Florence, dearest;

Well, darling, I got my first lesson in the fine art of making hospital connex. In the morning it seems long, and to watch some of the boys who never saw a shot before attempt to do the trick sure was a sight. However I'm sure we'll all learn the trick, pretty quick -

Up to this point very little has happened. On the way out the locomotive was detached from the balance of the train, and what we thought would be a fiasco wound up in a dud; as the automatic brakes on the train stopped the train. It was strange to see the locomotive going like mad way ahead of us, and we watching it leave us behind - The rest of the way, the locomotive pushed us. Upon arriving at Camp, we were assigned numbers, had an inspection (?), and then had a high class lunch at 2 P.M. consisting of oat meal dog food and cold coffee, which left most of the help with heartburns - but no effect on my tin stomach - We had no more to do to-day but wait for chow at 4.20; dinner consisted of meat and kidney stew, soup, onion salad, cabbage, and noodles, dessert, (jello) and tea - Not too bad - Tomorrow we begin being processed, and I expect we will be kept plenty busy - Expect to go to bed about 9 P.M. and will be awakened at 5.45 A.M. - This will only give me a longer day to think about you and Jimmy, and darling, although I have as yet not being made an officer. Don't worry.

It was swell if you and mom to take my departure as you did, and thanks for making it easier for me, too. Even though I am not with you in the flesh, believe me, my sweet one, nothing can ever part us - I expect to be here at least for 5 to 9 days, and even though you can't visit here, you can write, so using the address on the envelope, let me know that all is well with my precious ones -

With all my love and devotion, and sorry that I was so out of bed last night you find me

As ever,
Hq.
