Next year's calendar to include interim

By Judi Redden
Equinox Staff

The 1975-76 Keene State College calendar will include time for an interim session in January because of action taken by the College Senate in March.

The college calendar, which is traditionally designed by the Admissions and Standards Committee for Senate approval, has in the past prevented Keene State students from participating in January sessions at other colleges. The calendar that the committee proposed to the Senate this year would have resulted in the same situation.

However, an amendment moved by Associate Professor of English Lawrence Benaquist and adopted by the Senate allows for an interim term. The second semester will begin early in February, with graduation scheduled for May 30.

The January term otherwise known as a 4-1-4 program, has been the subject of debate at Keene for some time. Last fall, a study committee headed by Assistant Dean of the College Richard A. Gustafson investigated the feasibility of such a calendar for this college. Their report, which became available in February, reflected a desire for an intercession by both faculty and students whom the committee polled.

In the meantime, William S. Felton, chairman of the Admissions and Standards Committee, dispersed a survey questionnaire and reported to the Senate that the preference of students and faculty was to maintain the traditional college calendar.

Benaquist, who served on the 4-1-4 study committee as well as the Admissions and Standards Committee, said that the college would never "know whether or not we want a January term unless we give it a chance."

Student senators on the College Senate explained that most students do not understand what a 4-1-4 program is until it is explained to them. The Admissions and Standards survey, which was sent to students through the Junior senators, did not explain the calendars about which members of the college community were being polled. Andre Jalbert, chairman of the Board of Selectmen and member of the Senate, said that when he explained the 4-1-4 calendar to students, they seemed to be in favor of it. Other students and faculty as well concurred with Jalbert's view.

Because of an amendment by Associate Professor James Quirk, the new calendar will be implemented for two years so that ample time will be made available to measure the program's success.

Students to decide on LIVE van

By Judi Redden
Equinox Staff

A motion to allocate $7000 to Operation LIVE for the purchase of an International Van will be proposed to the special meeting of the student body next week.

LIVE Director Keith V. King first approached the Board of Selectmen on March 10 with the request. At that time, he explained that LIVE had been having difficulties securing college vehicles for their weekend trips. He suggested that the Board either appropriate the money in the form of a loan, which LIVE could pay back on a pre-arranged basis, or that it be given in the form of a grant, with LIVE assuming responsibility for maintenance and student organization rentals.

At Monday night's Board meeting, a final proposal came from Andy Jalbert, chairman, to grant $7000 to LIVE, with the Operation having first priority on the van's use, and recognized student organizations second; organizations will be able to use the vehicle at maintenance and use cost, which King said would be about 15 cents per mile at current college standards. Under this proposal, LIVE would assume responsibility for the van's maintenance and use. Scheduling the vehicle would be handled by the work schedule coordinator who currently handles all college-owned vehicle use.

The proposed van is presently owned by the MacMillan Company, a construction firm in Keene. King explained that it had only been used for a special job in White River Junction, Vt., and had traveled primarily on route 91. It is only two years old and has roughly 50,000 miles on it.

Andy Jalbert said that although the motion that will be put before the student body Monday involves a grant for the amount in full, the students have the right to amend that motion in any way they wish. LIVE could be granted half the cost, and receive the other half by loan. He added that it is important that students attend this meeting, since it is from their student activities fees that this money will come.

Another motion that will be raised at the special meeting will be the appropriation of $840 so that a movie projector and screen can be purchased for use by student organizations. The current equipment in the Audio-Visual department cannot accommodate use by both academics and student organizations, and the board feels that these facilities are in sufficient demand as to warrant their purchase.

Lee L. Bird, student government treasurer said that a third motion will be raised at the special meeting, one which would involve a $2000 usage of student monies for the upcoming Spring Weekend.

Number of applicants increases 6 percent

Applications to Keene State College have increased 6 percent over last year. Applications are up in all categories: 6 percent for in-state freshmen, 6 percent for out-of-state freshmen, 24 percent for in-state transfers, and 7 percent for out-of-state transfers.

Director of Admissions John J. Cunningham called the statistics "extremely encouraging in light of present economic realities. Parents and students are much more carefully assessing whether they can afford a college education."

A concerted effort has been made to increase the number of visits to New Hampshire high schools, he said.

"Every high school in the state has been visited at least once, some major schools more than once, by a member of the admissions staff accompanied by a current undergraduate. Keene State in cooperation with the University System has also sponsored an admissions workshop for high school counselors. A college day program for prospective Keene students was also held. In addition the New Hampshire College and University Council has invited selected out-of-state guidance counselors to visit members of the New Hampshire University System."

Cunningham also said that Keene's increase can be attributed to "the development of new programs that are responsive to the public interest, as well as the extremely appealing environment and geography."

COPE committee presents KSC Earth Day

Earth Day, a program of lectures, panel discussions and exhibits on energy and conservation, is planned for Wednesday, April 9th in the Mabel Brown Room of the Student Union at the Keene State College campus.

The program, to be presented by KSC's COPE Committee (Conservations in Operations, Plant and Energy), will involve speakers from an architectural research firm, a college energy planning agency, Shell Oil Company, and from Total Environmental Action in Harrisville, which is also acting as program coordinator.

John Eberhard, President of the American Institute of Architecture Research Corporation, will talk on energy resources for the future at 2 p.m. Eberhard has been involved in designing solar houses and attempting to make them both energy conserving and cost competitive with conventional heating systems.

Also on the program will be Basil Kimball of the Clark University Energy Conservation Program. He will speak on "College and University Planning for Energy Conservation" at 6 p.m.

In conjunction with Earth Day, ROCKS (Recycling on Campus at Keene State College) is sponsoring an elementary school poster and project contest and a recycling contest on campus. Each floor of each resident unit is competing for the greatest quantity of recyclable bottles and paper contributed to ROCKS. Weigh-in is April 9.

The final event of Wednesday's program will be a panel discussion to include Mr. Kimball, Douglas Coonley, Total Environmental Action consultant, and several other speakers on the program.

On display at the conference will be architectural models of solar homes as well as a working solar collector.

The program is free and is open to the public.

Register

Preregistration for part-time students and early registration and advisement for full-time students for fall semester will be from April 1 through April 10.

Anyone desiring to take courses part-time will be able to register from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. on April 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th in the registrar's office on the ground floor of Hale Building.

Full-time and graduate students must register on specific days according to an alphabetized class schedule available at the registrar's office.

Also available at the registrar's office, the student union, and in the dormitories are the schedule of courses offered for fall semester. Keene State will be offering almost 400 courses in 25 majors areas of study—subjects will range from printmaking to paleontology.

Dean of Continuing Education Joseph Stewart said that "students who preregister will have a wider choice of both courses

Pianist to perform here

Michael Thomopoulos, a pianist from the New England Conservatory of music in Boston, will be performing works in concert on Saturday, April 5th, at 8 p.m. in the Brown Room of the student union. The program will include works by Schoenberg, Beethoven, Rachmaninoff, and Debussy.

Thomopoulos has received numerous awards and scholarships including a fellowship to Tanglewood in 1973 and first prize in the Pi Kappa Lambda competition in 1973.

At the age of 13 Thomopoulos, who has been compared to Arthur Rubinstein, was a soloist with the Boston Pops Orchestra. He also performed as a guest soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops in 1972. This fall he will be starting graduate work at the Juilliard School of Music.

The Keene State concert will be free with a KSC I.D. General admission is $1.

2nd 1975 jazz concert

The KSC Jazz Ensemble will present its second on-campus concert of the year on Wednesday, April 2nd at 8 P.M. in the Brown Room of the Student Union.

Since its December on-campus concert, performed to a standing-room only audience, the 20-member group has completed a 3-State, 10 concert tour and will perform in Winsted, Connecticut this weekend.

In addition to performing concerts at various high schools throughout the region, the group has also been active in providing clinic/workshops in conjunction with some of the concerts.

The Ensemble specializes in "big band" jazz and jazz and jazz-rock of various eras with emphasis on the contemporary.

For Wednesday's program, a number of new selections have been added to the group's repertoire, including new works featured by Stan Kenton and Maynard Ferguson and two works especially written for the KSC Ensemble.

The concert is open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Get to know your SBP candidates

By this time, you have all seen posters around campus that urge you to vote for one of the five student body president candidates next Thursday.

This year's candidates are a highly diverse group of students, each with specific strengths and experiences, and special issues about which they are interested. Some of you may know all of them; others, a few, and still others, none at all.

So that you'll know these people when you go to the polls next week, we have compiled some information on each candidate. If you have any questions, you are encouraged to contact them.

Rene Bergeron is a 20-year-old sophomore from Sunapee, and a major in mathematics. He belongs to Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity (TKE), and lives at Belknap House, where he can be reached at 352-9636.

While he was in high school, Bergeron was president of his senior class and a representative to his school's council. He worked extensively with the School Committee on issues related to students such as programming academic and extracurricular activities, and the revision of various school policies.

He has recently been elected to the Board of Selectmen and is currently serving on the Admissions Advisory and Scholastic Standards Committee. Last fall, he served for a time on the Committee to Study a 4-1-4 Program.

Bergeron said he is very enthusiastic about the prospect of becoming Keene's student body president, saying "I want to get involved...I feel that I can help the students and the college."

He explained that one of the issues he would like to deal with is improving communications between the students and their government, and added that this could be achieved by placing a weekly column in the Equinox that would report the activities of the board and the student body president. Closer involvement between the radio and the board could also help, he said.

He also indicated that he was very concerned about faculty evaluations, specifically ensuring the students feedback from the results, the acquisition of a fine arts building and the expansion of the library. Policies such as drop/add, drinking and parietais and other housing policies interest Bergeron, as well as increasing conservation efforts at the college and resolving the yearbook issue.

Bergeron said he feels strongly about getting as many students as possible involved in student government, through committee work and other projects which the Board of Selectmen might undertake.

Bernie McLaughlin is also 20, and a sophomore. He is an undeclared liberal arts major who lives at the Owl's Nest One, and can be reached by phone at 352-9603.

Although he has not undertaken extensive involvements at Keene so far, McLaughlin says he wants "to help the school and the students, and to help the student government reach the students."

In high school, McLaughlin was a representative to the student council and was very involved in the Catholic Youth Organization. He added that he had contributed to other activities in an unofficial capacity, and said he had enjoyed the work.

McLaughlin expressed concern over social and education issues. He feels that students should take a more active interest in arranging their own social activities, and asserted the importance of determining students' desires and needs as a requisite to the proper functioning of the student government. This, he added, could be done by either frequently surveying the student body or using the Equinox and WKNH more often to inform the students of the activities underway at the college.

He added that he is excited about the presidency, and said he knows "a wide variety of students, and I know the mood of the student body"—an aspect of the office which he feels is of crucial importance.

"I know what needs to be done...experience isn't as necessary as knowing the students," he said.

By knowing the students, McLaughlin feels he can institute a closer tie between them and the board, and emphasized the need for cooperation and concerted efforts among the students, the board, and the college at-large.

John Trabucco is a Keene State junior from Peterborough. He is a declared history major with a strong background in sociology, and lives at the Owl's Nest 1 in room 202. He can be reached by phone at 352-9603, or at Bass House, where he spends a good deal of time, at 352-9895.

While Trabucco was at Con-Val High in Peterborough, he was a member of the student government during his junior year and also was a school representative to the Model Congress at American International University in Springfield, Mass.

He was recently elected to the Owl's Nest Dorm Senate.

Trabucco said he wants the presidency because he feels he can contribute to the college's progress, and said he would continue Frank Easton's efforts toward keeping the student government open and responsive.

Concerned about the inequality of females at Keene State, Trabucco said the college "is less than responsive to women on campus." He cited the fact that fights on walkways are turned off at early hours, thus endangering females out on the campus at night. He added that he would make greater attempts to appoint more women to committee work, but that he "would choose by ability, and not by sex."

Trabucco expressed concern over the lack of student activities at Keene, and said that the Social Activities Council, for example, could be doing more to make the college "less of a suitcase school."

He also discussed the parietal policy at Keene, and said "it's a joke...people don't generally enforce it, and it doesn't really matter if it's changed or not...but it should be."

Trabucco added that the library should be open for longer periods of time, and that Keene is in need of academic expansion.

In the past, Trabucco has worked for political candidates. He said he canvassed

'Radio, meet Lou Dumont. Lou, this is radio'

By Eric Maloney
Equinox Staff

Once upon a time in Haverhill, Massachusetts, somebody introduced Lou Dumont to a radio.

Radio, meet Lou. Lou, meet radio.

Things have never been quite the same for either. Since that fateful day, Dumont's path has wound its way through forests of radio stations, clumps of television studios, and to his present position as director of Keene State College's Information Retrieval System. Along the journey, he has picked up over 4000 hours of old radio show tapes, a large collection of Big Band music, and a fondness for the programming of the '30's and '40's.

"I've always been a saver," Dumont said. "When I was in radio, I would save all of the programs that were syndicated. When the station was finished with a show, I'd ask for it."

One result of Dumont's interest in radio is a monthly column for a national magazine "Hobbies." The column, "Historical Tape Recordings," has been running since April, 1973. Topics have included "McGee and Molly," "Little Orphan Annie," "NBC Hollywood Studios," "Kate Smith," "Old Broadcast Microphones," and "Al Pearce and his Gang."

"I had to sell the idea," Dumont said. "I saw other columns in the magazine, like Jim Walsh's 'Historical Records,' and I knew there was an interest in radio recordings."

Dumont chooses topics he thinks will be of general interest. He also gets a lot of feedback on his column. "For instance, a guy wrote and asked me to do a column on mystery programs; so I'll do one," he said.

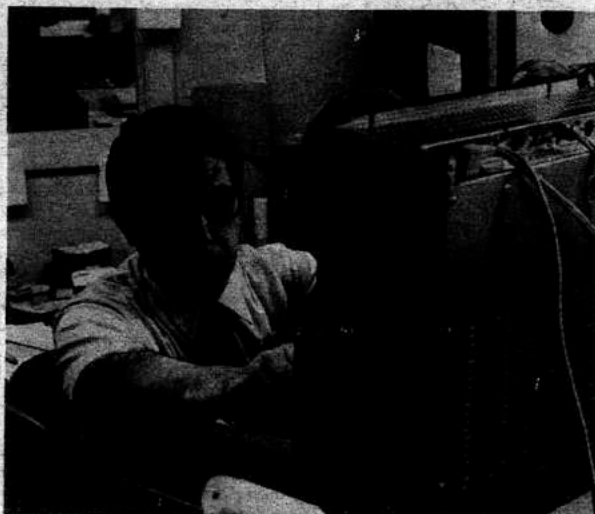

Dumont writes his columns about three months ahead and each one takes about 10 to 15 hours. The most difficult ones are those Dumont has to research from scratch.

He receives a small sum of money for his efforts, but the compensation is secondary; "I do it because I love it."

Dumont's attraction to radios began when he was seven.

"I would get up early in the morning and listen to the western music programs," he said, "and I would think 'I'd like to be in that studio.'"

By the time Dumont was in his teens, his wish was almost fulfilled. He found his way into the radio studios in nearby

Lou Dumont engrossed in his favorite activity

Lawrence, but only as an awe-struck observer.

"They must have wondered about me," he said. "I can imagine that it felt strange having this kid staring at them all of the time."

Dumont got his first break during WWII, from WHEP in Portsmouth. He had written to the station to ask for the name of a piece of classical music he had heard one day. They replied immediately and invited him to see the studios.

"That's all I needed," Dumont said. He grabbed a bus to Portsmouth, walked into the station, and asked for an audition.

"They'd lost another fellow to the service and agreed to listen to me," Dumont said. "They said I was young, but offered to pay me $12 a week and said they would try to train me."

Twelve dollars a week isn't much, especially when you consider that it was costing Dumont $18 weekly to commute from Haverhill. But Dumont enjoyed his nine months there.

"It was a fun place to work. I loved music, and it gave me a chance to learn more."

In the next 10 years, Dumont's stops included WCOP in Boston, WBEC in Pittsfield, WKBN in New Britain, Connecticut, Biddeford, Maine, and again WHEB in Portsmouth. He then switched to television, getting a job with Channel 9 in Manchester in 1954.

"I came three weeks before they went on the air and was one of the original staff members," he said.

He went to WBZ in Boston in 1960, doing First National Food Store commercials and working part-time in the TV newsroom. He eventually got a full-time job there, working as a copy writer and editor, and stayed until 1966. He then switched to WHDH for three years and in 1969 went to work for a cable television firm in Merrimack, New Hampshire.

"The firm was in the process of building the TV studios now in Parker Hall on campus. It was through that work that I learned of the IRS job," he said.

As director, Dumont is responsible for an electronic resource system unique in New Hampshire. In operation since Dumont arrived in Keene in 1971, the system consist of over 1200 audio and visual tapes that can be "called" on one of 60 retrieval units on campus.

The system is used primarily as a supplement for course studies. Tapes include lectures, music department concerts, and special programs like the oral history of Keene State College. The college also has facilities to make its own video recordings.

Despite Dumont's involvement with his job, he still has time for his hobby. He has a recording studio in his basement, where he produces, along with professor of education Dick Congdon, a weekly big band music show for KSC's WKNH radio.

"I also put together nostalgia programs in my spare time," he said. His current productions include a "Flashback" series for WKNH. The series recalls with tapes the headlines, radio shows, and music that made the '30's and '40's.

Dumont is also doing a "Radio Hall of Fame" program, recordings of the best in old radio. He has not, however, found a buyer for the idea.

"I'm trying to syndicate it, but I guess I'm not aggressive enough," he said.

Among his other projects are Fletcher Paint Works commercials, and a recent tape presentation to a group in Westmoreland. The tape was 103 minutes long, and was made up of excerpts from 57 old radio shows.

"I'll get $10 and a spaghetti dinner for it," Dumont said.

Dumont's favorite old programs are drama series, which were radio adaptations of top motion pictures, and the comedy-musical formats such as Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, and McGee and Molly.

"My collection is tiny compared to others," he said, adding that some collectors try to obtain every broadcast of every radio series. "My goal is to have one example of each series; a good representation of radio."

Dumont ardently maintains his love for Big Band music and doesn't listen to very much popular music. He cited the switch to rock and roll in the mid-fifties as one reason why he left radio.

"I did, however, listen to Jim Croce's 'Time in a Bottle' and it's every bit as good as the stuff I thought was so great in the '40's," he said.

He said that he probably doesn't know enough about music, but acknowledged that there are too many different kinds to know about all of them.

"People look for music they can enjoy," he said. "They don't want to study it."

Women in society will meet here Saturday May 10

A conference titled "Women in a Changing Society" will be hosted by KSC on Saturday, May 10th. Mary Daly, feminist theologian-philosopher and author of "Beyond God the Father: Toward a Philosophy of Women's Liberation" will be the guest lecturer.

The conference will be from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the science center. Daly, associate professor of theology and philosophy at Boston College, will speak on "Radical Feminism: The Qualitative Leap Beyond Patriarchy."

Also included in the conference will be two discussion periods with a choice of participating topics in English literature, political science, psychology, sociology, law, and anthropology.

The conference commemorates the United Nations declaration of 1975 as International Women's Year and is designed to give women of the area a chance to meet to discuss the changes women have gone and are going through.

Action groups are being invited to provide information tables.

Organized by KSC and the Women's Information Service at Keene (WISE), a peer counseling service for women, the conference is supported by a grant from the New Hampshire Council for the Humanities.

Day care will be available free of charge for children aged three to six at the Keene State College Child Development Center. Persons interested in this service should contact Eleanor Vander Haegen by May 8.

There is no fee of advanced registration necessary. Registration will be at 9:30 a.m. on the day of the conference in the foyer of the science building.

Further information can be obtained by writing: Women's Conference, Keene State College, Joslin House, Keene N.H. or by contacting either one of the conference's co-directors: Eleanor Vander Haegen (352-1909; ext. 340) or Cecile Goff (WISE-357-3335).

Career seminar may help give you direction in life

By Sue Thurston
Special to the Equinox

Is the career direction you are taking giving you satisfaction and joy? Do you ask yourself "how do I want to live my life," rather than "what am I going to be?"

These and other issues will be dealt with in a career planning seminar starting this week, conducted by Dean of Men Earnest O. Gendron and Dean of Women Ruth Keddy.

The seminar is designed in part to help people by giving them insights into themselves, Gendron said. Participants discuss problems or "hang ups" in their career or life with a group of interested people experiencing similar difficulties.

Gendron said he feels this enables a person to look at his or her interests and values objectively. Then, he said, one may deal with the broad question of self-concept and begin to ask the question, "who am I?"

"This does not compare to a sensitivity group," Gendron said. "In no way should a person become threatened or intimidated. If someone feels uncomfortable at any point, as sometimes happens, they are free to withdraw from participation for awhile."

Richard Hamilton, a KSC student who was a member of the last seminar group and who now works with the career counseling and placement office, said "Sometimes I didn't feel like talking so I just sat listening. I found that I could relate to what the others said."

He went on to say that at times when he was tired, the experience of the seminar was reviving and relaxing. It was a release for things stored up inside, he said.

Gendron said that this seminar will help direct and control a person's life. A person learns to expand by participating in ice-breaking exercises between people.

Discussions include topics such as "What do you say after help?" One learns about people, how to ask questions, and the proper setting for asking.

The discussions are geared to expand the person, "But one must share, be open and honest," said Gendron.

After several weeks, one can better assess his strengths and weaknesses. Then the individual is drawn into the world of work, and questions himself, "What is it I really want to do?"

The course also deals with alternatives to teaching.

There is some homework involved, corresponding to the nature of the seminar. People will be tested with placement skills and exposed to different occupations.

"People have new opportunities for themselves," said Gendron.

There is a fine opportunity for students to reestablish priorities to reconsider their thoughts on happiness, sadness, success and failure, he said.

The greatest pleasure is seeing the growth in people, Gendron said. "They're happy with themselves. They like what they're doing."

To know who you are is very important, to realize that you have the power and capacity to direct your own life, he said. This starts internally, he added.

"What the participants of the seminar gain or learn will last," the dean said. He went on to say that the seminars are exciting. He has thus far enjoyed the people and is anxious to get started again.

Anyone interested in joining this seminar is requested to sign up for a time that is convenient, Gendron said. Though smaller groups are desired, a maximum of fifteen will be accepted in each class, and a minimum of seven is hoped for.

Two KSC professors write for Early Years

Two Keene State College faculty members at the Wheelock Laboratory School have published an article, "Doctoring A Child's Learning," in the April issue of Early Years.

The authors are Marilyn Wenig, 24 Salisbury Road, an instructor in preprimary; and Mary Lou Brown, 27 Appleton Street, a paraprofessional.

The article focuses on how the Wheelock preprimary staff developed a personalized diagnostic and prescriptive curriculum around each child's developmental areas in order to help him or her find continued success and security with himself and within the school environment.

The preprimary class is a continuous progress program for those children who are not quite ready to cope with the pressures of a first grade setting. It gives the child a chance to develop at his or her own individual rate - physically, emotionally, and intellectually.

Brown and Wenig have also compiled an activity book, "The Busy Box," for parents of the Wheelock preprimary children to use at home.

Alumni meet at seacoast

Keene State College alumni regional groups will be teaming with two of the college's top fine arts groups to present three evenings of food, socializing, and entertainment.

At the Alumni Association's Seacoast Area meeting on April 5, the Celebrant Cabaret will perform "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris." The Cabaret is a group of performing minstrels under the direction of KSC English professor Ettore Guidotti. The meeting, at Yoken's Restaurant in Portsmouth, will begin with a social hour at 6:30 p.m., with the Cabaret performing at 7:30 p.m.

The Lakes Region Alumni will be meeting on April 12 at 7 p.m. at the New Hampshire Vocational-Tech. College in Laconia. Entertainment will be provided by the Keene State College percussion ensemble, under the leadership of Everett Beale.

The New Hampshire Vocational-Technical College in Manchester will be the site of the Manchester Area meeting on April 19. The gathering begins at 6:30 p.m., with the Celebrant Cabaret accompanying dinner at 7:30 p.m.

EDITORIALS

Pub report is way overdue

An investigation into certain allegations concerning the Pub Club was ordered by Dean of Student Affairs Thomas D. Aceto on February 6 to be completed by February 14 "if possible."

Several editorials written by Eric Maloney, Equinox managing editor, attacked not only the Pub Club, but the general atmosphere in which the Pub exists.

These editorials came to the attention of Aceto, who termed them "rather serious charges," including an "atmosphere of drunkenness," among other things.

Director of Student Activities James C.

Milani and Student Body President Frank Easton were given the responsibility to conduct the investigation into the charges.

But due to various circumstances the report has not yet been written up and submitted to Aceto.

That the report has not yet been finished is understandable. Both Milani and Easton have heavy workloads and probably have more urgent business to attend to.

But we feel, in all fairness to the Pub management and in fairness to the students who only have the benefit of the allegations against the Pub, the report should be finished and made public as soon as possible. A month and a half past the original deadline would seem to be more than enough time.

Student trustee Carter writes to students

To the Students of Keene State College:

It is my purpose, in fulfilling my duties as the Student Trustee of the University System of New Hampshire, to keep the students of the University System informed of my actions. I therefore will be submitting a report, such as this one, to the Equinox, preferably every week.

As you probably already know by now I visited the Keene State College campus on Monday, March 10. I met with Student Body President Frank Easton and members of the Board of Selectmen. I established with Frank Easton what I hope will become a good working relationship, and I hope to be communicating with him regularly.

On Monday, March 24, I visited the Plymouth State College campus. I met with outgoing Student Body President Ken Williams and the new Student Body President Patte Miller. I also spoke with members of the Plymouth State College Student Senate. Again, I hope a good working relationship can be established.

Board Meeting

At the most recent Board of Trustees meeting held at Plymouth State College on Saturday, March 15, I voted for an increase in the out-of-state tuition of $400 at UNH (for a total of $2600 per year) and $250 at KSC and PSC (for a total of $1800 per year). The vote on this question was unanimous by the Board. But I would like to take this time to explain the rationale behind my vote. I feel that my vote on this issue was in the best interests of the majority of the students in the University System (namely in-state students). This also coincides with the purpose of a state university which is to provide advantages in education to in-state students. I, of course, have no prejudice against out-of-state students. The tuition question is one which must be dealt with every year by the Board in accordance with N.H. Statutes which state that out-of-state students must pay the full cost of their education. I regret the large increase of $250, but skyrocketing costs of the past year have made this large increase necessary. As yet, I have received no word on any possible increase in the in-state tuition.

I shall be attending various committee meetings of the Board in April. I would like to point out that the Student Affairs Committee of the Board will be on the Keene State College campus during the afternoon of April 18th. The next Board meeting is at Keene on the 19th.

I would like to state, in closing, that I encourage any and all students on the KSC campus to express any concerns they may have to me either by writing to me at:

Frost Drive
Durham N.H. 03824

or by telephoning me at 868-5212.

Or you may express your concerns or ideas to Frank Easton who will then relate them to me.

Frank Carter
Student Trustee

Confusion

To the editor,

In reference to the letter that was in the Equinox last Wednesday, I am a bit confused. Granted, I did write that letter to Targum which is the Rutgers University daily newspaper, but what I don't understand is why I wasn't asked whether I wanted or minded if that letter was printed in the Equinox. It isn't that I feel differently then the letter states, but I certainly would have appreciated it if you could have asked me first. Also, just for the record, Rutgers does not have a branch called Clark, it is called Cook.

He wants a yearbook

To the editor,

I'm going to be attending Keene State next year as a freshman. At the moment I am visiting the school for a week, and I picked up the March 26 edition of the Equinox. Reading the article about the yearbook really disappointed me. I know I'm going to want a yearbook and I know there must be some people in Keene State that would contribute some of their journalistic talent into making a yearbook.

If it's at all possible do you think we can take another survey asking who wants it and who would work on it? I personally feel that a yearbook is a big part of your college years and is something to remember the school by.

Willing to help,

Men's and women's lacrosse at KSC

By Gary Fitz
Equinox Staff

The Indians called it "baggetaway" with teams ranging from 75-200 in size. Settlers who witnessed the Indian game renamed it lacrosse, because the sticks used resembled a bishop's crozier. It is one of the few major sports today whose origins are strictly North American.

In 1867, after several refinements on the Indian version, lacrosse was officially named by the British Parliament as the national sport of Canada. Now, despite some financial difficulties, Keene State will field both a men's and women's lacrosse team. Both, however will be club sports.

Mike Pascal and Jill King, KSC students introduced the sport here.

King, of Hanover, learned lacrosse while attending summer camp at Merestead's Field Hockey and Lacrosse camp in Poland Springs, Maine. A senior, she has played since her sophomore year in high school and now is on the staff at Merestead's.

"Our major problem is lack of funds and interested faculty to assist with coaching and management," she said.

In the past girls had bake sales and sold bumper stickers to raise the funds to pay referees and travel expenses. Fortunately, they can use the P.E. departments' equipment. King both plays and teaches lacrosse.

There are 25 women on the team now. Only three had played lacrosse before.

Unlike men's lacrosse, contact is not allowed, and the women wear no pads. "We get killed when we play a team that's coached by a man who is unfamiliar with the women's rules," King said.

Pascal is from Levittown, Long Island, the second biggest hotbed for lacrosse in the U.S. He started playing in high school.

Twenty men are now on KSC's unfunded fledgling team. They, too, borrow the equipment from the P.E. department.

"Mr. Ted Kehr has gone out of his way to help," Pascal said. The school doesn't have all the pads however, and the team is still looking for a place to play."

Pascal and other experienced players are teaching fundamentals to those new to the game.

Fundamentals like passing, catching, and cradling come with time, he said.

The first formal organization for men's lacrosse was the Montreal Lacrosse Club in 1856. They adapted a set of rules and changed the ball from hair sewn into a deer skin to hard rubber.

Dr. George W. Beers is recognized as the father of lacrosse. In the mid-1860's Beers, a Montreal dentist, framed a formal set of rules, with the aid of the Montreal club members.

City residents from Canada brought lacrosse to New York in 1877. The New York University and the Park Lacrosse club of Brooklyn were the first established club's in the U.S.

College lacrosse flourishes with teams at Harvard, Princeton, and NYU in 1882. All American team selections started in 1927.

In the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles, 80,000 spectators turned out for one game.

In 1963 45 college teams competed on the varsity level. Now there are 150. Three hundred high schools also now have lacrosse teams. They are most popular in congested northern high schools, for kids who like contact, but shy away from the regimentation of football. It is a chance to compete on a low keyed level, in a game of remarkable strategy and finesse.

Several schools now offer lacrosse scholarships. At John Hopkins it out draws both football and basketball. Pascal seems to think the sport could become a help in recruiting students if offered in the catalog.

John Hopkins University dominates college lacrosse like U.C.L.A. dominates basketball. School children in Baltimore rush home in the spring and break out their lacrosse sticks like other kids might break out their Louisville slippers.

John Hopkins University coach Gene Fusting once remarked that lacrosse was 85 percent mental. You don't need to be overly strong, or fast...but you must be in shape.

One might wonder if Fusting was accurate while witnessing a bone crunching, stick swinging and fist flying "box game."

Box Lacrosse made its first appearance in the 1930's, lopsided games played in sweltering arenas failed to draw crowds and the league soon folded.

The game however has a strategy that combines the techniques of basketball, ice hockey, and field lacrosse. It has basketball's outlet pass as well as the jostling for position akin to a Dave Cowans-Wes Unseld matchup. There are penalties similar to hockey, including tripping, slashing and fighting.

From the Canadian Indians, lacrosse!

Starting a lacrosse team is relatively expensive today, especially with the educational budget crunch in New Hampshire.

With America's never ending thirst for sports, lacrosse seems destined to grab it's share of the dollar in the next few years. We now have 19 major professional leagues and 155 major league teams. Where it will all end is anybody's guess.

Lacrosse would be a welcome addition to the sports scene at Keene State. It has the potential for drawing crowds, something baseball may have lost.

KSC ORIENTATION '75

Twelve to fourteen students will shortly be selected to work with faculty members and administrators for the purpose of providing incoming students and their parents with specific information about the Keene State College experience. Students selected will work with new students and assist them in identifying their goals, needs and expectations, while at the same time providing them with concrete and practical "survival information."

The Orientation '75 program will last two months - June 9 through August 8 - and will involve a two week training period, six two-day orientation sessions for incoming Freshmen and their parents, two one-day programs for transfer students, ongoing evaluation and development of the project between actual orientation sessions, and, finally, a one week evaluation and review of the program. Participants will be given an in-depth education and extensive examination of all aspects of Keene State College and will be encouraged to make their original contributions to Orientation '75 and to the College. Obviously, full-time participation will be expected.

Students in the program will be enrolled for three credits in KSC 490 - "Seminar on the Freshman Experience" and will be provided with free tuition, fees, texts, room and board, and $30.00 per week for the nine weeks of the program.

Students wishing to apply for the positions may pick up applications in the Student Activities/Student Union Office and should return the completed applications to the same office. The selection process will begin on Tuesday, April 15th, applications will still be accepted after that date but it may not be possible to give them the same consideration as those received by the 15th. Selected students will be asked to interview and the final selection will be announced by Monday, May 5th.

SPB Candidate group is diverse the Peterborough-Greenville area for McGovern, and worked for Rob Raiche and Katie Hanna.

Steve Sandler, a transfer junior from Englewood, New Jersey, lives on Emerald St. and is a special education major.

In Englewood, Sandler was a representative to his high school student council for two years.

In discussing his perceptions of Keene State, Sandler said he thinks the college is currently "culturally and economically deprived." He added that the apathy here is normal, saying "it's on every campus."

Sandler feels that the student government can function without a good deal of money and friction—that the Board should be able to "touch the students."

He cited some ideas on measures that could be taken at Keene to create an atmosphere of comfort and culture, such as a permanent coffeehouse, making room in the library and the student union where students can go to talk and be sociable, and instituting a radio hour in which tapes of theatre companies and other cultural groups could be heard.

Kathy Vincent, a 20-year-old sophomore, is a resident assistant at Huntress Hall and comes from Beverly, Mass. She recently declared a major in special education.

Vincent served as a representative to her high school council for three years and was elected in her senior year as a non-voting observer to the School Committee. She also assisted in coordinating activities and programs of an educational nature for the school by organizing and assigning committee work, as well as designing some of the programs themselves.

Press

A press conference is scheduled for this Friday afternoon at 4 p.m. in conference rooms A and B of the Student Union to meet the five student body president candidates.

Representatives from the Equinox, WKNH, WKBK, WKNE, the Keene Sentinel and the Manchester Union Leader will be present to question the candidates on their views of the office and issues relevant to Keene State students.

The conference is open to all students who wish to attend.

WERC features 'work'

The Women's Educational Resource Cooperative (WERC) is sponsoring a one-day workshop entitled "Women and Work: Alternatives to Being a Cog in the Machine" on Wednesday, April 9, in the Randall Lounge on campus.

The conference, which stresses participation by all in attendance, runs from 10 to 12 noon and is being lead by Susan Flint and Georgia Sassen of the American Friends Service Committee. The program is free of charge and open to the public.

Time to preregister

and times." With the exception of freshmen who preregister during the summer there will be no other registration for fall semester until September 2, the day before classes begin. At that time many of the courses will have already been filled.

Any questions regarding registration should be referred to either the registrar's office (352-1909, ext. 219) for full-time students of the office of continuing education (352-1909, ext. 311) for part-time students.
