Lady Owls ready to pack their bags

By Jason Cheek
Sports Editor

With just three games remaining in the regular season, the Lady Owls soccer team is almost ready to pack their bags and head to California. Although there is no guarantee of postseason play, the Owls are currently ranked fifth in the nation, and first in New England.

In the past week, the Lady Owls went 2-0 defeating University of Vermont 3-2, and Adelphi University 2-0.

In the Adelphi game, freshman Jen

Sattler led the offensive attack by scoring both goals. Last week's victories improved the Owls record to 12-3-1.

Coach Bert Poirier said he thinks it highly unlikely that the team will not be seeing any postseason play. He also said the Owls have defeated all of their "head-to-head" competition, and the three games remaining should have little effect on the ranking system. The team will now just have to wait until after Saturday's game, when the official word is due to come out.

Mens soccer team perfect, tournament hopes alive

By Jason Cheek

The Owls men's soccer team completed their week with a perfect 3-0 record by defeating St. Michaels college 4-1 in yesterday's game.

Midfielder Brian Plona started the scoring off as Nick Fiorentino assisted to make the score 1-0. Shortly after, junior Mat Paton scored his first goal this season, when the ball reached the back of the net. St. Michael's also scored in the first half, to make the score 2-1.

In the second half the scoring was reserved for the Owls leading scorer, sophomore Jim Prouty. Prouty scored his 12th and 13th goals of the season to make the final score 4-1.

Also in the week the Owls defeated both the University of New Haven, and Queens College, by matching scores of 1-0. In the two games, Plona did all the scoring for the Owls.

The Owls next game will be this Saturday at Southern Connecticut College.

Freshman Dave Gleason pushes the ball past a defender during last week's game against the University of New Haven. The Owls hopes for postseason play are still alive.

Baseball almost ready to resume

(AP)—The Oakland Athletics will travel to Phoenix for World Series workouts today and tomorrow. The American League champions, like their National League counterparts from San Francisco, have been anxiously awaiting the restart of the earthquake delayed series.

The A's decision to go to their Arizona spring training facility came after yesterday's practice at the Oakland Coliseum, which was hampered by rain. Oakland manager Tony Larussa says his club needs the time in Phoenix to prepare properly for the resumption of the series on Friday at Candlestick Park.

In other baseball news, the agent for San Diego shortstop Garry Templeton says his client has signed a guaranteed two-year contract. Reportedly, the 33-year-old infielder will receive six hundred thousand dollars per season, plus incentives. Templeton hit .255 with 40 R-B-I in 142 games in 1989.

Athletes of the week as chosen by KSC Sports Info

Brian Plona

Jen Sattler

For the women, it was too tough to limit "athlete of the week" to one player. Both Jenna Knox and Jen Sattler receive the award this week.

Knox, a mid-fielder for the Lady Owl field hockey team, doesn't have the impressive statistics to throw around, but her consistent play, and versatility makes her well deserving of the award.

Sattler, a freshman forward for women's soccer team, played an outstanding game against the sixth ranked team in Division II, Adelphi College. She scored both of the Owls goals against Adelphi college on Saturday, struggling with bruised ribs she suffered in earlier play.

Receiving men's honors is Brian Plona. Plona was responsible for all of the Owls scoring last week, an accomplishment that earns him "Athlete of the Week" honors. Plona scored once in each of the Owls two games this past week.

KSC faculty continue contract negotiations

By Amy L. Williams
News Editor

Negotiations for an acceptable contract between the Keene State College Education Association (KSCEA) and the University System of New Hampshire have been under review since the end of April and hope to be resolved on Nov. 8, according to two campus sources.

According to a Keene Sentinel article, Keene State faculty have been working without a contract and following the terms of the old contract, including pay levels, since July 1.

KSCEA, which represents approximately 170 full-time faculty, is the only faculty union in the university system, said Art Grant, secretary for USNH.

Grant said that it is already known how much money Keene State faculty will receive. However, he said it is who gets how much out of that money that is being negotiated, and is delaying the acceptance of a new contract.

According to Grant, a 5.5 percent increase occurred "across the board" which includes operating and professional staff, as well as faculty. Within this 5.5 percent, Grant indicated that 2.5 percent will be allotted to those people whose salaries are below the "market average." That is, those faculty who have salaries less than people doing the same type of work at other schools.

"The teams have reached agreement on the dollar amount," said Ann-Brit Waling, interim vice president of academic affairs at Keene State. She added, however, that they will continue to discuss how that money will be distributed to faculty until they reach an agreement.

"I hope that we can reconcile our differences on the distribution of the money so we can reach an agreement," said Waling in reference to the meeting Nov. 8 between the USNH Board of Trustees and KSCEA.

If an agreement is reached during the November meeting with KSCEA, the Board of Trustees will be able to ratify the new contract at their meeting next month, Waling said.

"Negotiations are always a process of each side putting forth a version of how they would like things to be and seeing how the other side responds," said Homer Staveland, KSCEA president and professor of psychology.

"It's a search for common ground," Staveland said in an interview yesterday. He added that "in these negotiations, almost everything is settled" with the single exception of the salary issue.

Staveland said that, aside from negotiations on salaries, the association also "unofficially" discussed such things as, modifications to faculty teaching loads, the university system's contributions to fringe benefits, increases in travel money

College faces 10 percent budget cut

By Jeffrey M. Chadburn
Executive Editor

The University System of New Hampshire, and other state agencies, may face a 10 percent recession in state-allocated funds, according to a report by the Associated Press.

Following a meeting yesterday morning, Governor Judd Gregg

"...left the impression that it is certain there will be a 10 percent cut," according to the report. Gov. Gregg was unavailable for comment yesterday.

The reason for the cut is a deficit in projected revenues for the first quarter of the fiscal year. According to the AP report, the shortfall is currently $20 million dollars and may be as much as $50 million.

Art Grant, secretary for the university system, said Gov. Gregg asked all state agencies to describe how they would cope with a five or 10 percent reduction. These reports will show how the agencies would handle a recession "so it would have the least impact on public services."

Auto accident claims student's life

Tom Chapin concert kicks off Red Balloon Series

By Tom Morgan
Staff Writer

The Red Balloon Series began its 1989/90 season with a concert featuring singer, composer, and actor Tom Chapin last Sunday. The show was primarily designed for families, rather than a strictly adult audience.

The Red Balloon Series was created this past summer in order to bring more of the Keene and Monadnock community to the college. It was designed by Tom Iovanne based on the famous French children's book, said Bill Menezes, promoter and marketing manager of the series. The Tom Chapin concert marks the first of four family-oriented shows.

Chapin took the stage in the recital hall at approximately 2 p.m., and performed for about an hour. His songs included his own version of "Happy Birthday," Guthrie's "This Land is Your Land," as well as the subtly environmental-conscious "Whale Song" and "Someone's Gonna Use It." Chapin encouraged the audience to participate throughout most of the songs, and was well received. Children screamed, sang and ran up and down the aisles, repeating everything he had sung. Although the songs featured in this performance were geared toward a younger audience, there were a great deal of adults and a handful of college students as well.

Chapin regards his music as being for everyone. "What I love about this is the family aspect; it's like the involvement of all of us. It's not like the parents come and watch their kids have a good time. This works best when we're all doing it," said Chapin.

Chapin's philosophy of his music is primarily concerned with entertainment, rather than getting a serious message across. He believes that you just cannot preach your own judgements to children. As far as his recordings go, Chapin said, "Kids records should be adult safe; these records should be listened to by families."

All of the concert songs were enjoyable. After the show, Chapin signed autographs and thanked the people who attended.

Tom Chapin was the first of four shows to be featured at the Arts Center on Brickyard Pond as part of the Red Balloon Series. Other shows will include "The Velveteen Rabbit," "Play to Win: The Story of Jackie Robinson," and "The Wizard of Oz." For more details, call 352-1909, extension 427.

Visiting filmmaker hosts workshops

By Dave Meichsner
Staff Writer

KSC was host to visiting artist Russ Johnson last week. Johnson is an independent filmmaker who currently teaches at the University of Athens in Ohio. He exhibited two of his pieces Wednesday night in the Putnam theater.

The first film is called "Widow's Weeds," a black and white piece he described as a modern "film noir." It deals with a quiet suburban neighborhood and a married couple who have a seemingly friendly, but uninvited guest who intrudes into their personal life. It is shot with an unconventional and sometimes deliberately misleading structure. The audience's perception of the three people's relationships is manipulated to a point where the audience can no longer assume anything. The film looks surprisingly good for the small budget he had to work with.

The second film he showed is called "Finke's Wings." It is a documentary that, he admitted, was started as a lark. A friend of Johnson, a visual artist named Steven Finke, decided to get a tattoo. Johnson offered to video tape it for Finke when they got to the tattoo parlor. Johnson found out that the tattoo was to be a pair of wings that would cover Finke's entire back and would take over a year to complete. He developed it into a documentary that didn't focus primarily on the tattoo, but instead on the off-beat personality of Finke. It gave interesting insights into Finke's work and into his character.

In addition to screening his films, Johnson conducted two workshops in cooperation with Carol Beck, associate professor of film studies. Beck is also a former student of Johnson. The first was on video editing, and was conducted in the Video for Filmmaker's class. The second was a black and white film workshop in Drenan Auditorium on Thursday night. At the second workshop, Russ watched student's films and offered constructive hints on how to improve their techniques.

Johnson's work has been shown at festivals across the country. He was an invited guest at the Cinema Giovani Festival International, which is conducted in Torino, Italy. His work has also been shown on PBS. He has received many grants and fellowships. Recently he received an award from the Center for New Television. In addition, he was a teacher at the University of Utah and a resident artist at the Utah Media Center.

Apple Hill Players present chamber music concert

By Tom Sidebotham
Special to the Equinox

The Apple Hill Chamber Players gave a beautiful concert in the Alumni Recital Hall last Wednesday at 8 p.m. The group, which has been artist-in-residence at Keene State since 1986, presented a program of chamber music by Schubert, Weber and Shostakovich.

The program opened with Schubert's "Fantasy" for one piano, four hands with Apple Hill pianists, Robert Merfeld and Eric Stumacher. This is a piece of music of ethereal beauty and the players performed it absolutely gorgeously, playing it slower than most musicians do. However, that did not bother this reviewer for it entitled the listener to linger over the haunting opening theme. This work is in one movement but has a tremendous amount of variation in moods and it was interesting to see how these artists conveyed each one.

With guest artist Bonnie Insull, the group played "Trio" in G minor by Carl Maria von Weber. Insull, a founding member of Apple Hill and veteran of over 250 performances with the group, returned to join her friends for a spirited and lively performance of a rarely heard work. Richard Hartshorne, double bass, substituted cello for double bass and played it sweetly and with a smooth rich flow. Eric Stumacher did very well indeed for his partners.

Stumacher continued his fine piano playing after intermission when

Smoke stack emissions caused by faulty valve

By Amy L. Williams
News Editor

According to Winford Chickerling, assistant supervisor of the heating and physical plant, the thick smoke coming from the smoke stack on campus last week was caused by a broken metering valve.

"There was too much fuel going in for the amount of air," said Chickerling.

The physical plant, which heats campus buildings and provides hot water, burns number six fuel oil according to Glen Hipple, energy conservation and use coordinator for Keene State.

In the Handbook of Air Pollution Technology, number six fuel oil is defined as "an oil for use in burners equipped with pre-heaters permitting use of high-viscosity fuel." The common name of this fuel is heavy crack fuel oil. It contains approximately 88 percent carbon, nine percent hydrogen, one percent sulfur and a small percentage of water and other elements.

Craig Wright, air pollution control engineer for the N.H. Department of Environmental Services, said Keene State operates three different boilers. These boilers burn approximately 500,000 gallons of fuel oil per year.

"Keene State is in compliance with their permits and state air regulations," said Wright in a phone interview on Monday. Wright, who was in Keene conducting an inspection last May, said that the darkness of the smoke is related to the type of boiler being used and the boiler's age.

Wright said that Keene State is allowed to be in the 20 to 40 percent opacity (darkness of smoke) range. He added that the college is not in violation of this range.

Chickerling said the valve has been repaired, and for the short duration of the problem, few harmful effects to the environment were likely to occur.

Clark receives Granite State Award

By Jennifer Themel
Staff Writer

Keene native, Robert M. Clark, Jr. received the Granite State Award from Keene State College at the Honors Convocation on Sunday, Oct. 22.

Granite State Award recipients are selected by the University System of New Hampshire Board of Trustees in recognition of outstanding achievements in their communities.

Clark is a 1943 graduate of Dartmouth College. He then studied insurance law at Boston University before entering his father's insurance company with his older brother.

Although Clark is now president of the family insurance company, he considers himself "semi-retired." Clark goes to work every day because, "I've gotta be doing something," he said.

Clark has kept busy over the years with involvement in many community organizations. This has included serving on the Keene City Council in 1966 and serving as mayor of Keene from 1970-71. He has been co-chairman of building fund drives for both Cheshire Hospital and the Keene Family YMCA. In 1975 Clark was honored by the Greater Keene Chamber of Commerce as Man of the Year.

Clark has also been a member of the Keene City Planning Board, the Keene Finance Committee, the Salvation Army, Keene Public Library, and the Keene Lions Club. He has served as the Chairman of the Board of the Cheshire National Bank and a member of the Governor's Crime Commission. In addition, Clark has received the Keene Family YMCA's

Red Triangle Award.

This award, according to the director of the Keene Family YMCA, Gene Long, has been presented to leaders "who are both active in the YMCA and throughout the community." Long said that the award was first presented to Keene State students in 1966 for their participation with handicapped children through

Mapplethorpe art donated to college

By Amy Ponti
Staff Writer

More than a year ago, a private donor gave the Thorne-Sagendorph Art Gallery at Keene State College five photo gravures by Robert Mapplethorpe, according to Maureen Ahern, director of the gallery.

Mapplethorpe, who was in his 40s, has been in the public eye since he died last spring of AIDS. During his career, Mapplethorpe photographed many celebrities and nude people in sexual situations.

Some have questioned why Mapplethorpe's works aren't being shown at the gallery. According to various sources, Senator Jesse Helms has attempted to get the National Endowment for the Arts to withdraw funding from art programs he feels are pornographic. Because Helms has mentioned the Mapplethorpe works repeatedly as being pornographic, the possibility of censorship has been mentioned.

Although Keene State has had Mapplethorpe's works for more than a year, none have been displayed.

"They are unframed in a portfolio.

The college, meaning the gallery, also has other prints which are unframed that are not shown either," said Ahern.

"They've not been shown because we're in the middle of appraising them and we haven't decided what we're going to do," she said.

"If there's something the college wishes to keep and make part of the permanent collection or not, it has nothing to do with censorship," Ahern said.

Some of Mapplethorpe's photos donated to Keene State are of the torso of a nude black male taken from behind.

Ahern added that a forum on censorship and the arts is being planned for next semester and that student attendance is encouraged.

"The gallery has very little storage space, we hesitate to take pieces and frame them because then we have to worry about protecting them, taking care of them, we have to insure that if they're displayed they're going to be in a secure area and we just don't have the capacity to do that," said Ahern.

A combination of state and local police arrested 135 people in the Plymouth area as Plymouth State College celebrated Homecoming Weekend, according to The Clock. The charges ranged from driving while under the influence to violations of the open container law. Four officers from the Keene and Durham police assisted Plymouth Police over the weekend. "We went to college communities for help because they're used to dealing with the younger element," Lt. Anthony Raymond of the Plymouth Police said.

University of New Hampshire

University of New Hampshire President Gordon Haaland has been nominated as one of three finalists for the president's position at Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania, according to The New Hampshire. Haaland has been president of UNH for five years. While he did not seek the nomination, Haaland did say, "There comes a time when a president has to give thought to leaving."

Dartmouth College

Last week Dartmouth College celebrated the opening of a $25 million addition to the Thayer School of engineering, according to The Dartmouth. The celebrations included a symposium and speeches by various college and state officials.

Three Dartmouth College freshmen were arrested in Cambridge, Mass. after rushing the field at the annual Harvard-Dartmouth game. According to The Dartmouth, the students were keeping up a tradition of rushing the field against Harvard. Approximately 20 students rushed the field.

First vs. Sixth

The sixth amendment, as defined in the U.S. Constitution, states "...the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed..." In the same breath, news can be defined as timely, unusual events that effect a large number of people. In covering news, the media sometimes infringe upon an individual's sixth amendment rights and overstep the boundaries of a fair trial.

Several examples in print media last week lend themselves to this "overstepping of boundaries."

On Wednesday, The Boston Globe wrote this headline: "Gunman Shatters Couple's Shining Life." The accompanying story detailed the tragic death of a Reading, Mass. lawyer who was seven months pregnant when a robber shot her in the head. In the story, Boston Police Superintendent Joseph V. Saia, Jr. said "We have no witnesses...we have no leads."

Despite the fact that the Boston Police had no leads, The Globe printed a story which had already convicted a "30-year-old suspect" before he was even named. One quote from the story read, "Investigators say they are convinced that the gunman...commits crime around the Mission Hill Housing Project..." And, "At the State House, state Republican Party leaders cited Stuart's death to urge reinstatement of the death penalty."

There you have it in print; the police had no leads but leaders at the state house were ready to reinstate the death penalty because of this crime. How can this man or woman, whoever he or she may be, receive a fair trial after this type of story has been consistently covered in the media? A story of this magnitude and this rareness is sure to reach every person's ears no matter how "sheltered" that person may be.

The problem of finding an unbiased jury after media coverage is particularly true in small towns and cities such as Keene. However, that will be the task before Keene Courts when they bring to trial a case that was covered in the Keene Sentinel last week.

On Oct. 26, the Keene Sentinel ran a front-page story about a former Keene reverend who allegedly sexually assaulted a parishioner. A quote from that story reads as follows, "While Keene Police say they are investigating the incident, no charges have been filed and they are releasing no details." However, with permission from a Keene judge who said "pretrial publicity does not affect an accused's right to a fair trial," the Sentinel ran a story with the reverend's name, which is sure to be remembered by all for a long time to come.

These cases are not uncommon, that is, these stories occur in all forms of media every day. In fact, according to the "standard" definitions of news, The Boston Globe and The Keene Sentinel were just doing their jobs by covering events which the public needs to know about.

Somewhere there needs to be a line drawn concerning an individual's right to a fair trial and how much information media organizations can reveal prior to the trial. If done right, the word censorship will not be an issue brought up by the media. However, if done wrong, the words "innocent before proven guilty" will be used over and over again by individuals who were not honored the basic right to an impartial trial.

Commentary by Michelle Quinn

CIA involvement should be limited

It is good that William H. Webster, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, made several comments in an interview last week, that usually would have been made behind closed doors of the House and Senate committees.

These comments concerned the CIA's request for a reverse of President Ford's executive order, made in January 1976, restricting American covert actions involving assassinations. Publicizing such comments allows concerned citizens like myself to become informed of the situation.

Webster said that the CIA needs more freedom to "support potentially violent coups." He claims that present regulations hindered the CIA from guiding Panamanian rebels to overthrow Gen. Manuel Noriega on October 3.

Webster has said that Noriega's days are numbered. If Noriega is already facing a downfall, why does he need the United States' assistance? It seems that the CIA has some underlying plans; plans that the public should be informed about.

Taking into account that Lee H. Hamilton, chairman of the House Intelligence Committee from 1984 to 1986, was never approached by the CIA concerning a change in Ford's executive order, it seems the CIA is using the situation in Panama as a lever to change executive policy.

Unfortunately, President Bush is falling for this scheme. The White House now sees the changing of the executive order as its primary concern. If Bush reverses the executive order, it will give the CIA the opportunity to abuse this privilege.

The Bush Administration has said they would like to reinterpret the order so that coups may use violence, yet avoid actual assassinations against leaders. Does the administration think that foreign political groups are going to be any happier if we merely injure their leader? Does the administration think that physically injuring a leader is going to prevent him or her from politically striking back? There is no common sense to this reasoning. The answer is to avoid any type of violence all together and to stay out of what is none of the United States' business in the first place.

The CIA was originally formed in the 1950s during the height of the Red Scare. The basic function of the CIA was to prevent the spread of communism. But today, we are slowly improving relations with the U.S.S.R. and no longer see communism as a major threat to us. We view communism and other forms of government as alternatives.

The United States may be an exemplary country, but we do not have all the answers. We should cease meddling in other countries' affairs, and stop trying to help them form the type of government we think they should have—one that is more like ours.

The New York Times has indicated that this will be a "heated debate" between Congress and the executive branch. The debate is our opportunity to speak our minds to the leaders. We need leaders who will stand up for what the people believe, not for what the rest of the government wants to hear.

KSCEA 'losing patience' with system

As members of the campus community may know, the Keene State faculty continues to work, almost four months into the fiscal year, without a contract. After bargaining with the university system since April and after an eleven-and-a-half-hour marathon session on Saturday, October 21, there is still no settlement. Faculty members are angry that once again the system has not done what it takes to start the year cleanly.

Frustrated by the failure of system negotiators to do their homework and complete the job at the last session, some faculty members have been posting signs and wearing stickers saying "Settle."

Zeal Magazine should be considered an 'addition'

I write on behalf of Aurora, the Keene State literary journal, in response to the article in the Oct. 25 issue of The Equinox, introducing Zeal Magazine. The article was a timely response to the new publication. However, in proceeding to offer up a comparison between Aurora and Zeal, the reporter failed to seek our own input and created a division between the two publications that need not exist. So I'd like to add some comments.

My main concern is the possible impression that, because we are college-funded and because we use some discretion in publishing material, we are isolated from contributors and readers. Like any campus organization, we are student-run and student-oriented. Professor Doreski, as our adviser, helps us greatly but doesn't lead us. And if anything, our having an editorial policy is positive. Most contributors, no matter how practiced, desire some kind of editorial feedback. And most, I think, would rather be published based on the merit of their work, and not on their ability to meet a submission deadline. As a reader, I would rather see the work of these peers.

Does this make us "too regimented and tight?" I'd like to think it makes us a good publication. And there is no question that we students need such a creative outlet. In that light, having two publications that can share the campus audience rather than aspire to be the sole "voice of our class," is ideal in making that outlet bigger. With that in mind, try to look at Zeal as an addition, rather than a competing "alternative."

Demonstrators thanked for their efforts and support

We would like to thank the several hundred members of the Keene State College community—staff, students and faculty—who demonstrated their support of a woman's right to choose whether or not to continue pregnancy. We were really proud of the orderly, visible, and responsible statement of the pro-choice position made last Tuesday. While the governor chose not to enter by way of the demonstration, he can not escape noticing the message. Further, thank you to the many chamber guests, who inside the Gym in the presence of the governor, indicated their support by wearing yellow "CHOICE" stickers.

Demonstrations, such as this Tuesday evening gathering, contribute to the democratic process by clarifying issues and reminding elected officials of their constituents' wishes. Given the recent legislative decision in Pennsylvania and the failure of Congress to overturn the president's veto of funding to assure abortions for poor women who are pregnant as the result of rape or incest, we hope all of you will continue to be politically active.

Finally, to the much smaller anti-abortion group on Tuesday, we also say thank you for making your views known and for participating in the political process.

Friday at noon

(KSCEA), the faculty representatives in the bargaining process, met last Thursday to review the negotiations and express their feelings. The following statement represents the sense of that meeting.

The faculty is losing patience as a result of the delay and lack of preparation demonstrated by the University System of New Hampshire in negotiations for the 1989-91 faculty contract. Although the sense of the October 26 KSCEA meeting was that a job action is premature right now, work-to-rule would be very likely and justifiable if the contract remains unresolved after bargaining at the next scheduled meeting between the association and the system.

Most of the work is done on the 1989-91 contract. It will be a good contract. Faculty members deserve to receive its benefits sooner rather than later. Faculty members, and the rest of the college, deserve a settlement when KSCEA and system negotiators meet again on November 8.

Hunger forum to take place

On Thursday, November 9 from 12:30 to 1:30p.m., Dr. Fanny Fierro will be speaking on "Hungry and Homeless Children in Latin America." Dr. Fierro is a visiting Fulbright Scholar from Ecuador, teaching history at Keene State this semester.

Dr. Fierro's presentation is the second in a series of brown bag lunch forums which have been scheduled so the campus community may get to meet and talk with Dr. Fierro. She has chosen her topic on hunger and homelessness to encourage understanding of issues related to hunger as KSC begins the 1989 Oxfam fundraising and education campaign. All faculty, students and staff are invited to attend, Thursday, November 9 in the main classroom of the Instructional Innovation Center from 12:30 - 1:30 p.m. Hope to see you there!

Bad image of Keene State College portrayed by exchange program

I am writing this letter in response to S.I.E.E.'s letter in last week's Equinox. Though I do not mean to disparage the work of S.I.E.E. and of the exchange program of KSC, I feel that I must protest against much of what was said in the letter. I am sure that all exchange students anticipate having problems adjusting to life in a new culture and do expect that they will have to fend for themselves in many instances, but the treatment with whom I have come in contact is beyond reproach. I have been a direct witness to two of the horror stories surrounding the arrival of two different groups of exchange students.

The day before most of us arrived at KSC, two students from England arrived. No one met them at the airport. The bus dropped them off in downtown Keene and from there they had to make their own way. KSC Security acted as the greeting party. I am an R.A. so I was here to let them into their rooms. I found that they had not been told that they needed sheets and blankets! I drove them to Bradlee's where they could buy sheets so they could make their beds and get some sleep (these students, if I forgot to mention, had not slept in two days).

Another group of students was met at the bus stop by someone from campus. But this person had little more knowledge of what to do with them than the students themselves. When I met the person, as he searched to find someone to check the students into their rooms, he appeared to me to have had quite a few drinks in him (this is their first impression of Keene). He drove home with one student's luggage in his car, forgetting to bring it back to the college! Finally, at 1:30 in the morning, she had her luggage and got to sleep.

Please understand that I am not blaming anyone, and problems are to be expected, but much of what happened is too much. The lack of organization and staffing is evident. Is this the image of KSC that we want to present? Are these the memories that we want these students to take home with them? How can we improve this situation? I am concerned and want to help actively, not just complain. How about you?

Grant said the five percent cut would not result in closing any campuses or eliminating academic programs. It would, however, result in the elimination of some vacant positions which were to be filled.

Grant added that although there is not a hiring freeze for the university system, as in other state agencies, vacancies are being carefully studied to determine which positions can remain open. This will serve as a conservation measure, Grant said.

Concerning the 10 percent cut, however, Grant said, "Let's pray that never happens."

As another conservation measure, all state agencies have been asked to closely monitor new equipment purchases, supply and travel expenditures, Grant said.

These budget concerns come six months after the initial budgeting process which was marked with heated debate from various groups. The final budget provided a four percent increase in funding for higher education.

A statement issued by Keene State President Judith Sturnick said, "The president in this administration will oppose any rescissions or tuition increases."

Sturnick also said she is working closely with the university system trustees, Student Trustee Bill Lesard, and other campus groups. Sturnick indicated that once more definite information is available she will hold a campus-wide forum.

for conferences, and provisions in the contract for "faculty professional development fund," which is money granted for research.

Despite rumors circulating around campus, Staveland said that work-to-rule which means that "employees fulfill the letter of their contract exactly as much as specified in their contracts" is only an option if the university system does not settle.

However, if work-to-rule was used to apply pressure to the university system as it has been in the past, Staveland said that faculty would refrain from committee meetings, participating in the college senate, and reduce their student advising sessions after the specified amount.

"Work-to-rule is an option if the faculty were to decide that the university system wasn't going to settle...however, we don't think that the university system doesn't want to

AT&T Challenge begins today

By Michelle Quinn
Staff Writer

Today, Keene State students will join other students throughout the country in the second annual AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge.

Professor Dombrowski's financial management and investment classes and the Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM) will be taking part in the challenge, according to Linda Barkas, president of SAM.

"Originally SAM wanted to do an activity to get the members involved within themselves. Right now we don't have that much communication between the members and we wanted to get an activity together to have them interact with each other. We decided that maybe an investment program would get them to interact," said Barkas.

Students will be taking part in AT&T's "Wall Street Games," which imitates the Wall Street atmosphere without the threat of financial loss.

According to a brochure about the challenge, students are encouraged to accumulate useful stock market information from various sources during the four-month project. These sources include business journals, newspapers, and professors.

The challenge begins today when the stock market opens on Wall Street. Trade hours for the challenge will coincide with those on Wall Street, and the challenge will come to a close on February 28.

the group entered the 20th Century for the "Shostakovich Piano Quintet," Opus 57. As with the Schubert, this is the work of tremendous emotional content and it is varied. The group did it beautifully. In some places the fine movement work is very much like Bach and in some places it is very much like 20th Century Russia from whence it comes. Apple Hill is off to a fantastic start in their 1989-90 season. We should also welcome Mowry Pearson, second violinist, who returns to the area after a nine year absence. The next Apple Hill concert will be December 2, 1989 and will include music by Beethoven, Leberdahl, and Dvorak.

"I think it's going to teach students how to invest because I know people like myself really want to start investing in the stock market. But, if you're putting in actual money and you really don't know what you're doing, if you lose, you're losing actual money," commented Barkas.

Students will receive monthly updates on their personal progress, which will include a comparison with other students from the campus and in the nation.

How're you going to do it?

How would you like to see campus public safety issues addressed?

Paula Mitchell, Junior, Elem. Ed.: I feel that programs organized by the R.A.s that address the issues are a good way to make students aware and also posters that are short and easy to read. I would also feel more secure if I saw the smiling faces of security walking around campus at night.

Heather Linnemann, Freshman, Child Psychology: Public safety is an important thing we all must know about. I think occasional articles in The Equinox would be a good idea, just to remind us of all of the dangers around.

Roberto Forbes, Senior, Economics: I feel we need more security guards on campus and the escort service should be improved. It's a shame that students can't feel safe walking alone at night.

Craig Sherter, Sophomore, Management: I feel they should be addressed through articles in The Equinox or through awareness programs organized by the R.A.s.

Student with 4.0 receives President's Award

By Michelle Quinn
Staff Writer

Equinox / Marc Lutzstorf

Lori Dion, a senior with a double major in education and math plus a minor, recently received the Keene State College President's Scholar Award for the fourth time.

In addition to the award, she has been named to "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges," according to a college relations press release.

The President's Scholar Award is available only to in-state students and is the highest award available to Keene State freshmen. Recipients of the award must maintain a 3.75 cumulative grade point average for renewal of the award. Dion has a 4.0 cumulative grade point average.

"This scholarship has been a tremendous help. When I received notification before my freshman year, it was for $2,500 a year, and that was the deciding factor that pushed me to Keene State. And I'm very happy I came here," Dion said.

According to Dion, last summer the amount of the scholarship was increased to cover all costs of college instead of just $2,500.

"It's nice to be rewarded for my efforts in academics. That's helped me to push to keep my grade point average up," she said.

At Keene State, Dion is president of Kappa Delta Pi, the education honor society. Her responsibilities include overseeing committees, running general meetings, and scheduling speakers. In the past, Kappa Delta Pi has offered programs such as "Self-esteem in the Classroom."

Currently, Dion is working on a presentation for the national convocation of Kappa Delta Pi in Indianapolis. The theme of the presentation will be "Restoring Honor to the Teaching Profession," she said.

In addition to her other activities, Dion is student teaching this semester. She taught at Mt. Caesar Elementary School in Swansey Center, N.H. and is currently student teaching math to grades five through eight in Westmoreland.

Even though Dion will graduate in May, she does not intend to enter a graduate program immediately. She said she would like to get additional teaching experience so she can decide which age group she would most like to teach.

Dion has always been an active student. During her years at Pelham High School in Pelham, N.H., Dion participated in her school yearbook, student government, cheerleading, sports, and was a member of the National Honor Society.

"I always push myself until I feel I've done my best...and if my best isn't outstanding that's fine with me, as long as I try my hardest. It's the same thing we tell our students. One of our classroom rules in the second grade was doing the best you can and I think that's important for everyone," she said.

You've thought about it.

You've tried to imagine what it would be like.

You know it would be exciting. And a challenge. And quite possibly the most rewarding experience of your life...

Local company gives equipment to Keene State

By Michael McShane
Staff Writer

Schleicher & Schuell, Inc. recently donated a biosafety hood and Coulter Particle Analyzer to the science department at Keene State. The gifts are part of the company's participation in the capital campaign, "Investment in Quality, the Campaign for Keene State College."

The $62,000 biosafety hood provides a sterile environment for cultures to grow in without being contaminated, according to Kenneth Bergman, associate professor of biology. Fans and filters on the hood keep bacteria out, reducing the need to use fire for sterilization. As a result, lab safety will be increased.

In addition, Bergman said a $28,000 Coulter Particle Analyzer was donated to the department. According to Bergman, the analyzer records statistics which scientists find difficult to monitor. One such statistic the analyzer records is the number of micro-organisms and other minute parts of the sample.

The analyzer also has a device that sends out electronic signals when a particle is located. This signal varies depending on the size of the micro-organism it detects and then stores the information in its memory. The collected information is then transmitted to a terminal where it can be stored on a diskette. In addition, the device has a screen that can show a statistical graph of what was analyzed.

These machines working together can provide all the statistical information needed including the mean, standard distribution, and number of items. According to Bergman, functions such as these would be very time consuming and would require a lot of effort if done without the aid of the machines.

Bergman said "(this is) something we could never have gotten based on public funds (for equipment)."

Randy Morris, vice president of research and design at Schleicher & Schuell, said Schleicher & Schuell president, Thomas Perring, realized the need to help further public education to Keene's mutual benefit. To accomplish this, Perring decided the company should support KSC in an effort to attract better faculty and students to the college. Part of this support was to take part in the campaign drive.

Morris said, while the donation will be useful to the college, it would also benefit the company as the college could train people to use the analyzer. Morris said "things could be done now that couldn't be done before." He indicated that the donations are "positive for education."

Schleicher & Schuell, Inc. hopes that a student who uses the technology will come to the company for an internship or employment.

Morris said these gifts will be beneficial to students who may be able to use this equipment in the future at their jobs.

Gordon Leverage, dean of sciences, said students at "KSC will have the opportunity to use this state of the art research (at our) institution, which is a very special opportunity compared to students at large universities." Leverage said this will help student-faculty relations by increasing mutual efforts and cooperation.

He also said the gifts will increase the learning that goes on through outside activities. Leverage pointed out that many students learn through a mutual exchange of information with their friends and professors.

Morris said he enjoyed working with the college and the possibility of future donations is not out of the question.

Keene State President Judith Stur-

nick praised "the partnership these gifts have fostered between Schleicher & Schuell and Keene State College."

"That, a company of international status and a public college in western

New England have developed such a relationship is indicative of both a shrinking globe and an increased independence between the private sector and public education," Stur-nick said.

Plan would give drug-free students more financial aid

(CPS)—An Illinois state representative wants to give students who take drug tests a break in getting state college financial aid.

Under Republican Jerry Weller's plan, which he plans to introduce this spring, students who submit to a drug test and come up clean would get preference over an equally qualified applicant who refuses to take the test.

"If you have two candidates that are equal in every other way, the drug-free youth would be given preference," Weller said in announcing the idea in early October. "If one is far above another (in need), the program would not deny the person assistance. We already have veteran preferences and Affirmative Action programs, so there's a precedent."

Civil libertarians blasted the idea as an invasion of privacy.

"We believe it's probably unconstitutional," said Jay Miller, executive director of the Illinois branch of the American Civil Liberties Union. "I suspect it's not going to go anywhere. You can't make benefits dependent on giving up constitutional rights."

John Heneghan, Roosevelt University's student Senate president and a voting member of the school's board of trustees, said giving up one's privacy is worth it. "You should be willing to give up (privacy) if you want the benefits."

Already, students who get federal loans and grants have to sign a statement promising they don't and won't use illegal drugs. College officials, moreover, are required to have some kind of anti-drug program in place.

Sports medicine majors have hard work ahead

By Pat Lavery
Staff Writer

The life of a physical education major with an option in sports medicine is one that demands a great deal of time, dedication, perseverance, and patience. Many other majors are difficult, but the sports medicine option is different from all others at Keene State College. From the very first day, freshmen start their "training."

Freshmen hoping to be admitted to the sports medicine option have a large amount of work ahead of them. In the first semester, the student must attain a major and cumulative grade point average of at least 2.50, complete a minimum of fifty hours of clinical experience in the KSC training room, and have learned rehabilitation techniques, general taping, wrapping techniques, and certain training room procedures. In addition, the student must get two letters of recommendation. One must be from a faculty member of the physical education department, and one from the KSC training room supervisors, Dr. Sherry Bovinet and Bob Merrow.

The student must then choose which path within the option that he or she wishes to travel down. One option is the National Athletic Trainer's Association (N.A.T.A.) certification. For certification one must complete 1500 hours of work in the training room. These hours accumulate through staffing the training room and attending assigned varsity and club team practices and games. Upon graduation, the student must pass a series of tests administered by the N.A.T.A. to receive certification. Another path that could be chosen is physical therapy. In this option the student is assigned to specific patients who have been referred to the training room, usually for some rehabilitation, and must complete 800 hours in the training room.

A sports medicine student may also opt for paths of kinesiological research (the study of how muscles work), strength training, or pre-medicine/chiropractic.

In the sophomore year, usually after one of these options has been chosen, Bovinet and Merrow will make team and patient assignments. The student who has chosen N.A.T.A. certification will be assigned to one of KSC's varsity sports or the club lacrosse team as an assistant athletic trainer. The assistant works under the head trainer, and upperclassmen in the program, attending practices and games, and assists with the members of their team in injury prevention and rehabilitation.

The student who has chosen physical therapy is assigned two or three referred patients to assist in injury rehabilitation. The student leads the patient through a program usually involving some of the training room's equipment, which ranges from a stationary bike, to a computer-assisted strength testing machine. Programs could also include less complicated equipment, like a towel placed flat on the floor and bunched up with the toes to increase strength, free weights, or an incline board, used to increase ankle/calf strength.

During the junior year, the N.A.T.A. student is assigned to a team at KSC, Franklin Pierce College, or Northfield-Mount Hermon High School, as a head athletic trainer. The head trainer is directly responsible for the members of the team. Also in the junior year, the student continues to work with the patient referrals, while the pre-medicine student will begin to get some time in hospitals and sometimes operating rooms.

One aspect of the senior year is the same for sports medicine students, it's time to start job hunting. Most aspects are the same as those of the junior year, being a head athletic trainer, the referral patients and more operating room experience.

When the KSC freshmen first enter the sports medicine program, they usually don't know what they're getting themselves into. They must be ready for long study hours, and lots of on the job training.

Lady Owls qualify for nationals

By Scott McPherson
Assistant News Editor

When the season is over, the Lady Owls soccer team will have racked up quite a few frequent flyer miles. The team—just back from splitting two games in Florida—will be returning to the Sunshine State next Thursday for their second consecutive appearance in the NCAA Division II championships.

Coach Bert Poirier and the Lady Owls learned Monday morning that they received a bid for the final-four. Also in the tournament will be two familiar teams and one, not-so-familiar team.

Barry University, who last year knocked the Owls out of the tourney in the first round, will host the games at their Miami campus. A familiar opponent, Adelphi University, will represent the northeast along with the Owls. Cal. State/Dominguez Hills will represent the west.

As fate would have it, the Owls will face Cal. State/Dominguez Hills—the only team in the tourney they are not familiar with—in the opening round on Saturday, November 11.

Asked what he knows about the Lady Owls west coast opponent, Poirier responded, "I don't have the faintest idea." However, in the week that precedes the game, Poirier plans to find out as much as he can about them.

Should the Lady Owls advance past the first round, they could face either Adelphi or Barry. Either way, they will know what they're up against.

Just last week, the Lady Owls shut out Adelphi 2-0. "We know we can beat at least one of them," Poirier said. Barry University is an old friend of Keene State. In the two times the Lady Owls faced the team from Miami last season, they only managed one goal to Barry's seven.

For the Lady Owls, this year's appearance might just be the opportunity to redeem themselves. "They (the team) feel they have something to prove," Poirier said.

There will be three key players that Poirier will be looking to lead his team in Florida. Sophomores Alison Foley, Philo Robinson and senior Denise Lyons will return to the final four with some vengeance, Poirier said.

"Nothing frightens them, which frightens me," Poirier said. However, it will take a complete team effort for the Lady Owls to bring home a national championship.

It comes down to "whoever wants it the most," Poirier said. He expects the game to be hard, fast and intense.

The Lady Owls were in Florida last weekend to play Florida International College and the University of Central Florida. The team downed FIC 3-0 on two goals by Foley and another by Robinson.

On Monday, with a national bid in their possession, the Owls dropped their game against UCF, 4-0. Poirier said receiving the national bid "took the edge out of Monday afternoon's game."

With the final-four still a eleven days away, Poirier and the Lady Owls are getting ready. But the fact that they're going to Florida "hasn't sunk in yet," Poirier said.

Lady Owls place second in tournament

By Pat Laverty
Staff Writer

Last Saturday was long for the local volleyball teams. Keene State hosted a round-robin tournament that lasted more than eight hours. The Lady Owls didn't mind so much because they took second out of the five teams. The Owls posted a 3-1 record in the regular competition, in defeating Franklin Pierce, Middlebury, and Southern Connecticut, before falling to Merrimack in both the first round and in the playoffs.

"They did real well...they were really pleased with their performance," said Coach Trilby Whitcomb. "They all played well, but we a' see things that need work," Whitcomb added, "As far as teamwork and team spirit go, thinking on the court and communication, it was excellent."

The previous Saturday, Keene

made the trip up to St. Michael's College in Burlington, Vermont. Stonehill College was also in attendance to take on the Lady Owls. The first match of the day was a best two-out-of-three match against Stonehill. Unfortunately for Keene, Stonehill came out flying and took the first game by a score of 15-6. "The second game, even though we did lose, they had to work for it," said Coach Whitcomb, whose squad dropped the second game and the match, 18-16.

Keene next played host to St. Michael's College in the usual, best three-of-five games. Keene played uncharacteristically from their usual slow start by quickly taking the first two games, 15-12 and 15-10. St. Michael's then awoke and took the next two games 16-14, and 16-14. In the fifth game, Keene's proverbial "light switch" clicked off for the remainder of the game and they dropped the match by a 15-6 fifth game loss.

Men's soccer team looks for assistance

By Jason Cheek
Sports Editor

The Owls soccer team is still alive for tournament play, but its hopes depend on other teams' success, rather than its own.

In order for the Owls to compete in the conference tournament, Franklin Pierce needs to either beat or tie Sacred Heart University, and Southern Connecticut needs to do the same against Bridgeport.

Last Saturday, the Owls travelled to Southern Connecticut State University. Unfortunately the Owls played poorly, and were defeated 4-0. According to coach Ron Butcher, the Owls lacked intensity throughout the game, and never seemed to get on track. Southern Connecticut played exceptionally well, and in a word, Butcher felt that the Owls were "humiliated."

Butcher felt that as a team, the Owls underachieved this season. They were plagued by injuries all year especially to role players John Clegg, and Mark Kemohan.

Butcher is very optimistic about the future, he feels that the team is very young. Successful recruiting in the next few months will hopefully bring the Owls over the top next season.

The Owls season is not over yet, and with some luck the Owls could be playing a few postseason games.

Cross country season ends

The Lady Owls cross country team competed in the New England Women's Cross Country Championships last Saturday at the Northfield Mountain Recreation Center.

The hilly 3.1 mile course was completed the fastest by Geraldine Hendrickson from Providence College, who finished the course in a time of 17:48.

The Owls finished 20th overall, lead by Tanya Home, who finished in a time of 20:36, placing 83rd. Stacey Langworthy also ran a good race for Keene, as she crossed the finish line 102nd.

Legislation may ban alcohol ads

By Jeffrey M. Chadburn
Executive Editor

Colleges and universities around the country may lose federal aid if they do not restrict alcohol promotions on their campuses if recent legislation becomes law, according to Ellen Copen, a press secretary for senator Jesse Bingaman (R-N.M.).

The legislation, sponsored by Bingaman and senator Herbert Kohl (D-Wis.), is an amendment to the Higher Education Act of 1965. If passed it would eliminate federal funds including student aid to any institution which allowed certain types of alcohol promotions to occur.

Copen said the amendment would prohibit distribution of free alcohol, restrict promotional literature concerning events where alcohol is served, and limit sponsorship of events to corporate identification. For example, the Bud Light Invitational would have to be called the Anheuser-Busch Invitational.

This restriction could also apply to advertisements in the college's student newspaper and programs distributed at athletic events, according to Copen. If an advertisement encourages underage or excessive consumption, then it could be considered in violation of the amendment.

Copen said there is some confusion as to what would be allowed in the form of advertising. She said that as long as the activity is part of the normal operation of the tavern or pub, and does not encourage underage consumption, then it is acceptable.

On college campuses, however, concern over the passage of this amendment has caused action by administrations. According to the College Press Service, California

State University at Chico has ordered the Orion, CSUC's student newspaper, to stop running all alcohol related ads. This is expected to cost the paper $30,000 in lost revenues.

The University of North Dakota has gone so far as to forbid students from putting beer company posters in their residence hall windows, according to CPS.

Barbara Rich, vice president of student affairs, said she could not comment on the specifics of the amendment because she has not seen the legislation. However, she said she felt there has been a great improvement at Keene State in the past 18 months.

Rich said the pub has concentrated more on the programming aspect than the alcohol aspect of the organization, noting the elimination of happy hour as a positive step.

In an Equinox interview, Bill Anthony, press secretary for New Hampshire senator Gordon Humphrey, said that, although they have not yet seen the proposal, "the senator would be leaning toward opposing it."

Anthony said that what the amendment amounted to was, "the federal government trying to micro-manage the colleges."

Anthony added that if papers were not allowed to advertise alcohol, everyone—including students of legal drinking age—would not be exposed to it.

Senator Warren Rudman's office was unavailable for comment. In a related area, Rep. Chuck Douglas (R-N.H.), is introducing legislation in the House of Representatives that would tie federal aid into drug education programs in addition to the alcohol restrictions.

Outlet mall opening Saturday

By Scott McPherson
Assistant News Editor

While several proposed malls in the Keene area are facing controversy, the Keene Mill Outlet will open its doors, quietly, to the general public on Saturday, according to Bob Askey of Askey Associates, a Keene marketing firm.

Unlike the proposed Konover Mall, next to the Keene state police barracks, or the addition to Riverside (Bradlees) Plaza, Bob Boisell of the Keene Chamber of Commerce said the Keene Mill Outlet has received no negative response. He believes the new mall will actually help the downtown shopping area.

"The unofficial talk around the chamber is that the Keene Mill Outlet is definitely going to be a wonderful addition to the downtown area," he said.

Boisell said he has "no opinion" on whether the Keene Mill Outlet's success will affect the Konover mall or the addition to the Riverside plaza. "You would need a crystal ball," he said.

Boisell said the Keene Mill Outlet is a first step in linking the Colony Mill Marketplace to Main Street. "This links the Colony Mill to the Main Street (and) downtown area. The next project the chamber will tackle is to have a sidewalk put in from Main Street to the Colony Mill."

Local merchants do not consider the Keene Mill Outlet to be competition, rather a partner in the Keene business community, Boisell said. "When the water rises, all the boats float," Boisell said. He also noted that the Keene Mill Outlet is a new member of the Chamber of Commerce.

Renovation of the former Cheshire Railroad Company locomotive repair shop began in February, and will continue for several more months, according to Anita Norton, spokeswoman for Newmarket Development Corporation, the New York based company that developed the outlet mall.

The Keene Mill Outlet will include 85,000 square feet of retail space and 15,000 square feet of office space when complete. Presently, only the retail space is complete Norton said.

While full development of the mall will not be complete until spring, 23 merchants are expected to participate in a grand opening planned for 10 a.m., Saturday. According to Askey, who serves as spokesman for Keene Mill Outlet merchants, seven outlets are already open and experiencing brisk business.

"Customers evidently can't wait for the grand opening," Askey said. Norton said that while construction will continue for several months, no major delays were experienced. "Our priority was the retail space," she said.

Because the mall is actually a renovated locomotive shop, construction proved to be more difficult than a standard mall. "The only problem—if you want to classify it as a problem—was they wanted to use the original structure," Askey said. Askey believes the Keene Mill
