus. Living in Bushnell also gave her the opportunity to meet families and listen to the issues that concern them.

"What we need to do is work together as a community toward all these goals and not work in isolation from one another," said Rich. "The need to work together as a community is very important to me."

On Sept. 5 Rich met with the presidents of all Keene State sororities and fraternities. She enthusiastically said it was an excellent meeting. Rich also sponsored a dinner Sept. 15 for 70 campus student leaders to talk about student leadership at Keene State.

"I am really happy to be here. In a very short time, Keene State has become a special place to me," said Rich.

Info on abortions may be denied

By College Press Service

Some campus health clinics may not be able to provide students with information about abortion soon, the U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services effectively said last week.

HHS Secretary Otis R. Bowen announced he would now start invoking a policy, which was supposed to go into effect last March, that would stop paying federal funds to hospitals and clinics that distribute abortion information to patients.

Under the policy, such clinics "could well lose their Title X funding," said HHS spokeswoman Lucy Eddinger at a press conference.

In response, campus health officials said losing the funding—which for some clinics amounts to $400,000 a year—would be "a disaster" and "devastating."

The American College Health Association refused to comment on the issue.

Voters need to educate themselves

"You called me a momma's boy?! Why, I've tattled on people for less than that!"

By Mathew Biathrow
To many voters choosing a presidential candidate in November will be a perplexing experience. Too often we know too little about the candidates we choose. Frequently, our decisions are reduced to being based on a candidate's personality, style of dress, or how many good jokes he or she has told while campaigning.

This kind of voting is not entirely the voters' fault. Although presidential candidates say a lot, much of what they say is not clear. For example, when Dukakis tells us that he will create "good jobs at good wages" how are we to know specifically what he means?

For all we know, he may be planning to open up his own hamburger chain employing us all to flip grease patties for five bucks an hour!

Despite the allusiveness in the candidates' speeches there are ways in which the American people can get the "goods" on the candidates. One way is to read the 100's of articles written during the campaign.

Although many of these articles are filled with meaningless trivia (such as what a candidate had for breakfast or who his girlfriend was), many crucial facts are learned. Of course I realize this can be a tedious task for the individual voter who may not care for politics but wants to make the right choice.

Another source of information that can profile a candidate is the televised political debate(s). However, it is important to note that these debates are not a be-all, end-all source for information about candidates.

Traditionally, these debates are filled with much rhetoric and mudslinging, but they do reveal, to a degree, the views candidates have of some of the issues.

A third way the voter can obtain information about candidates is by studying their past political careers. For example, what issues a candidate voted for and against.

Understanding a candidate's past political career is, in fact, one of the best ways to get a sense of what the candidate really believes. Past actions are fact where as campaign promises are only castles in the air.

For example, how many times have you heard presidential candidates say if they are elected they will balance the federal budget and eliminate the national deficit? Strangely enough, we still have not balanced the budget, and we still have a national deficit. Golly, did Ronnie forget?

I have often believed if America wants more informed voters, it should create a spread sheet listing the presidential candidates and specifically stating how they stand on the various issues (which should be predetermined by the American people through mail-in questionnaires).

Also, these spread sheets should include a brief biography of the candidates. The spread sheet should then be mailed to every address in the United States. In this way, the voter would be able to make a quick, well-informed decision as to who they wish to vote for.

I would be much more willing to provide a dollar from my tax returns to help fund the presidential elections if such a service was provided.

However, the long and the short of it is that no such government-generated spread sheet exists, so we as American voters are forced to make our decisions by sifting through the vast information provided by the media.

To become informed takes effort but not to be informed means relying on the "good will" of politicians and we know just how "good" that can be. The choice is yours, make it a wise one.

New administrator appointed

"A college community is a rather interesting, challenging and sometimes creative environment in which to work," said Jay V. Kahn, the new vice-president for finance and planning at Keene State. Some of Kahn's responsibilities will include overseeing the fiscal management and strategic planning of the College.

Now involved in his sixteenth year of higher education administration, Kahn said he hopes to strongly contribute to the Keene State system in college budgeting and evaluation.

"I chose to come to Keene most importantly because of President Sturmeck whom I feel is an outstanding higher education leader, Kahn said. "Her support creates a good atmosphere."

Before coming to Keene State, Kahn was associate vice president for administration and planning at Governors State University in University Park, Ill.

Award honors parents

Keene State students can honor their parent(s) by nominating them for the Keene State College Levine Mellion Parents Award. The honor, to be presented at the Honors Convocation during Parent/Family Weekend, was started five years ago by the Levine Mellion Family and the Keene State Parents Association.

Recipients of the award will receive free lodging and meals for the weekend, a plaque, and their names will be added to a permanent plaque in the Wallace Mason Library.

Anyone interested in nominating their parents should send nominations to Ernest O. Gendron, associate dean of student affairs. Deadline for nominations is October 7, 1988.

Nominations should be in essay form depicting the qualifications of the parent or parents. The recipients will be chosen by a panel consisting of parents, students, faculty and administration.

Entries sought for writing contest

A writing contest is now being sponsored by the Citizen Education for Peace Project at the University of California, Irvine. The contest is intended to activate careful thinking and citizen action on the issue of the achievement of a more enduring peace in the nuclear age.

Anyone interested in entering the contest must write and send a letter to a candidate for president of the United States indicating to that candidate what actions the next U.S. President should take both domestically and internationally to enhance prospects for lasting world peace.

Anyone interested in entering the contest should see Professor Shirley Keddle, second floor Elliot Hall for details.

Nimo to speak on politics, writing

Dan Nimo, professor of University of Oklahoma and a nationally recognized expert in the field of television politics, will give a presentation titled "Television Coverage of Campaign '88: Bumps and Thumps on the Campaign Trail." The speech will be in the Waltz Lecture Hall, Monday, Oct. 3 at 8 p.m.

Nimo is author and co-author of 25 books, and has been awarded the Whately Award for Excellence in Studies in Popular Culture.

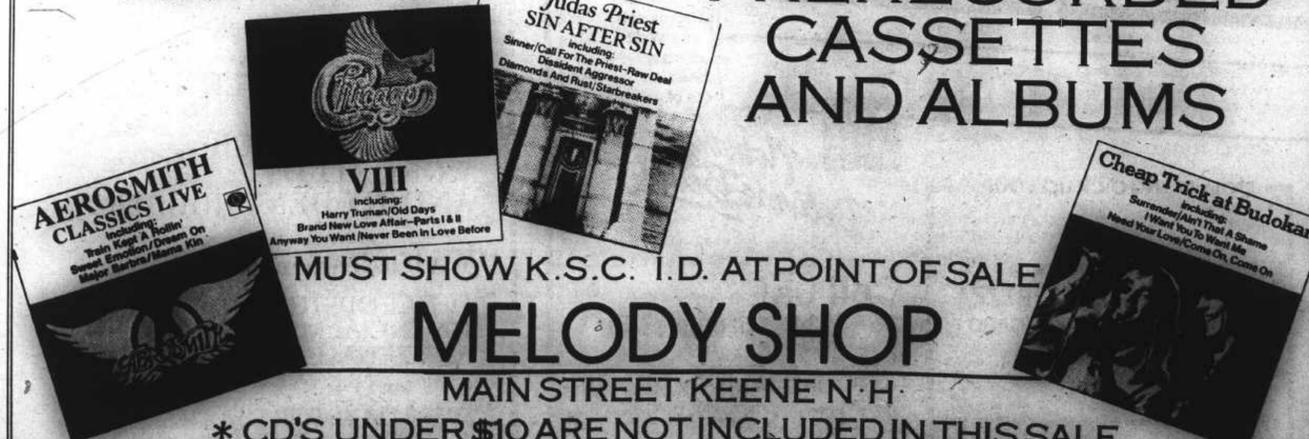

Nimo's presentation is being sponsored by the New Hampshire Humanities Council and the Keene State journalism and political science divisions.

Student supports, praises trustees

To the editor:

As human beings, we often have a fear of the unknown. As children it was fear of the dark. Our fears continued through going to summer camp for the first time, taking exams, and starting dating relationships.

In college, the fear of the unknown takes different forms. For freshmen it may be the fear of a new educational environment and wondering if he/she will fit in. For upperclassmen the fear is wondering if you will get a good job and making the four years of education worth the cost.

In each case of fear, for the most part, the fear is alleviated as the situation of circumstances become more familiar. Taking away the "unknown" takes away the "fear". The latest "fear of the unknown" that I have witnessed on college campuses is the "fear of the board of trustees". Many students, assuming they realize there is a board of trustees, have images of a mysterious, alienated, removed group of men and women who make drastic decisions that affect students lives without regard for the students themselves.

Thankfully, I believe this is also one of those "fears of the unknown" that can be corrected.

This summer I worked with the trustees on many issues. Some of the items included approving the search for a bond with which to build student housing on each of the campuses; discussion of a capital budget which includes cultural facilities, academic buildings, and library concerns; and finally the review and subsequent planning of each institution's mission and goals.

I have found the trustees to be personable individuals with a desire to meet needs and concerns. Trustees are always open to input and feedback and seek to visit System campuses and read the student newspapers.

It will take both trustees and students to worry through the "fear of the board of trustees," but I am confident that it can be done through familiarity.

I am always available to answer questions or concerns at the Student Senate office at UNH (603) 862-1494. Let's get over the fear.

Campus events outlined

To the editor:

Center offers resources pertaining to Holocaust

To the editor:

As we begin a new school year, I want to alert new students (and remind "old timers") to the fact that there is a Holocaust Resource Center on campus. It now contains a collection of over 1500 books, more than 3,000 articles, and an abundance of other resources all directed toward a deeper understanding of the greatest tragedy of this century.

I would like to invite students to visit the Center. Come and browse and, if you wish, have a chat about how we might be of help to you in providing materials for your research for term papers, reports, and other projects.

The Holocaust is relevant to every discipline on this campus — the arts, humanities, professional studies, or the social and physical sciences. I would be pleased to show you how the Holocaust may be applicable to your course.

The Center is a pleasant and quiet place to study with ample materials for your research. While meeting your course requirements, you will be learning some of the lessons the Holocaust provides us in respect to coping with our own survival in a dangerous world.

I also invite my colleagues on the faculty to visit the Center. Please recommend the Center to your students in those instances where they are free to select topics for their papers and projects. I would be delighted to help them.

The Center is located in the Fiske Annex on Winchester Street. It is open Monday thru Friday from 2:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. and virtually anytime, seven days a week by appointment. Just call me at extension 484.

I hope to hear from you. Have a good academic year.

Charles A. Hildebrand
Professor of Sociology and Director—Holocaust Resource Center.

Preparations in the works for OXFAM

To the editor:

The Oxfam committee is busy making preparations for our third Oxfam observance. One of our goals for this year is to educate our campus community on the issues of hunger, both within our midst and globally.

To prepare for our observance on November 17 we are creating a speakers bureau. If you have had experience working with hungry or homeless people, anywhere in the world, and would be willing to share your insights and experiences, please let either Dr. Tom Bassarear, ext. 468, or Rev. Margaret Clemons, ext. 510 or 352-1322, know as soon as possible.

Limitations on alcohol consumption questioned

Recently the Boston City Licensing Board has limited the amount of alcohol that storekeepers can sell to college students living in dormitories, fraternities and sororities. The new rules restrict students living in dormitories to one, six-pack of beer or one liter of any other alcoholic beverage. The rules also bar keg deliveries to fraternities or sororities. According to the September 18 issue of the Boston Sunday Herald, "The rules also call for package store owners to keep a written record of the name and address of those to whom a liquor delivery is made," as well as the amount of alcohol that is delivered and the time of the delivery.

What is the grounds for these restrictions on the civil liberties of these people? Could it be too many complaints being made by the Boston residents about "wild" drunken college parties?

I feel these restrictions, or more accurately the suspension of these students' rights (as legal adults and U.S. citizens) are unjustified. To keep information files on people who legally purchase alcohol is far too like the governments keeping "red files" on people during the Macarthey era. These tactics are wrong regardless how well-intentioned the ultimate goal.

History has shown that the way to create responsible citizens is not to restrict their liberties. If we want to create responsible drinking why don't we attack the source of the problem rather than the victim? I perceive the source of this problem to be the images created by advertising that it is "cool" to party.

If we want people to be responsible drinkers we should eliminate the sort of advertising which suggests otherwise. To a large extent the individual is a product of his or her environment.

America can not babysit her children forever and to try to do so by restricting their freedom is inherently wrong. To restrict the individuals' civil liberties is against the founding philosophy of this country.

To pass off the validity of these new rules by thinking that they affect only a bunch of party-animal college kids is dangerous. It is dangerous because it opens the door for more restrictions on all of us, regardless of our age.

What will be next? Will new rules be instituted restricting the hours of when senior citizens can walk the streets because they are slow or annoying to other pedestrians?

Come on Boston licensors, you know these "new rules" smell of totalitarianism! Think about the society you are trying to create and the liberties of America you have sworn to protect and uphold.

Students have to do more than gripe

By Lauren A. Bors

Well, it's that time of year again. Classes have begun, old Keene Staters have returned along with a new batch of Keene Staters-to-be. The newness of being back to school will soon be wearing off, if it hasn't already. You'll be having your first exam soon, start missing Mom's cooking, or have your first complaint about the College.

Yes, it will soon be that time again when The Equinox will be flooded with letters filled with complaints from people about the registration process, the food in the Commons, or the high prices in the Bookstore. Well, fine and dandy because that's what the letters-to-the-editor page in a college newspaper is all about. But, I wonder how many students realize that with a little pursuing, some of their gripes could be resolved.

Last spring, during President Stur-nick's inauguration, Keene State students held a peaceful demonstration. Students were upset with library hours, college costs, and the Keene State administration.

For those of you who may not have been at Keene State last spring, I'll tell you that the students involved in the demonstration outdid themselves. They not only took action about concerns that they had, but they did it in such a way that exemplified how important it was that their concerns be heard.

It would have been very easy for the demonstrators to have really botched up President Stur-nick's inauguration.

We all know how demonstrations usually end. The throwing of rocks, bottles, and the yelling of obscenities usually are the basic characteristics. Instead, students at Keene State showed their support to work with President Stur-nick so that they could discuss some of the changes they felt needed to be made.

Other students have also taken action to try to improve conditions on campus. One student was upset that an escort service was not available on campus. She took action, presented an idea to the administration and as a result, Keene State now has an escort service to provide safety for people out alone at night.

Another student was upset last year with the registration process at the College. Instead of just griping to friends about her concern, she also took action. A petition was circulated on campus about the registration process and she presented it to the administration.

It is important that students express their concerns about the College. They live here nine months out of the year and pay a pretty hefty sum to do so. But, it has to be realized that changes take more than grip-ing and a quick note in the College newspaper. It takes the smarts to know that if you're not happy with something than you need to take action.

Eighteen years ago some Keene Students weren't happy with America's involvement in Vietnam. They went to Washington to protest and air their feelings. You can read about the action they took on page 2 of this issue of The Equinox.

Granted, such action isn't necessary in most complaints about the College. A simple call to an administrator or a member of the faculty is all that is needed. But, the action of the students 18 years ago exemplifies that students were upset and even though their problem was not instantly resolved, they did take the time to go to the heart of the matter.

Remember that next time you're sick of waiting in line at registration, ready to choke on your Commons food, or have had enough of the College's policies. Go to the heart of the matter.

"I believe it (the Fitness Center) should be free to all students just like the library," said Mary Conway, assistant director of athletics at Keene State.

Keene State is not the only college in New Hampshire to have a fitness center. Plymouth State College in Plymouth, N.H. has such a facility containing a Universal machine, and free weights which are available to all students, said Steve Bamford, director of athletics at Plymouth.

The fitness facility at Plymouth has existed for seven years and is supervised by student hourly and work study students, said Bamford.

cluded, will be drug testers," said Falwell, who also founded the Moral Majority conservative lobby.

Liberty's drug testing program is the broadest in the nation. No other school tests all students for drugs, although athletes who participate in National Collegiate Athletic Association events are required to undergo drug testing.

"I'm hopeful they (other colleges) will watch what we're doing and follow suit," Falwell said.

Central Florida Community College began random drug testing of all students who participate in extracurricular activities, including cheerleaders, musicians, actors and dancers.

"It's part of our responsibility," said Athletic Director Mike McGinnis, who oversees the program.

"We want to make sure the students who represent the college are what they should be. We want the college represented properly."

Liberty students were notified this summer of the drug test requirement, and each has signed a waiver agreeing to submit a urine sample.

"We checked with thousands of young people and haven't received a complaint," Falwell said.

Test will be given to about 200 students a week in a special bathroom designed to make it difficult to alter urine samples.

Students who test positive will be offered counseling and possibly a chance to redeem themselves.

"While the school takes a very strong position against drugs," said Falwell spokesman Mark DeMoss, "we're not going to be unreasonable in our methods."

Freshman surprised with book costs

By SCOTT MCPHERSON
When I arrived at Keene State a little over a week ago I was prepared to spend a lot of money on books. As I headed to the campus bookstore, I knew I was in for a shock.

Books, as I have found out very painfully, are expensive. I strolled through the aisles searching for my books while trying to match my course number to the card number under the shelved book. I was only able to find books for three of my classes. Still, these three classes amounted to six books and a little over 100 dollars.

After the initial chest pains, I forked over the money. Now I know why high school teachers say, "Take care of those books...they're expensive."

However, I was not out of the dark yet. Two classes remained. My math book was back-ordered (which later came in), and there was not an order for my Fundamentals of Speech class.

"Well, I guess I'm going to get off lucky," I said to myself. The book that my professor uses was not available in the campus bookstore.

For whatever reason, I was forced to go into town to purchase my "Public Speaking" second edition book. I went into the Booksources bookstore on Main Street. Being a naive freshman, I did not expect to pay much for this soft-covered, relatively small book.

"Well that's the price of education," I said with a chuckle. "Twenty-nine, fifty," the man said as my pleasant smile turned rather quickly into a frown.

I can't imagine for the life of me, a book costing that much money. Then again I bet on Michael Spinks.

They grab you were it counts. You need the book; they have the book; and they know you'll pay and pay big for that book.

I guess it's the first of many lessons I'll learn as a freshman.

Whitcomb enjoying position as volleyball coach

By AMY CAHILL
Equinox Reporter

Tribly Whitcomb sits in her office, one she shares with four other coaches, and does not mind the cramped space. Actually, Whitcomb acts like she would enjoy her new position as head volleyball coach at Keene State whether she had an office or not.

Whitcomb does not mind answering questions about her background. She will even try to answer questions about the origin of her name.

She'll openly tell you that she's 30 years old, but is quick to add, "I just turned 30 this July so it's not like I'm going to be 31 this year," she said.

This Florida native will deny having any accent and defend her use of "y'all" if someone teases her about it. She is also quick to retort that on a trip to Pennsylvania she discovered a more absurd expression "you-ins."

All trivialities aside, Whitcomb brings her volleyball knowledge from her high school and college participation. After playing four years in high school, Whitcomb continued her education and her playing at Hillsborough Community College (Tampa) and then finished at the University of South Florida. Once her playing eligibility was completed, Whitcomb attended USF one more year to earn her Bachelor's Degree in Finance.

While still in Tampa, Whitcomb coached a type of doctor/lawyer team for two years, but said that each year only consisted of a two-month practice session ending with a three out of five game match.

She married her husband after she graduated from USF and stayed in Florida until he finished school the following year. In 1982 they moved to Bellows Falls, where her husband is from originally and has been there ever since.

She worked on the computer system at Bakers Incorporated in Brattleboro and in 1985 gave birth to her son Matthew. After going back to Bakers to work part time, she decided at the beginning of this summer she wanted to spend more time with her son and do what she wanted to do. That's when she discovered the volleyball coaching position.

With each day Whitcomb is becoming better adjusted to the program, remembering more names of her colleagues, and appreciating all of the help she has been offered. And of all the topics Whitcomb will talk about, it is obvious that her favorite one is her new team.

She possesses a unique desire and love for her new job, a position she has been immersed in only since September 7, when practice started.

"I knew that I had the job early in August," Whitcomb said. "I couldn't wait to meet these girls. It was a month before I finally saw them. I tried to get every type of data I could find on them, which was not much. I mean, all I had was height on them. I just couldn't imagine what I had. I was very anxious to meet them. I dreamed about the stuff almost every night until I finally met them."

Now that Whitcomb has met her team, her plans for the season are more focused. Up until last Thursday the team had been practicing at the Keene Recreational Center, but is now more or less settled in the campus gym. But no matter where they practiced, Whitcomb likes what she sees.

"They're all good," she said. "They need some refining and a little bit of guidance, but other than that they're all good. I'll use them all. I have nine of them, so what one may lack another one has."

Whitcomb's goals for the season are to improve on last year's 5-22 record and improve the level of play.

"As far as my understanding, they did try to run some plays," Whitcomb said. "I hope to run plays in the future, not in the immediate future, but in the future. And if I see an improvement as far as the girls, their movement on the court, their hitting, their bumping and their serving, then that's an improvement."

And the improvement that Whitcomb already sees in her players leads her to believe that guiding this team to a .500 season is definitely within reach.

Y'all just watch her.

"I don't want a lot of hype. I just want something I can count on."

Is humanities fading from the college curriculum in the US?

By College Press Service

The number of college students majoring in the humanities has dropped dramatically in recent years. Ironically enough, Americans' interest in history, literature and other humanities has undergone a "remarkable blossoming," reported the National Endowment for the Humanities on Sept. 12.

Between 1966 and 1986 the number of bachelor's degrees awarded increased by 88 percent, but the number of bachelor's degrees awarded in the humanities declined by 33 percent.

"Many students graduate without any overarching view of how the separate courses they have taken relate to one another," said NEH Chairman Lynne V. Cheney in "Humanities in America," a report on the state of the American culture.

The 73-page report ordered by Congress said the number of foreign language majors was down 29 percent, English majors down 35 percent, philosophy majors down 35 percent and history majors down 43 percent from 1966 levels. Cheney guessed it was because the high cost of tuition forces students to enroll in courses that will land them high-paying jobs after graduation.

"Many students graduate without any overarching view of how the separate courses they have taken relate to one another."

Another reason, she said, was that 80 percent of the nation's campuses don't require students to take courses in Western civilization or American History.

Cheney's report in part echoes departing Secretary of Education—Cheney's predecessor as NEH chairman—William Bennett's much-publicized blasting of Stanford University's spring altering of its Western Civilization course to include the works of minority and women authors.

Bennett said Stanford was gutting its course to mollify campus pressure groups.

Stanford's faculty, in turn, argued it replaced some "classical" Greek and ancient thinkers with some "new" writers in the course to reflect some of the broader influences that shaped Western culture.

Cheney's report also charged Western literature courses are under "attack" at Columbia University, while Mount Holyoke College in Massachusetts and the University of Madison in Wisconsin require ethnic studies courses but have no Western civilization requirements.

It's wrong not to, Cheney said, reasoning that "since Western civilization forms the basis for our society's laws and institutions, it might seem obvious that education should ground the upcoming generation in the Western tradition."

But educators should take care to not focus on too narrow a scope.

"The humanities have become arcane in ways that many find troubling," said Cheney.

"As specialization becomes ever narrower, the humanities tend to lose centrality."

Although students are losing their enthusiasm for studying literature, history and other humanities, the nation has embraced the humanities more enthusiastically in recent years than ever before, Cheney said.

Her report noted the proliferation in the numbers of museums, libraries, educational television stations, arts councils and historical associations in recent years as proof of a humanities boom.

She also noted Americans in 1986 spent more on attending "cultural events"—$3.4 billion—than they did on attending sporting events ($3.1 billion).

The Boston Red Sox put to rest the ghost of 1978 this week by taking three out of the four games in their series with the New York Yankees. The nightmare of Bucky Dent is long gone as the Red Sox extended their lead in the American League East to six games. Boston's success is due mostly to the pitching of Bruce Hurst. Yankees Manager Lou Pinella said Hurst is "...thrusting himself into being a candidate for the Cy Young Award." Hurst manhandled the Yankees in a three-hit masterpiece, 3-1. Hurst is now 18-5 and has won seven of his last nine games. His ERA has fallen to 2.04 in the last six starts...Mike Greenwell hit for the cycle against the Baltimore Orioles last week. After his last pitch the Reds buried Browning in a celebration pigpile, and he came up with a dirty uniform and a bloody lip. How's that for gratitude...His perfect game was only the 14th in big-league history...The question came to many about which was more difficult, the no-hitter or the cycle. Greenwell's cycle was the 193rd time a player has hit for the cycle since 1900. Browning's perfect game was the 187th no-hitter since 1900...The Dodgers will be the first team to win four division titles in the '80s...The Dodgers' pitchers are 17-9, with eight complete games and a 2.26 ERA since John Tudor joined the team...On the other side of the

He struck out yet reached first on a catcher's error, stole second, reached third on another Don Slaught error and was caught stealing home. However Greenwell returned to third on Slaught's third error (yawn)...all in one at bat. After all that, Greenwell did not even get to score...Red Sox rookie Jody Reed, who batted 93 times and hit .238 in backup duty under former Sox Manager John McNamara, is now hitting over .320 while playing everyday for Joe Morgan...Talk about confidence. The pitching staff's ERA is under 2.00 for a 23-game stretch coming into last weekend. On the season Mets pitchers have tossed 22 shutouts...Some playoff statistics: The Red Sox are 51-25 at home (the best in the majors) and 32-39 on the road. Oakland is 47-26 at home and 46-29 on the road (the best road record in both leagues). The Red Sox are hitting .286 as a team while the A's are hitting .262. In contrast Oakland's pitching staff has a 3.48 ERA while the Red Sox staff has a 4.00 ERA...Jose Canseco hit his 40th homerun Sunday and now needs only three more stolen bases to be the first baseball player to have 40 homeruns and 40 stolen bases in one season...

Cross country team wins at Bryant College Ultimate disc team more than "Frisbee"

By SCOTT MCPHERSON
Equinox Reporter

The Keene State men's cross country team traveled to the Bryant College Invitational meet last Saturday and came home with first place honors. The Owls were led by four-time All-American Scott Hatch, who placed first out of approximately 100 runners. The senior runner is characterized by Coach Peter Thomas as "one of the five best Division II runners in the country."

Thomas said Senior Chris Maitner was "comfortably in second place," before taking a wrong turn near the end of the race, which caused him to be disqualified.

Fortunately for the Owls, Sophomore Ken Smart was far enough behind Maitner so as not to make a wrong turn, but close enough to capture third place overall. The Bellows Falls, Vt. native has moved up from the sixth position that he held last season.

Coming in third for the Owls was Junior Rob Edson. Edson is making his return to college after spending three years in the military. Edson finished 12th overall, apparently "wiping the dust off" that Thomas was worried about before the season began.

Freshman Dave Decesare captured eighteenth place overall and fourth for the Owls. Bob Whitfield placed thirty-sixth overall and fifth for the Owls.

Last season Thomas' crew finished fifth at the national cross country championships, and he hopes to repeat, if not surmount that feat this season.

Keene State College may not have a varsity football team; however, we do have an ultimate disc team.

To those of you not up-to-date with the latest terminology "Frisbee" is a registered trademark so the sport is referred to as "ultimate Disc."

The Keene State Hooters is our own entry in the Ultimate Players Association, a league comprised of approximately 60 teams in the New England region.

Dedicated to the sport of "ultimate," about 39 of the best Hooters practice five days a week, two hours a day as do most sports.

The Hooters, a recognized club sport, are led by club president, Sophomore Patrick Schaffner. Schaffner is a player-president for the Hooters. Reliable players that Schaffner mentioned include Alexander Comini, Jonathan Sheehan, Chris Brady, Sean Sullivan, Tom Cole, and freshman Adam Pinyour.

Hooters will have a successful season, Schaffner said. "We will bring home a trophy this year."

The Hooters and Keene State will host the annual Brodrick Lee Memorial tournament on October 15. Held on the A-Field from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., the tourney will draw teams from Brown, UCONN, Boston College, and Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

The Hooters' first match is scheduled for Sept. 30 at the University Vermont.

Lady Owls seeking offensive punch Keene drops opening NECC tilt to UB, 1-0

By AMY CAHILL
Equinox Reporter

If you have ever worked at solving a Rubik's Cube; I mean really having thrown yourself into getting just one side of the cube all the same color yet coming up one square short, then you may have an inclination as to how Ken Howe feels. Following this past weekend, Howe and the Keene State women's soccer team are 0-4. But what's more frustrating than not winning is not scoring. These two-time defending Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference champions keep coming up short in their quest for the season's first goal.

The Lady Owls failed in Saturday's 2-0 overtime-loss to Plymouth State College, and they were again unsuccessful in their 1-0 loss to Stonehill College last Tuesday.

On Saturday Keene outshot Plymouth 10-6, and in the second half the Lady Owls clearly beat their opponents to almost every ball. But the execution still wasn't there.

"I'm pleased with the way we played," Howe said, "but we're still not able to finish. We have more opportunities every game."

Plymouth's first goal came with 8:00 gone in the first overtime period when the Lady Owl fullbacks caught flat. Plymouth's Elizabeth Healy was able to get a shot around goalkeeper Susan Woodworth. The shot had just enough momentum to cross the line before Woodworth could recover.

The Panthers second goal came with 8:00 remaining in the second overtime. Kristen Dougherty cross-passed the ball to Tracy Walker in the center who put the shot just out Woodworth's reach. Woodworth finished the game with five saves.

At Stonehill, Keene outshot its competition 23-6. According to Howe, the Lady Owls dominated the game until Stonehill scored with 5:00 left on the clock. Freshmen midfielders Alison Foley and Lori Santos both played well.

Howe will look to break the team down and find out what it needs to do to score. And as far as Howe's concerned, the sooner the problem is solved the better.

"The longer it keeps going the tougher it's going to be to put the first one in the net," he said.

Just like each failed attempt of solving the Rubik's Cube gets more frustrating as time passes.

By THOMAS ALMEIDA
Equinox Sports Editor

It was a difficult week for the Keene State men's soccer team. They won a game that they could have easily lost and lost a game they could have easily won.

On the familiar confines of Summer Joyce Field, Keene State extended its unbeaten streak at home to 11 games with a 2-1 victory over the Quinnipiac Braves. The Owls fell behind 1-0 in the first half on Quinnipiac's only shot on substitute goalie Kirk Gilliland, who was filling in for Jamey Durham. Durham was forced to sit out the game after suffering a concussion in Sunday's victory over New York Tech.

After a less than spectacular performance in the first half, Keene took command in the second. Keene went on the offensive, using what Coach Ron Butcher calls a "power offense."

The increased offensive pressure paid off as the Owls tied the score on Ricky Howard's goal off a pass from junior transfer, Mark Kernohan. Jesus Menendez scored the winning goal after faking out a Brave defender.

Although the Owls were able to come back against Quinnipiac, Butcher stressed that his team would have to play better as a team to beat the Bridgeport Purple Knights, who are rated eighth nationally in Division 2.

"Soccer is a team game," Butcher said, and he believed his team was not giving "...a team effort" in their victory over the Braves.

Keene answered Butcher's challenge in their close game against Bridgeport.

"There's no question in my mind they played a better game," Butcher said of the Owls, despite the 1-0 loss. "They worked hard for 90."

The Owls carried the play for most of the game, using the aggressive power offense, but they were unable to get the ball into the net. Butcher said the game should have been over in the first half.

Butcher is also pleased with the performance of junior transfer, Mark Kernohan and Freshman Jim Prouty. Butcher credits Kernohan with the ability to see the entire field and said he has "...eyes in the back of his head."

Keene State will play two games this week. The team will be at home on Wednesday playing against the University of New Hampshire. Saturday the Owls will travel to compete at Mercy College.

Lady Harriers take home third at Smithfield

By SCOTT MCPHERSON
Equinox Reporter

The Lady Owl cross country team traveled to Smithfield, R.I. last weekend for the Bryant Invitational meet at Bryant College. Team managed to place third out of approximately 15 teams.

Following the meet, Coach Peter Thomas said he was "very pleased" with the performance of his team. Thomas said three of the top six girls never ran cross country before.

Senior Brenda Maller was the top

Owl runner, placing twenty-second. Thomas said Maller will be looked upon as the leader of the squad in 1988.

The second Owl to finish was Olga Pardo who finished twenty-fourth. Pam Moore notched third place for the Owls.

Peg Petraska, Sarah Ward, Cindy Bull and Karen Befeilano also helped the Owls capture third. "All the girls ran very well," said a pleased Thomas. "I am not surprised by it (the third place finish); the way they looked in practice and worked they deserved results."

Before the Bryant meet, Thomas predicted that the Lady Owls would have a promising season.

"They should have their best season in a long while," Thomas said. "They should be very competitive."

The Owls will be on the road to Boston to compete in the UMASS/Northeastern University meet to be held at Franklin Park on Saturday.

Intramural softball, football preseason picks

By RAYMOND MACFARLAND
Equinox Correspondent

In the world of sports dynasties come and go. The same runs true in the world of Recreational Sports.

The Dingleberries, a preseason favorite in the Keene State Intramural softball league, have disbanded.

"The school finally caught up with us; we have to go to class," Steve Story was quoted as saying in a teary-eyed interview from his Owls Nest bungalow.

With the 'berries out of the picture the Kamikazes are now the lead ship on the championship voyage.

However voyage may not be as smooth as they think. Hurricane Alpha tore up the shores of the Varner-diamond Saturday in exhibition play, thus proving they will also be a power.

The Kamikazes look to be the next independent dynasty that will go down in the intramural hall of fame. Exhibition games in the intramural football league took place Sunday. Tau Kappa Epsilon, L.T.P. and Phi Kappa Theta appeared to be the three powerhouses. Sean Koza and "Scat Cat" Pat Dolan showed signs of the famous Flutie-to-Phelan combination. Defensive standout Sean Almy will lead L.T.P. into contention with the addition of Mike Anguin and return of Daryn Humphrey to the lineup.

Tragedy struck the Phi Mu Delta camp during the weekend as all-conference tailback Brandon Ball was lost for the season with a broken jaw. Ball will be replaced by Mexican exchange student Pedro Lopez.

The women's softball league also took part in exhibition play Sunday with Sigma Rho Upsilon and Eta Gamma Chi competing. However, Tau Phi Xi could be a big surprise with a turnout of some 20-plus sisters.

The men's softball league opens Tuesday with Phi Mu Delta squaring off against Sigma Lambda Chi. Both men's and women's flag football leagues open up Sunday.

Female harassed last week on Bruder Street

By LAUREN A. BORSA
Equinox Editor

A 19-year-old female Keene State College student was harassed on Bruder Street last Wednesday. The woman, whose name is being withheld to protect her identity, did not suffer any physical harm during the incident.

The woman said she was walking home alone on Bruder Street, located near Wyman Way, when at approximately 10:30 p.m. a man riding a bike started circling around her.

"Hi. You look really nice tonight. I'm going to come get you," the man called as he rode his bike, said the woman. The woman said she reached her Wyman Way home with the man still following behind. At that point, the woman said she realized she did not have a key to open her door.

"I was starting to panic," she said. "The guy was threatening to accost me." Eventually someone did open the door.

The woman described the harasser as having dirty-blond hair and deep-set eyes.

As to why she did not scream or cry for help, the woman said she felt it was ridiculous to let the harasser bother her. At the time, she said, it was "no big deal."

"Everyone gets harassed once in a while," she said. "I really didn't think it was going to be a big deal." "I've been in big cities before—I just blew it off," she said.

On the Sunday following the incident, the woman said she was still nervous.

"I'm nervous. I'm very nervous...like, when my roommate was away this weekend I didn't stay in my room," she said. "After this I always make sure I'm with someone...but you can't be protected all the time," she said.

As of Tuesday, information about the harasser and events surrounding the incident were still unclear.

Students question fees at Center

By CHARLES ORLANDO
Equinox Reporter

A petition, containing a resolution supporting equal payment by both athletes and non-athletes for use of the Fitness Center, is now being circulated on campus.

The resolution, created by Brett Nolte, chairperson of the Student Assembly, and Eric Wilson, president of the student body, indicates that everyone—both athletes and non-athletes—should pay an equal fee for a membership to the Center.

"Every student has to pay a mandatory fee (which comes out of tuition) that supports the whole athletic program. Therefore, the Fitness Center fee should be the same for everyone," said Wilson.

"We found out that they (the Fitness Center) are still admitting varsity athletes while non-athletes are held on the waiting list," said Jay O'Leary, treasurer of the Assembly. "Plenty of students have openly expressed their disappointment over the current fee rates," said Wilson. Now, varsity students pay $20 a semester while non-varsity students pay $30.

Wilson said a Fitness Center advisory committee will soon be established. Members of the committee will probably include one athlete and two other students representing other interests, Wilson said. Wilson said it is too late to take action this semester. "Any change will be retroactive, possibly giving the non-athlete students a $10 credit for next semester."

Nolte, co-author of the resolution, said, "the new advisory committee will answer directly to the vice-president for student affairs, Barbara Rich."

As far as selecting the students for the committee, Nolte said, "The recommendations are currently being submitted and the appointments will be made soon."

"Something will be resolved on this fee issue by the end of this month," added Nolte.

Nolte said everyone seems to be satisfied with the facilities, but "everyone that I talked to is concerned that everyone is served equally." However, he said "everyone should be calm and patient for the time being."

Since there is such a demand on campus for membership, Nolte said "expansion (of the Center) is a possibility in the future; it is already being discussed."

Fire safety enforced in greek housing, will affect rushes

By PAUL AUGERI
Equinox News Editor

Fire safety measures are now being strictly enforced in on-campus fraternity and sorority houses at Keene State; and as a result, is limiting the number of students allowed in houses during rushes, said Carole Henry, director of residential life and dining services.

A fire that occurred last April in Carle Hall, and the City's eviction last spring of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity from its house prompted the new enforcement, said Henry.

"The safety issues have nothing to do with rushing or the Greek community," said Henry. "This is an issue for all students, and I wish they would focus on the safety issue."

With the rushing season upon the campus, the subject of overcrowdedness is the pivotal factor in holding a rush at a house. Henry said she wants the safest environment possible for these events. "The Greek community has grown enormously (in recent years)," said Henry, "and the College has to catch up with that. We have to look at buildings that will hold events safely."

Sigma Rho Upsilon Sorority President Kara Levans, said a rush held other than at fraternity or sorority houses can paint a false picture to prospective members.

"The key point to a rush is to become familiar with the atmosphere, with the sisters and surroundings," said Levans. "If we held a rush in a classroom it wouldn't be the same."

Levens termed the enforcing of fire safety measures "a lack of communication" between the administration and presidents of all fraternities and sororities.
